President shares views on his role as leader

(EDITOR'S NOTE: President Harry Ausprich addressed the Bloomsburg University faculty for the first time at the beginning of the fall semester. We would like to share excerpts of his address as the president's message for this issue of THE ALUMNI QUARTERLY.)

Having been welcomed so warmly myself — by so many of you on many different occasions — it gives me the very greatest pleasure to be able to return some of that warmth and to be on the giving end of the greetings. Lorraine, Sarah and Emily, and I say "thank you" for your extraordinarily warm and gracious welcome to the university and community.

AUSPRICH

There are new faces out there, some even newer than my own. To those of you new to the faculty, most of whom I met last week at the new faculty orientation and also at the picnic, let me add yet another "welcome." I only hope your spirits are as high, and your start is as pleasant, as mine.

If I sound a bit elfusive, I mean to. I truly believe there ought to be no more joyful place than a university. How many other men and women are so lucky as to be able to spend a lifetime teaching, learning, reading, inventing, creating, arguing, writing, thinking discussion, leading, and awakening others to what we have found? And yet I am at the same time painfully aware that the joy of academic life has lost some of its luster at many universities, and to some degree at this one.

I think that I — and you — know some of the reasons why. But I think that we can, together, restore some of that spirit and joy that we are blessed to have within our grasp, and lest I sound only like some academic Sybarite who might sacrifice the student and the public to the pleasure of the faculty, I reply that learning and service are, indeed, my true aim, only I know that joyful faculty make the best teachers and researchers, just as joyful students make the best learners. . .

I BELIEVE THE UNIVERSITY'S first commitment is to preserve the spirit of freedom and openness. Somewhere, in every great society, room must be made for that place in which anything may be studied and everything may be questioned — not just safe and established things but dangerous and incendiary ones, including the most vexing questions of race and war, of politics and morals, of property and national pride. In such a place there are no unexamined presuppositions and no holds barred. Professors are hired to teach and students are sent to learn with the explicit understanding that they are not required to agree with those who hired or with those who sent them. The society which nourishes such an institution displays self-confidence and devotion to truth.

But the institution which preserves such freedom exercises self-discipline. The delicate thing about freedom is that, while it requires restraints, it also requires that they are self-imposed rather than forced from without. Since civilized discourse always involves the possibility that we might be mistaken, there can be no place for arrogance or coercion or anything remotely approaching violence. Freedom abused is freedom lost. "We are most free," advises Reinhold Niehuhr, "in the discovery that we are not free."

Even within this perspective, tension usually persists between the university and its society, especially when both are dynamic. In turbulent times anxiety may mount until each feels threatened by the other. Segments of American society during the 1960s felt undermined by the universities, even as universities feared intrusion by society. Socrates drinking the hemlock, perhaps under pressure from the Athens Chamber of Commerce, is the classic example of tension producing tragedy.

TO WHAT EXTENT, then, must the public university, with its commitment to pluralism, reflect priorities of those who pay for it? Clark Kerr warns that "the ivory tower of yore is becoming a regulated public utility." Legislative committees, state budget experts, and even the courts are more involved than ever with the campus, just as faculty unions and student lobbies are more involved with public authority. The struggle is over who gets how much and why. Observing it, my fear is that perfect pluralism may produce permanent academic mediocrity. Public interest is never served by reducing the university to popular taste.

It is dangerous also to accept utilitarianism — whether in the form of social justice of vocationalism or economic progress — as the purpose of the university, unless one also takes the long view of progress. The university was not designed as the instrument of instant remedy for society's ills. It has a moral obligation to be sensitive to the culture, but it should be the culture's conscience as well as its reflection.

Ideally, then, the university has the dual responsibility of innovation and conservation. No great institution can be built running counter to public opinion; but neither can curriculum content be determined by opinion polls. If the university is made accountable directly to economic interests, it is reduced to a vocational center, by whatever name. When it forms governmental or sectarian alliances, it assumes the deficiencies and limitations of its own, but the long-range interests of society are best served by preserving the relative autonomy of the university.

The idea of pure autonomy is an illusion. Faculty are influenced not only by years of scholarly reflection, but also by what they read in national magazines and watch on the nightly television. The academic establishment, since it is composed of human beings, is influenced by intellectual fashion, as a random sampling of faculty philosophical learnings within many departments confirms. In external relationships absolute autonomy is impossible, and pure neutrality is never attainable internally. But as an institution, autonomy and neutrality define our aim.

It is against the background of some of these thoughts that I now share with you some of the more specific ideas I have about Bloomsburg University and the directions toward which I believe we should and can progress.

FIRST, I SHALL RESIST the temptation merely to manage and cope, and instead do all I can to lead as well as to administer.

Professor Reif of the group in Science and Mathematics Education at the University of California at Berkeley, wrote in a "Point of View" article for the CHRONICLE OF HIGHER EDUCATION, the following: "Leaders are persons who formulate significant, innovative ideas and translate them into actions. Are there such leaders in contemporary higher education? University or College Presidents, Chancellors, Provosts, Academic Vice Presidents, Deans, all are persons clearly in position of leadership but most of these play the roles of administrators and managers. How many of them do in fact lead?"

In a very real sense I believe leadership has become the antithesis of what many see and feel happening in our colleges or universities. In fact, someone has said that innovation, change, reform, all hallmarks of leadership, are to an institution what pigeons are to a cathedral: one moment flashing white wings against a blue sky, a motion of exquisite beauty, but in the next moment fouling sacred foundations or giving the upturned eye its ultimate humiliation.

Jacques Barzun, in his classic THE TEACHER IN AMERICA (1945), wrote: "The reason why the big world scorns the academic world is precisely this, that remembering its school days, the big world is sure that all learning is hokum and all teachers pretenders."

I think we might be pretenders because we lack the courage to lead; we lack the courage to face squarely our problems and the need to design the process to redirect our energies into more significant and realistic roles. An old testament dictum warns: "Where there is no vision, the people perish."

Above the high doors of the Nelson Gallery of Art in Kansas City are these words: "It is by the real that we exist, it is by the ideal that we live."

George B. Leonard, linguist and philosopher, rejects the apologist, takes refuge in the human condition, and accepts what typically is as what has to be. He contends that "Not to dream boldly may simply be irresponsible." These several views seem contained in the old insight that some invent reality to dignify their own limitations. . . .

YOUR PRESIDENT MUST CREATE a feeling of trust with each of the university's constituencies. As a former faculty member I am fully aware of the hopes and aspirations of faculty. You reflect great diversity, yet your president must find the themes of unity which will help realize the goals and visions of this institution. We know there will be times of disagreement and perhaps some tension. Yet in academe we can expect the spirit of collegiality to prevail in that we understand our mutual responsibilities and hold the highest respect for each other.

Second, and I believe very important, albeit general, is the obligation I feel to nurture the venturesome and the visionary in the face of static resources, which of course means diminishing resources. The problems we have regarding facilities, equipment, adequate resources for faculty development, to mention only a very few, are immense. During my interview I spoke about the need for your new president to become actively involved and to project an aggressive posture in development efforts and fundraising. This I pledge to do. . . .

Third, I hold no higher priority than the maintenance of our healthy enrollments: Not just the numbers, but the quality of our students. I will work diligently to preserve our reputation in this regard and will charge the Provost and Vice President, deans, chairs, and faculty to do everything we all can, including speedy implementation of the honors program on a university-wide basis so that our students will be challenged in ways in which this university can indeed be proud . . .

Fourth, I plan to provide help, guidance, or pressure as needed to continue the examination and study of our curriculum and instruction. I wish to remind you that the liberal arts requirement is the foundation of the educational experience for our students. This fall's freshmen turn 33 in the year 2000; normal life expectancy carries them well into the decade of the next century. Imagine the changes. Can they be equipped for the future-shock speed of change? I believe students broadly educated in the liberal arts will be best prepared to cope and conquer, come what may.

KNOWLEDGE, ONE OF LIFE'S great goals, must not be a mere means to an end. Quite often the following questions are asked: "Who needs a course in philosophy?" "Do we need more technicians?" "Why require a foreign language?" "Can we teach something we can use?" And students comprehend only by accident the intellectual tradition of which we are a part. Its scattered fragments are strewn from one end of the campus to the other.

$3 million for students

Banker's advice key to gift

A Shenandoah businessman who never graduated from high school has bequeathed $3 million for student scholarships at Bloomsburg University.

Fred G. Smith, who died July 17 at the age of 80, established the trust fund in his will.

The scholarship is the largest in the 146-year history of BU. The trust is also one of the largest dedicated to academic scholarships in the State System of Higher Education, BU President Harry Ausprich said at a press conference Aug. 27.

Established in memory of Smith's late wife, Marion, the scholarship fund is named "The Fred G. Smith Golden Rule Trust Fund." It will be administered by Union National Bank, Mt. Carmel.

The trust is currently valued at $3 million and includes a provision to increase its net worth to $5 million. The funds available for scholarships could be as much as $300,000 annually, bank officials said.

To be eligible for a scholarship, students must be residents of Ashland, Mount Carmel or Shenandoah boroughs or Mount Carmel Township. Smith's will also requires students to be from one of the following high schools: Shenandoah Area, North Schuylkill Area, Cardinal Brennan, Mount Carmel Area or Our Lady of Lourdes.

Stipulations in the will also state that recipients must be academically talented and have financial need.

High school principals will recommend students for the scholarship. An awards committee consisting of pastors from three Shenandoah area churches will then make the final decision. The churches are Our Lady of Mount Carmel, First Methodist Church in Mount Carmel and St. Mauritius Church in Ashland.

John Walker, vice president for institutional advancement, said that university officials will be working with Union National Bank to put together guidelines to be used by the awards committee.

About 150 students from the areas named in the will are currently enrolled at BU, according to Tom Cooper, dean of admissions. Last spring, about 600 students graduated from the high schools named, officials said.

University Relations Director Jessie McCoy said up to 150 scholarships will be available over a four-year period.

Ausprich said the awards committee will be able to grant full or partial scholarships based on the individual student's financial need. Bank officials hope to have the fund in place by fall 1986.

According to Union National Bank officer John J Drucis, Smith didn't have a specific institution in mind when he decided over a year ago to create the fund. Drucis, whose son attended BU, suggested the school to Smith. "He said 'That's fine'," Drucis recalled.

Smith, who lived at 12 N. Main St., Shenandoah, was the owner and manager of Nesbitt's Cut Rate Drug Stores in Shenandoah and Tamaqua. He was described by bank officials as a shrewd investor.

Smith lived in Shenandoah for the last 26 years. He was born in Mount Carmel and served in the U.S. Army during World War II. He was decorated for duty during the liberation of Paris and created the first GI soda parlors in France.

Smith was a member of the Anunciation Church, the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He was a director of the Cerebral Palsy Board in Pottsville and was responsible for the funding of a Pottsville day care center. He was also active in the Rotary Club and the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

His wife, the former Marion Morris, died in 1975. The couple had no children.

Building named in honor of Boyd Buckingham

The Bloomsburg University Council of Trustees, at their September quarterly meeting, named the campus maintenance building in honor of former BU Vice President Boyd F. Buckingham. A 1943 graduate of Bloomsburg State Teachers College, Buckingham served the university as a professor, director and vice president for 28 years.

The building, located at the east end of campus along Lightstreet Road, will now be known as the "Boyd F. Buckingham Campus Maintenance Center."

BUCKINGHAM

Buckingham joined the university faculty in 1953 as a member of the speech department. He was the school's director of public relations from 1955 to 1965, director of development from 1965 to 1970, associate vice president for development and external relations from 1970 to 1974 and vice president for administration from 1974 to his retirement in December 1981.

Between 1965 and 1974, when Buckingham served as director of development and associate vice president for development and external relations, he was involved in the greatest physical plant expansion in the history of the university. Nineteen new buildings and other projects were added to the campus during this period. Some of these buildings include the Scranton Commons, Kehr Union, Nelson Fieldhouse and Lycoming Hall.

Buckingham was a 1974 recipient of the Distinguished Service Award of the BU Alumni Association. He was also a 1980 recipient of the Distinguished Service Award of the Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

Buckingham's community contributions include being past president and former board member of the Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce, past vice president and board member of the Bloomsburg Area Industrial Development Association, past chairman and member of the Bloomsburg Town Planning Commission and initial member of the Columbia County Housing Authority.

He is a 33 degree Mason affiliated with the Scottish and York Rite Masonic bodies and served as Commander-in-Chief, Caldwell Consistory, member and past chairman of the Bloomsburg Chapter of American Red Cross, elder and trustee of the First Presbyterian Church, Bloomsburg; and member of the advisory board of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Bloomsburg.

Buckingham and his wife, the former Joanna Fice '43, reside in Bloomsburg.

Dormitory gets green light

A $3.45 million dormitory complex will be built on Bloomsburg University's upper campus near Nelson Fieldhouse to help relieve student housing problems. The plan to build the five-building, apartment-style complex was approved in October by the State System of Higher Education.

University officials said the new dormitories will help decrease crowded conditions in existing dormitories.

BU has been requesting for the past 13 years that the state build a new dormitory using funds from the capital budget. But the request for a new dorm was finally approved this year after BU officials decided to float a bond issue to pay for the structure and pay off the debt with student rental fees.

BU President Harry Ausprich said the state's General Services Administration will work with the university on hiring an architect who will study costs and formulate preliminary designs for the complex.

Ausprich said the complex will consist of five "modules" that will contain both one- and two-bedroom apartments. The modules will be built into a hill overlooking Country Club Drive and will be heated with solar energy.

Besides helping with the housing shortage, Ausprich said the new complex will also help improve education. "There are problems when students are cramped in small spaces," he said. "If we get students into spaces where they don't feel so crowded, it will improve living conditions. It's a neat idea."

Robert Parrish, vice president for administration, said the new complex will be designed to hold 300 students. He said the university's first concern will be to avoid "tripling" (putting three students in a room designed for two) students on the lower campus.

The new dormitory will offer an alternative lifestyle to living on campus in one of the existing dormitories, Parrish said. The rooms will be structured as private apartments with each apartment containing a living room, dining room and kitchen area, as well as one bathroom and one or two bedrooms.

"We're looking for the more mature student," Parrish said.

Students living in the new dormitories will still be required to adhere to campus policies. Since the dormitories will be owned by the university, alcohol will not be permitted in the apartments.

Parrish said the project has the support of town officials.

If all of the steps in the financial and planning process go smoothly, construction could begin as early as the spring of 1987, Parrish said. If construction does begin then, the apartments would be ready for occupancy by the fall of 1988, if not sooner.

AT&T computer gift worth $187,000

Bloomsburg University President Harry Ausprich announced that the university has received a $187,000 donation of computer equipment from AT&T as part of the company's University Computer Donation Program.

The equipment includes five desktop 3B2 super-microcomputers along with a variety of terminals and software. In addition, AT&T will install the equipment and provide one year of maintenance and support. AT&T's University Computer Donation Program is sponsored under the Economic Recovery Act of 1981 and is a philanthropic project to further extend support for higher education in the United States.

Michael S. Biehn, branch manager, said, "We are committed to furthering computer research on this nation's college campuses. With decreasing government participation in the funding of research and education in universities, more and more responsibility for the role has fallen upon private business." Gifts made under the Economic Recovery Act of 1981 must be used in the physical or biological sciences.

Anthony Ianiero, director of development at BU, who, along with Robert Parrish, vice president for administration, authored the university's initial proposal to AT&T, said, "With this donation, AT&T continues its history of making thoughtful and generous contributions not only to Bloomsburg, but to higher education generally. Coupled with an earlier gift to the university's College of Business, AT&T's donations to Bloomsburg University this year total $224,000. This new gift will give students direct access to state-of-the-art technology and will greatly enhance our efforts to improve educational opportunities for students interested in computing."

Universities receiving the equipment have been chosen on the basis of their developmental efforts in the computer science and engineering fields, their commitment to "campus-of-the-future" technology and their willingness to participate through the involvement of faculty, students and administration.

Faculty receive AT&T computers

AT&T has donated microcomputer equipment valued at $37,000 to Bloomsburg University. The gift was announced by AT&T branch manager Michael Biehn.

The equipment includes eight personal computers, printers and a variety of additional software and hardware. Initially, the equipment will be used primarily by BU faculty for exploring applications for student course work. Later, the new equipment will be permanently housed in the university's College of Business.

Robert I. Blumenthal, AT&T's Computer Product Information Systems Manager, who recently visited the campus for a demonstration of the equipment said, "We believe that microcomputing will play an important role in higher education in the future and that universities like Bloomsburg will be leaders and innovators in this process." He added, "It is tremendously exciting for AT&T to participate in these changes."

In receiving the gift, BU President Harry Ausprich responded, "We are delighted that AT&T has provided a significant computer equipment grant to the university. The gift will make state-of-the-art technology available to our faculty and students and also offer the latest in local area network operating systems."

Dr. John Dittrich, dean of the College of Business at BU, pointed out that there will be a great increase in the application of microcomputers in baccalaureate programs in the coming years. He added, "While microcomputers have been used extensively in very large institutions, AT&T's interest in Bloomsburg is especially gratifying. We hope other forward-thinking corporations will consider the possibility of additional applications for microcomputers at the university."

Shared Medical gives computer

For the second consecutive year, Shared Medical Systems of Malvern is giving Bloomsburg University computer equipment valued at nearly $7,000. The gift includes an IBM XT personal computer system with a graphic printer and color monitor.

Jean Kazicki, SMS employment representative, stated, "We are extremely pleased with the 43 employees who have come to SMS from Bloomsburg University. We hope this strong relationship continues in the years ahead. Knowing that the computer equipment donated last year is in such good use by the students, SMS is happy to have the opportunity to make this contribution."

BU President Harry Ausprich noted that there are enrollment increases in computer information science. Consequently, this latest type of personal computer equipment will be well utilized. "The kind of cooperation SMS has provided helps to continue our commitment to provide quality programs for our students," he commented.

BU development director Anthony Ianiero explained that SMS' continual support and the favorable response from other firms and individuals help supplement state appropriations to BU, assisting in efforts to meet additional student and faculty needs.

Student trustee named

Lynda Fedor, a junior from Wilkes-Barre, has been named student representative to Bloomsburg University's Council of Trustees. Fedor's appointment by Governor Dick Thornburgh was recently approved by the State Senate. She replaces Aaron Porter, who has graduated.

Fedor, a 1983 graduate of Coughlin High School, is majoring in elementary education with a minor in political science. After graduation, she plans a career in teaching and eventually would like to be involved in politics.

In high school, she was a member of the student government and an honor student. She was listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Fedor is a member of the BU chapter of the Pennsylvania State Education Association. She is currently a resident advisor in Lycoming Hall on campus.

Berwick Forge aids students

For the second consecutive year, the Berwick Forge & Fabricating Corp. has joined several area businesses by donating to BU's general scholarship fund.

Howard McKinnon, president of the firm, announced the renewal of the company's gift stating, "When we initiated this idea, our intention was to help draw the community of Berwick closer to our local university. We feel that this will help make more people in our community aware of the many quality programs at Bloomsburg. This is an effort to help strengthen the strong ties that already exist between the university and Berwick."

Currently, there are 217 Berwick area residents enrolled in programs at BU at both the undergraduate and graduate levels. In addition, many of the borough's residents participate in the large number of non-degree programs and mini-courses the university offers each year. Alumni office records also indicate that there are more than 500 BU alumni residing in the Berwick area.

"Our intention by donating scholarship dollars is to make an investment not only in higher education but the community as well," McKinnon added.

In conjunction with the announcement of the contribution, company officials have indicated they would once again use the university's five home football contests as a vehicle to enter the monies into the scholarship program. Following each of the games, the Berwick Forge and Fabricating "Offensive and Defensive Players of the Game" were named with the contribution entered into the scholarship fund in the names of the outstanding performers.

"The turnaround of Bloomsburg football over the past few seasons under Coach George Landis and the fact that several players from Berwick High School's great program have had a hand in that resurgence, makes our participation in this way especially appropriate," commented McKinnon.

The university's director of development, Anthony Ianiero, stated, "Bloomsburg University greatly appreciates this generous gift and all the excellent support we receive from the local area. This is just one more expression of the interest and commitment shown by area business and industry in an effort to help the university maintain its excellent reputation."

Mitrani Hall

Ten-inch bronze letters above the entrance to the 2,000-seat auditorium in Haas Center for the Arts now designate it as "Mitrani Hall," honoring philanthropists Marco and Louise Mitrani of Bloomsburg.

Below the letters is a portrait of the Mitranis and a bronze plaque recognizing them for their love of learning, their devotion to the arts and their special relationship with Bloomsburg University.

The official dedication of the hall took place prior to the start of the annual Community-University Orchestra concert on November 10.

The Francis B. Haas Center of the Arts was opened for use in 1967. The auditorium is one of the largest of its kind between State College on the west, Wilkes-Barre on the northeast, and Harrisburg on the south. It is used for classes, concerts, plays, lectures, dance and theatre, and other special events.

Since its opening, the acoustics in the auditorium have been a problem for both performers and audiences. In the fall of 1978, a committee was formed to plan and coordinate major renovations and fundraising efforts to implement recommendations of Dr. Jeri Tichey, head of the department of acoustical engineering at Penn State University.

The first stage of the renovations — an orchestra shell and an acoustical "eyebrow" reflector panel — is nearing completion. This project, as well as additional acoustical improvements currently in design, has been made possible entirely through gifts from the Mitrani Family Foundation.

The Mitranis have long been active in community affairs and have made contributions to local, regional, national and international organizations for many years. They are charter members of the Community Patrons Program and consistent supporters of the programs provided by the university's music and theatre departments.

In 1984, the Mitranis established the Marco and Louise Mitrani Scholarship Program at BU to recognize students who achieve academic excellence.

The decision to name the auditorium in honor of the Mitranis was made at the June 1985 meeting of the BU Council of Trustees. Chairperson John Dorin said the decision was based on a desire to acknowledge the Mitranis' support of the arts and their years of service to BU and the community.

Campus streets named for alumni

By DURRELL REICHLEY
Staff Writer

Some of Bloomsburg University's most distinguished graduates were honored recently by their alma mater. Five campus streets were named after them.

The BU council of trustees announced the names at their September quarterly meeting. Eda Bessie Edwards '41, a member of the ad hoc street naming committee, said the alumni honored were people who had "done a lot for the university but were sort of being forgotten."

The idea for naming the campus streets came about because of a need for identifying the streets in case of emergency, according to Robert Parrish, vice president for administration.

The streets are as follows:

OSUNA DRIVE, named for Juan Jose Osuna '06, a graduate of the Bloomsburg Literary Institute and State Normal School. He was one of a large number of Spanish-speaking students who came to Bloomsburg after the Spanish-American War. Upon returning to his native Puerto Rico, he became an active and distinguished educator. He eventually became Dean of Education at the University of Puerto Rico. He is buried in the Orangeville Cemetery, in his "beloved hills of Pennsylvania." His widow and son reside in the Washington, D.C. area.

Osuna Drive runs behind the McCormick Human Services Center, past Haas Center for the Arts, around Columbia Hall and past Old Science Hall to Penn Street.

SCHUYLER DRIVE, named for Mary Freas Schuyler '33, a graduate of Bloomsburg State Teachers College. She was the only alumna to die in the armed services during World War II

At Bloomsburg, she was a member of Kappa Delta Pi, a national honorary professional fraternity, and Gamma Theta Upsilon, a national geography fraternity

She enlisted in the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps in 1943 and achieved the rank of Technician Fifth Grade. She died in 1944 at the age of 32 in England from meningitis. She was a native of Bloomsburg.

Schuyler Drive runs from East Second Street past the University Bookstore, between Kehr Union and Luzerne Hall and ends near the carpentry shop.

LAUBACH DRIVE, named for Dr Frank C. Laubach '01, a graduate of Bloomsburg Literary Institute and State Normal School. Laubach, a native of Benton, was a world citizen A missionary to the Philippine Islands, he developed the "Each One Teach One" method of reading. This method has been used to teach billions to read.

Laubach traveled all over the world developing alphabets and preparing reading materials in languages which, until this time, had never been in written form. He is the only Bloomsburg graduate to have his likeness on a U.S. postage stamp.

He received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree posthumously from BU in 1985 and received a Distinguished Service Award from the Alumni Association.

Laubach Drive begins at East Second Street, runs past the Ben Franklin Building and Navy Hall and ends at Haas Center for the Arts.

SWISHER CIRCLE, named for Charles Clinton Swisher, who attended the Bloomsburg Literary Institute. He was an attorney in New York City and later became a land developer in California, specializing in cocoa and coffee. His writings about these crops led to a friendship with President Diaz of Mexico. However, when Swisher wrote about the conflicts between church and state in Mexico, the government there banned him from that country.

He founded the history department at George Washington University. Swisher counted Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Queen Victoria among his friends and acquaintances.

WELSH CIRCLE, named for Judson P Welsh, Class of 1876, a graduate of Bloomsburg Literary Institute and State Normal School. He was the author of one of the most widely used English textbooks in the country. He later returned to Bloomsburg as principal of the college. During his 16 years as principal, Welsh was responsible for many changes including: the purchase of Buckalew Place for use as the residence for the chief administrator, the building of Science Hall, the "new" tower on Carver Hall, and the installation of the balcony in Carver Auditorium.

Year of the Huskies

The Bloomsburg University football team captured its first Pennsylvania Conference championship November 23 with a convincing 31-9 victory over Indiana University of Pennsylvania and received its first-ever invitation to the NCAA Division II national playoffs.

The Huskies went on to win their first playoff game ever, 38-28 over Hampton (Va.) University on November 30 but lost in the semifinals to North Alabama 34-0.

Along the way, the Huskies set the record for most victories in a season by a Bloomsburg football team, finishing 12-1.

The team also won the Lambert-Meadowlands Cup, awarded every year to the top Division II team in the East. The Huskies finished the regular season ranked number three in the nation among Division II schools.

In winning the conference title and going to the national playoffs, the Huskies made one of the most amazing turnarounds in college football. In just four years, head coach George Landis turned the team around from being the conference doormat (0-10 in 1981 before Landis took over) to being one of the top four teams in the country (12-1 in 1985).

On January 9, Landis was named National Coach of the Yearby the College Football Coaches Association.

BU 31 IUP 9

Quarterback Jay Dedea threw for four touchdowns, including a school record 94-yarder to split end Joe Dowd, to lead the Huskies to victory in the "State Game" at Redman Stadium.

On their first possession of the game, Indiana drove from its own 20 to a first down at the BU 9, but had to settle for John Sandstrom's 24-yard field goal.

The Huskies, using a 25-yard pass to Dowd and fullback Calvin Robinson's 18-yard run, got to the Indiana 7. But Dedea was sacked on successive downs, moving the ball back to the 24. Holder Ken Liebel then bobbled the snap on what would have been a 41-yard field goal try.

Randy Bullock's first of four interceptions on the day gave the Huskies the ball at the IUP 16. Todd Sullivan kicked a 28-yard field goal for the Huskies to tie the score.

IUP then went ahead on a 32-yard field goal by Sandstrom with 6:19 left in the half.

Indiana got the ball again, but failed to convert on a fourth-and-one at the Husky 34. BU took over the ball at the 35 and promptly went 65 yards in nine plays for the go-ahead score.

The TD came on Dedea's 3-yard pass to tight end Kevin Grande. Sullivan's kick made the score 10-6 at halftime.

Sandstrom's 27-yard field goal early in the third quarter narrowed the gap to 10-9. But they were the last points Indiana was going to score.

BU's Tony Woods returned the ensuing kickoff 88 yards for an apparent touchdown, but an illegal use of hands penalty nullified the score.

But Bloomsburg's offense didn't fold after the call. Instead, the Huskies used a flea-flicker play to get a 45-yard touchdown pass from Dedea to Dowd. On the play, Dedea handed off to tailback Leonard Bluitt, who gave the ball to Liebel on the reverse. Just as he was being hit, Liebel managed to lateral the ball back to Dedea, who unloaded a pass down the middle to Dowd, who made the catch at the 3-yard-line and carried the ball into the end zone for the touchdown.

The Huskies followed this TD with the record-setting pass from Dedea to Dowd to make the score 24-9.

BU added an insurance touchdown in the fourth quarter when Dedea hit Grande with a 12 yard scoring pass.

The Husky defense played well all day, holding highly-touted IUP quarterback Rich Ingold in check and intercepting 5 IUP passes.

Following the victory, the Huskies were presented with the Pa. Conference championship trophy while jubilant BU fans tore down the goalposts.

BU 38 Hampton 28

Tailback Tom Martin rushed for 203 yards to help the Huskies in the rain and mud defeat Hampton in the first round of the NCAA Division II playoffs.

The visiting Pirates used their blazing speed to build a 22-17 halftime lead, but the Huskies scored 21 points in the fourth quarter for their sixth come from behind victory in their last 7 games. Jay Dedea fired touchdown passes to Dowd and Grande and Martin scored three touchdowns.

The Huskies scored 403 yards total offense of the day.

NORTH ALABAMA 34 BU 0

BU's season and winning streak both ended in Florence, Alabama.

All-American Bruce Jones of North Alabama blocked a BU punt in the first minute of the game and ignited his team to victory. UNA dominated the game enroute to their 34-0 victory.

But the Huskies' problems started before the kickoff. The charter plane that was supposed to take them to Alabama got stuck in the mud on its taxi approach to the terminal at Avoca Airport. The team, which was supposed to leave Avoca at 7 a.m., was forced to take a bus to Allentown Airport, where they finally left at 8 p.m.

The team, coaches and fans arrived in Alabama at 9:22 p.m. CST.

The team's trip back wasn't much better. Their charter plane was late arriving at the airport for the way back. Plus, on the return trip to the airport, the team bus broke down.

Once back in Pa., the team had to wait almost an hour at the Avoca airport for the team buses to finally show up to take the team home to Bloomsburg.

Other teams do well, too

The Bloomsburg University football team may have gotten many of the headlines, but other BU athletic teams enjoyed success this fall.

WOMEN'S TENNIS — The team went 8-3 and won the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) championship. The Huskies set a record at the PSAC tournament with 27 team points. It was the Huskies' second title — their last one was in 1978. Bloomsburg had five champions: Megan Clarke at #3 singles, Cortlee Gerhart at #4 singles, Karen Gubicza at #5 singles, Gerhart-Clarke at #2 doubles and Chris Tegge-Gubicza at #3 doubles.

FIELD HOCKEY — The team had another successful season, finishing with a 19-2 record. The Huskies made it as far as the Division III national semifinals, where they lost to Trenton State, 1-0. The loss marked the first time in three years that the Huskies failed to win a national championship. The Huskies' only other loss this year came in the PSAC championships. The team lost to Shippensburg 4-3, snapping the Huskies' 45-game winning streak.

The Huskies, though, spent most of the season as the number one ranked team in the nation among Division III schools. Coach Jan Hutchinson won her 100th game this season. Goalie Beth Eyer recorded twelve shutouts this year. Karen Hertzler, Donna Graupp and Carla Shearer were named to the Division III All-American team, as well as the Division I Mid-East Regional team. Hertzler, Graupp, Diane Shields and Liz Yeager were each named to the Pennsylvania Conference all-star squad.

SOCCER — This young team improved over last year, finishing with a 4-13 record. This year's roster included 10 freshmen. Jim Reilly was the team's leading scorer with five goals. He was followed by Eric Quan with four goals and two assists. Chris Albany had four goals and one assist. Goalie Dave Pinkertown had 123 saves. Albany was chosen to the PSAC Eastern Division all-conference team. Andy Gasper received an honorable mention.

WOMEN'S CROSS COUNTRY — The women runners finished the season with a 6-4-1 record. They finished eighth in the PSAC championships. Brenda Bisset placed 19th in a field of 75 at the championship meet. Ellen Deam finished 34th and Cheryl Hallman finished 38th at the meet. The eighth place finish was an improvement over last year, when the Huskies finished 10th overall.

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY — The men runners finished with a 3-7 record. They placed 12th at the PSAC championships, knocking off 51 points from last year's total. Craig Koch finished 44th at the championship meet, the highest finish for the Huskies. Other runners who did well for the Huskies this year were Chris Ludy and Dan Netting.

Dorothy (Berninger) Hippensteel '37 died on August 10, 1985. She had been ill for about a year and a half.

She was born in Mifflinville, a daughter of the late Rudolph and Stella (Emerick) Berninger.

Her husband, M. Lee Hippensteel, died in 1983. A son, James, died in 1964

She spent most of her life as an elementary school teacher in Mifflinville and Nescopeck schools, retiring in 1975. She graduated from Mifflinville High School.

She was a member of the Mifflinville United Methodist Church.

She is survived by two daughters, Betsy Hippensteel of Barrington, New Hampshire, and Mrs. Russell (Ann) Slocum of Mount Penn; a step-daughter, Mrs. Robert (Sandra) Erdman of Berwick R.D.2; a step-son, Weston Hippensteel of Berwick; and two sisters.

Harold L. Border '37 died November 26 at the Berwick Retirement Village Nursing Home. He had been ill for many years.

Born in Berwick, he was the son of the late Willard and Maude Woomer Border. He and his wife, the former Bette Dent, would have celebrated their 44th wedding anniversary on January 10.

Mr. Border was known for his involvement in athletics. He taught in the Barnsboro School District, where he coached football and led his team to a championship. He later taught in the Berwick School District and coached football.

He was an official of the PSAA (now the PIAA) and a member of the North Central Pennsylvania Chapter of PSAA football officials, where he served as president and secretary-treasurer for 16 years. Mr. Border was made honorary member of the association in 1970. He officiated for 25 years in the Susquehanna Valley Conference and also in the West Branch League.

He was instrumental in initiating the Berwick Midget League football program. Mr. Border operated the scoreboard at Crispin Field for eight years.

Mr. Border owned and operated Dent's Motor Parts in Berwick, retiring in 1974. He was also a substitute teacher in the Central Columbia, Berwick and Northwest school districts. He was an Army veteran of World War II and served in France.

We must preserve some sense of intellectual overview and order. Wisdom and virtue are essential for the constructive use of scientific data and technical skills. This university must be a place where the values and ideals, the ethics and morals, the manners and methods, the knowledge and wisdom of the ages are given meaning in today's world. Career preparation is essential, but students should learn that we are all bound together in ways that demand more of us than self-concern.

Our students should also understand the importance of social as well as intellectual growth by the design of appropriate co-curricular activities. Our programs in the cultural areas, athletics, and student organizations also help bind us together in ways that demand more of us than self-concern.

Fifth, I want to talk to you about my position on faculty development. I believe in it, I'll encourage it, and I'll support the programs you already have developed. A modest amount of university funds is being made available for faculty development again this year as an institutional priority. If we are to help you keep current in your fields and ask you on occasion to assume new responsibilities, all in an effort to keep pace with the changing quality and academic needs of our students, then the subject of faculty development cannot be understaled. . . .

Sixth, I intend to design and implement strategies for expanding the cultural resources of this university so we may enrich further the education of our students and provide cultural opportunities for the citizens in this region of the Commonwealth. . .Throughout this next year we will be exploring and defining, in concert with the academic community, activities in the visual and performing arts which will enhance our academic programs and contribute to the cultural development of the region.

Lastly, seventh, and not by any means last in priority, is governance. . . .

Based on a number of conversations, and after much thought, I've concluded that an appropriate way to address the governance issue is to declare a moratorium effective immediately on the Representative Assembly for the fall semester with the understanding that a new governance structure be defined this fall and implemented in January 1986. . . .

SOME TIME AGO I happened to read a statement by William Johnson Cory which at least to me articulates an attitude and position that best captures the intent of all that I have been saying to you this afternoon. He talks about what the role of a college should be and specifically what we as educators should create for those we teach, our students. These remarks were directed to students, but they also tell us what I believe we should strive to accomplish.

You go to a college not so much for knowledge as for arts and habits; for the habit of attention, for the art of expression, for the art of assuming at a moment's notice a new intellectual position, for the art of entering quickly into another person's thoughts, for the habit of submitting to censure and refutation, for the art of indicating assent or dissent in graduated terms, for the habit of regarding minute points of accuracy, for the art of working out what is possible in a given time for taste, for discrimination, for mental courage and mental soberness.

Faculty promoted

Ten faculty members returned for the 1985-1986 academic year at promoted ranks.

Promoted from associate to full professor were Peter H. Bohling, economics; Stewart L. Nagle, art; Robert P. Yori, accounting; and William J. Sproule, health, physical education and athletics.

Promoted to associate professor were Levi J. Gray, physics; Lynne C. Miller, biological and allied health sciences; and Anne K. Wilson, sociology and social welfare.

Promoted to assistant professor were Ronald V. DiGionomenico, academic advisement; Patricia B. Torsella, nursing; and Marilou W. Zeller, library.

Senior dies in crash

By MIKE DILLON '83
Press-Enterprise Staff

On this past Christmas Day, Bloomsburg University senior Dave Murphy was killed in an automobile accident near Allentown.

He was four months away from graduating with a degree in chemistry, but he needed no diploma as proof of his achievements as a student and a human being. Murphy left behind a legacy of service and good fellowship.

It seemed, at times, that he lived in the Kehr Union Building, where he served as a student supervisor for four years. Murphy was dedicated and did a professional job. Administrators, employees and students all respected and depended on him. Murphy also served as head of the Bloomsburg University concert committee, and was active in many of the university's union-based student service organizations.

But his contribution to the university goes beyond all that.

In 1983, a tragic fire claimed the life of Bloomsburg University student Dominick Murtin and left 10 of Merton's housemates homeless. David Murphy raised thousands of dollars to assist the Murtin family with burial expenses and to replace the possessions of the homeless. Murphy was also instrumental in setting up a fund to provide assistance to victims of catastrophes like the one that claimed Murtin's life.

Now it is the Murphy family that must pay for the burial of a son, a brother. The David Murphy Memorial Fund help the Murphy family pay burial expenses and will also provide for a David Murphy memorial scholarship fund. The details of the scholarship will be decided by the Murphy family and announced by the university at a later date.

Any donation to the memorial fund would be greatly appreciated. The first priority is helping the family with burial expenses, which are considerable. Money raised in excess of those expenses will be funnelled into the scholarship fund.

If you prefer your donation be used for only (a) burial expenses, or (b) the scholarship fund, please specify that on the memo line of your check.

Donations are tax-deductible and should be adressed to the Bloomsburg University Trust. If you have no preference about your donation being used for the either the burial fund or the scholarship fund, please write "David Murphy Memorial Fund" on the memo line of your check.

The university and the Murphy family appreciate your generosity and support.

Alumni recruit NJ students

BU alumni in New Jersey represented the university's admissions office at a record number of college night programs in the fall.

The volunteer recruiters included Mary and Angelo Albano '49, Marlene Franey '62, Diane Danzer Gill '78, Wayne Heim '69, Joyce Houser '61, John James '74, Dick Lloyd '62, Paul Manko '60, Donato Nieman '74, Anne Y. Sarrow '79, Linda L. Schmicker '76, Richard C. Stout '49, Nelson Swarts '63 and Sandra Williams '66.

They represented BU at Eustace, Cherry Hill, Bridgewater, Vernon Twp., Morris Knolls, Bridgewater-Raritan, Bernards, Linden, Carteret, Belvidere, Burlington County, Basking Ridge, Pennsauken, Atlantic City, Kearny, Nutley, Northern Valley, and Somerset.

Once again, Dick and Marion Lloyd graciously hosted the training session at their home in Belle Mead.

Basketball assistant hired

Ray Ricketts, assistant basketball coach at Springfield (Mass.) College for the past five years, has accepted a similar position at Bloomsburg University.

Ricketts, a 1974 graduate of Albright College in Reading, joined the Husky staff on Sept. 3. In addition to his basketball duties, he will serve in an academic advisement capacity for BU student-athletes.

The Pottstown native averaged 18.6 points per game during his career at Albright, finishing seventh on the school's all-time scoring list with 1,588 career points.

BU fans may remember Ricketts from the 1973-74 season when he played against the Huskies in an NCAA regional game, scoring 19 points in a 92-78 losing effort.

His main responsibility to the basketball program will be recruiting.

Carpenter was loyal supporter

C. Whitney Carpenter II, 67, former professor of language at Bloomsburg University, died December 12. He had been a resident of Bloomsburg since 1966.

Although he was not a BU graduate, he was a loyal supporter of the Alumni Association.

He was born in New York City on January 2, 1918, a son of the late George W. and Dorothy (Millen) Carpenter.

He was a professor of German language in the foreign language department at BU from 1966 to 1983.

A graduate of Culver Military Academy, he received a bachelor of arts degree from Cornell University. He also attended the University of Southern California and New York University, where he completed his master's degree and doctorate requirements.

He was a member of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Bloomsburg; the Delta Psi fraternity of St. Anthony Hall; the Torch Club of Bloomsburg; Schiarrafia Men's Club International; and was active with the Bloomsburg Boy Scouts.

He is survived by his wife of 27 years, the former Dorothy Byford; two daughters, Mrs. William (Suzanne) Manning of Danville and Mrs. Joseph (Anne) Griska of Watertown, Ct.; five granddaughters; and a brother, Edward N. Carpenter of Cedarhurst, N.Y.

Coach McLaughlin retires

Veteran Bloomsburg University men's swimming and diving coach Eli McLaughlin requested and was granted reassignment to full-time teaching duties, Athletic Director Roger Sanders announced Sept. 10. McLaughlin had been in charge of the Huskies' program since joining the university's staff in 1961 with the exception of the 1969-70 season when he was on sabbatical leave.

McLaughlin commented, "With the possibility of retirement approaching, I felt it would be in the best interest to vacate the position at this time."

Mary Gardner, current women's swimming and diving head coach, will take over the men's program.

"Eli McLaughlin has been an important part of Bloomsburg athletics for a long time and has touched and influenced many young men," Sanders said. "We are sorry to see a coach of his calibre step down but are hopeful he will make the same type of significant contributions to the university and its athletic department."

In his 23 seasons, McLaughlin produced a national champion and had nine different swimmers and one diver gain All-America status in 130 events at the NCAA Championships. He also achieved the "Master Coach" award in 1982, presented by the College Swimming Coaches Association of America.

His teams finished among the top three squads in the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) Championships on 14 occasions, and he coached 15 conference champions in 27 years. He was voted as the PSAC "Coach of the Year" by his peers in 1979 and served as host for five PSAC Championships.

As historian for the PSAC Men's Swimming and Diving Coaches Association, he compiled the "PSAC Profiles," a manual of the sport in the conference from 1959 to 1983. The publication was the result of many hours of research to preserve the records established in PSAC championship action.

In addition to his coaching responsibilities in swimming and diving, McLaughlin was an assistant football coach from 1961 to 1963, assistant baseball coach in 1964 and 1965, head baseball coach in 1967 and the director of aquatics until the fall term of 1983.

Band picnic scheduled

ATTENTION BU BAND ALUMNI: The annual picnic will be held on June 21, 1986. Please note the change of month from July to June.

Nursing professor dies

Helene R. "Tina" Robertson, 60, instructor of nursing at Bloomsburg University, died Nov. 5 after an extended illness. She lived at Bloomsburg R.D. 3.

Born in Shenandoah, she was a daughter of the late Basil and Anna Kurilla Ruscavage. She lived in Beaver Township for five years and formerly in Rowayton, Conn., and in New York City.

She was a graduate of Annunciation Catholic High School in Shenandoah, and the Bridgeport (Conn.) Hospital School of Nursing. She received her BS degree from Columbia University and her MA degree from New York University. She was employed as a nursing instructor at BU for five years and had been director of a Greenwich, Connecticut Health Association for a number of years.

She was a member of St. Cyril and Methodius Ukranian Catholic Church, Berwick. She was vice president of District 27, Pennsylvania Nurses Association, a member and past treasurer of the Columbia-Montour Mental Health Association, the Bloomsburg University Nursing Honor Society, and a member of the Bloomsburg Branch of the American Association of University Women.

Surviving are two sisters and a brother.

Alumni meet in Ohio

Five BU alumni who live in Ohio met with Tom and Lynn Davies as the latter were passing through the state in September. Tom, director of BU's Career Development Center, was on a cross-country sabatical project to visit various industries and businesses. Meeting for dinner in Amhurst were Joe and Audrey Metro of Oberlin, Fred and Marion DeBell '48 of Lakewood, and Connie Eston Wissinger '60 of Mentor.

Student alumni organize

"It's never too early to start being good alumni," says Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs.

That's the reason for organizing a Student Alumni Council on campus, under the sponsorship of the BU Alumni Association. Members of the new group will assist in planning and staging various alumni events such as Homecoming, Alumni Weekend, the annual phonathon, and the Senior Send-off Picnic.

"Through their participation in these activities, students will gain an awareness of the important role of alumni," Hippenstiel notes. "Bloomsburg University is clearly a better place because of the collective contributions of alumni throughout her long history."

Student Alumni Associations are not a new development on the nation's campuses; private colleges and universities have historically nurtured their would-be alumni from their earliest days as freshman. Public institutions have increasingly learned valuable lessons from their private counterparts.

Although all students are encouraged to participate in the new SAC, Hippenstiel especially hopes many children, grandchildren, nieces and nephews of BU alumni will be anxious to serve the university and the Alumni Association in this way.

Ray and Dorothy Zimmerman '39 participated in an Elderhostel program at BU this summer. The two are only the second BU alumni couple included in the 700 older students who have participated in the five-year program, said program coordinator George Turner.

It wasn't that old college tie that brought graduates Ray and Dorothy back to BU for an update on their college educations.

"No, we just wanted a course in Introduction to Computer Science," said Ray, a retired school administrator from the Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Maryland, district. "We're just trying to keep the world from going by."

"But being at a familiar college didn't hurt," added wife Dorothy, a former school teacher.

This summer, five Elderhostel sessions were sponsored at Bloomsburg, with 200 enrolled. Most of the students come from the New York area, said Turner. Coming back is quite a surprise, said the two retired educators.

"Well, it's a big university now. Then it was a small college," said Ray. "Now there are all kinds of groups here" using the campus for the summer, said Dorothy.

Dorothy grew up on Market Street in Bloomsburg. Her father, the late John Calvin Engelhart, was a supervisor at Magee Carpet. The couple came back here for visits until 1975, when her late sister, Beatrice, retired from the faculty.

As a student, Ray commuted from his home in Nuremberg and was president of the Day Men's Association his senior year.

This time around, the Zimmermans received their first taste of dormitory life, which suits them fine. "Of course, we were both day students so we can't compare," Dorothy said.

They have had such a good time in their classes and in afternoon trips to a coal mine and Centralia that they've vowed to enroll in more sessions.

"We just got rid of our summer cottage in Delaware, so we'll have more freedom to travel and take more of these courses," said Ray.

The two, who were members of the school's 100th anniversary class, said the campus has undergone radical changes since their graduation. Only three buildings — Carver Hall, Old Science Hall and Benjamin Franklin — were standing when they were students.

The Zimmermans have enjoyed their renewed taste of the classroom, and they gave a rating of "excellent" to all of their professors: James Sperry, William Sproule, Martin Gildea and Harold Bailey.

They may have been lured here by computers, but said they found courses in Response to the Holocaust, the American Presidency and physical fitness equally fascinating.

Dr. Mary Lou (Fenstemaker) John '45, faculty emerita, delivered the commencement address at BU on August 15 in Haas Center for the Arts.

Her topic was "Bloomsburg University Today; Tomorrow the World." Dr. John comes from a family whose ties to Bloomsburg date back to the late 1800s, when the university was a small academy. Her father, also a BU faculty emeritus, is Howard F. Fenstemaker, a 1912 graduate of Bloomsburg State Normal School.

She is the daughter of Ruth Nuss Fenstemaker, also a 1912 BSNS graduate. In addition, her grandmother, Annie Supplee Nuss, graduated from Bloomsburg in 1888.

Dr. John is also a 1964 master of arts graduate of Bucknell University and a 1978 doctor of philosophy graduate of Penn State University.

The Bloomsburg native recently retired after 26 years of service to her alma mater where she served as an instructor and later a professor of French and chairman of the Department of Languages and Cultures. Under her leadership, the department gained several new programs, including the Certificate of Language Proficiency and minors in French and Spanish.

When Dr. John wasn't directly in the classroom, she gave untiringly of her time to many efforts. She served as advisor to the French Club and the campus chapter of Phi Sigma Iota, the national foreign language society. She coordinated numerous study-tours and trips both abroad and in the United States for students studying French.

She also assisted in developing a foreign student exchange program with the University of Nancy in France and with the city of Liverpool in England. In addition, she provided an avenue for high schoolers to compete in foreign language contests during International Day at the university.

Dr. John lives at 928 Country Club Drive, Bloomsburg, Pa. 17815.

When Benjamin Duke '53 took a university teaching job in Japan in 1959, he could not have known that he would become tutor and friend to some of the most powerful men in Japanese industry.

Nor could Duke, a Berwick native, have realized that he would develop a 20-year friendship with Hanamura Hanichiro, chairman of Japanese Air Lines, whose jumbo jet crashed into a mountain in Japan earlier this year with 524 people abonrd

"I'm sure it is terrible what he is going through," Duke said of Hanamura Thursday during a visit here. "I sent him a letter of condolences and sympathy. I closed with 'gamhare,' which means 'do your best.'"

The jet crash also brought to earth the hopes Hanamura, who assumed leadership of Japanese Air Lines three years ago after a crash that killed 24 people, had for an economically strong company.

Duke, who spends a month each summer in Berwick with his wife, son and two adopted Japanese daughters, talked about Hanamura, JAL's rise from debt and its sudden, tragic crash back into financial uncertainty.

Hanamura "knows nothing about the airline industry, but he does know about business," said 54-year-old Duke. "He happens to be one of the most powerful men in Japan. . .the man behind the scenes.

"Hanamura is the secretary general of the Federation of Industries, which is much like the National Association of Manufacturers here. They look out for industry," said Duke.

"Say the government wants to raise corporate taxes. Hanamura talks to (Japanese Prime Minister) Nakasone and cuts it in half," explained Duke, illustrating Hanamura's power in the Japanese industrial society.

Hanamura, 77, is also the chairman of the board of Keidanren, an industrial club. "He is the full-time man who runs this rich, powerful organization." Duke said the club's members include representatives of 400 to 500 of Japan's top industries, "steel, oil, all the big ones"

And "he's like a grandfather to me."

Duke, a graduate of Berwick schools and Bloomsburg State College, has a doctoral degree in comparative and international education from Penn State as well as a doctorate in arts from the University of London.

He joined the faculty of the International Christian University in Tokyo in 1959 by invitation of the university. "I've been there ever since, except for the four years I spent in London."

It was then when he met Hanamura. "He wanted to set up an English seminar for businessmen at Keidanren," Duke explained. "He has been my student every Thursday for the last 20 years."

During his seminar sessions, Duke said the seven "students" — the oldest is 91 — discuss their business problems, trade and American business, "using the Time magazine business section"

Hanamura never ran a corporation before JAL. He became involved with the airline after an accident three years ago killed 24 people when "a pilot purposely dove his plane into the water at the end of the runway," said Duke. Then, the airline was "in serious debt."

"So Nakasone asked (Hanamura) to be chairman of the board to straighten things out."

Duke recalls the day Hanamura got the job. "He phoned me and jokingly said, 'Now I can fly anywhere in the world free.' "

But Duke said Hanamura's job was hardly easy. "This past winter he signed a contract with Boeing for a billion dollars; he was saying how nervous he was."

Duke noted, "One of (Hanamura's) major concerns is the trade imbalance with the United States. That's why he signed this billion-dollar contract with Boeing, to help reduce the pressure."

For 20 years Duke has been learning about Japanese industrial management from his Thursday-night students — seven of the most powerful men in Japanese industry.

And he has been learning about Japanese education from his teaching experience and those of his son, Chris, 15, and daughters Kim, 17, and Susan, 20.

Duke's experiences contributed to his recently completed book, "The Japanese School — Lessons for Industrial America," in which he explains Japanese industrial success as a product of its schools, not management. The Preager Press book explains what Duke has learned and what America can learn from the Japanese.

Sean Mullen named to Board of Governors

Sean Mullen, president of Bloomsburg University's Community Government Association, has been selected by Gov. Dick Thornburgh and the state Senate as one of three students to sit on the 16-member Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education. His term will be for the 1985-86 school year.

MULLEN

As a result of his selection, Mullen has resigned as chairman of the Board of Student Government Presidents of the 14 universities. He will concentrate his efforts on initiating his "brain child," the Alliance of Pennsylvania Student Government Associations. The new organization will have eight members, three from the state-owned universities of the SSHE and one each from the state-related universities of Penn State, Pitt, Temple, Lincoln and branch campuses for a total of five members.

Mullen, who has drafted a constitution, states the new organization will represent more students throughout the state. "If the idea is accepted, the Alliance will represent over 150,000 students," Mullen commented "One of the major objectives of such an organization is to open lines of communication between state-owned and state-related student government."

What a Homecoming!

By DURRELL REICHLEY
Staff Writer

Although the weather for the occasion left something to be desired, Bloomsburg University's 58th annual homecoming, Oct. 18-20, turned out to be one of the best-attended and most successful alumni celebrations in recent years.

The cloudy skies and occasional showers on Saturday may have made things a little wet in Bloomsburg, but it didn't dampen the spirits of the alumni. BU grads met the university's new president, Harry Ausprich; toured the new Alumni House; celebrated a spectacular victory over Millersville in the homecoming football game; and renewed old friendships with their former classmates.

THE HOMECOMING celebration began Friday night with the annual pep rally, bonfire and fireworks. At the pep rally, President Ausprich gave a rousing speech, calling for "complete, unadulterated, absolute victory" in Saturday's football game against Millersville.

Head football coach George Landis echoed Ausprich's feelings, telling the students "we're going on to be number one."

At the pep rally, Noelle Dellafave, a psychology major from Hasbrouch Heights, N.J., was named Freshman Sweetheart.

SATURDAY MORNING got off to an early start with a continental breakfast in the lobby of Carver Hall. Alumni had a chance to sign in and enjoy coffee and donuts.

Then it was on to Main Street where a crowd of several thousand people braved a light drizzle to enjoy the annual homecoming parade. The theme for this year's parade was "A Salute to Broadway." The parade featured eight bands, 11 floats, the Homecoming Sweetheart contestants and much more.

The BU marching band kicked off this year's parade. President Ausprich was the grand marshall of the parade.

Delta Pi and Theta Tau Omega won the award for best float with their tribute to the Broadway show "Cats." For their efforts, they won $250 and a rotating trophy.

As the parade made its way to campus, the rain stopped, giving way to temporarily brighter skies.

THE SCENE of the festivities then shifted to Nelson Feildhouse for the third annual Ox Roast, catered by the Hotel Magee. Approximately 400 people enjoyed this year's Ox Roast, the largest crowd yet. Proceeds from the lunch benefit the BU athletic department.

The Madrigal Singers; Pizzazz, a student vocal ensemble performing pop/jazz music; and Todd Cummings '83 entertained alumni at the Ox Roast.

Following the Ox Roast, alumni headed across the upper campus to Redman Stadium. A record crowd of 7,483 packed the stadium for a schedule-maker's "dream match-up" — the Huskies, 5-0 overall, 3-0 in the Pennsylvania Conference Eastern Division and ranked eighth in the nation among Division II schools, versus Millersville, also 5-0 and ranked 14th in the nation among Division II schools.

Walter Blair (right) was a special guest at Homecoming 1985 as friends and former football players gathered to honor the former BU teacher and coach. Shown with him are BU President Harry Ausprich and Dr. Jack Mulka '66, dean of student development at BU

DURING THE PRE-GAME ceremonies, former BU wrestling standout Ron Russo was inducted into the BU Athletic Hall of Fame by Randy May, president of the Husky Club, and President Ausprich.

In his college days at Bloomsburg, Russo won two Pennsylvania Conference titles, two Pennsylvania Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) crowns, an NAIA national championship and placed fourth in the NCAA national championships.

Russo was also a recipient of the Redman Trophy, presented to the university's outstanding senior male athlete.

He is currently the head wrestling coach at Columbia University. He has compiled an 88-69-3 coaching record and has led the Lions to three Ivy League championships.

FOLLOWING RUSSO'S induction, the teams took the field under cloudy skies for what was to be one of the most exciting homecoming games in many years. The Huskies jumped out to an early 7-0 lead when quarterback Mike Glovas hit split end Joe Dowd with a 27-yard touchdown pass.

But Millersville came back with two touchdowns of its own and went into the locker room at halftime with a 14-7 lead.

During the halftime ceremonies, Janet Yescavage, a sophomore from New Cumberland, was crowned as the 1985 Homecoming Sweetheart.

But then it was time for the Huskies to come back and play some real football. BU scored three times in the second half and held Millersville to just one field goal as the Huskies came back for a spectular 28-17 victory. Tailback Tom Martin scored two touchdowns and wide receiver Kevin Grande scored the other.

AS THE FANS filed out of Redman Stadium, a light rain began to fall. But that didn't dampen the spirits of the alumni who came to the open house ceremonies for the new Alumni House. About 250 alumni toured the building and enjoyed cookies and cider under a large tent set up in the backyard.

The Alumni House, which was purchased in April, is the new "home" of the Alumni Association. It is located on Lightstreet Road, just east of the university, and houses the working offices of the association.

The staff of the Alumni Association moved into the house in August. Renovations to the first floor of the house were completed in time for homecoming weekend.

WHILE THE ALUMNI Association was having its open house, another BU organization was having an open house of its own. The staff of WBUQ, BU's new FM radio station, held an open house for radio station alumni. WBUQ news director Karin Suttman said about 20 alumni toured the new facilities.

At the open house, the staff dedicated the station to assistant professor William Acierno, advisor to the radio station. "The ceremony recognized Acierno's dedication to the establishment of an FM radio station on the BU campus," Suttman said. "It also honors his continual support of the radio program at BU."

HOMECOMING FESTIVITIES continued in the evening with the Alumni Dinner. Over 300 people enjoyed the dinner, which was held at the Scranton Commons.

Speaking at the dinner, President Ausprich told alumni, "I feel so good, so proud, so happy. What we all experienced at the stadium today is indicative of the excellence that BU is noted for. This is a healthy, mature university that ranks second to none."

Ausprich went on to note that alumni contributions have increased tremendously over the last few years. "Five years ago, we received about $47,000 in alumni contributions," he said. "So far this year, we've received about $134,000 in alumni contributions. You have made BU what it is today. We are grateful to you."

"The new Alumni House is not just a physical structure, but it is a symbol," he said. "When somebody drives down Lightstreet Road and sees that sign, they see that you are here all the time. You are the very important link that will help us reach our goals."

FOLLOWING AUSPRICH'S opening remarks, Russo was honored for his induction into the BU Athletic Hall of Fame. "He's one of the greatest wrestlers I've ever seen," Russ Houk, Russo's former coach, said. "Now he's looked upon by other coaches as being outstanding."

But Russo gave most of the credit for his success to his coach. "Russ Houk has the ability to look inside a man and see potential in him and draw it out."

NEXT, SEVERAL former BU football players took the podium to honor their coach, Walt Blair. Players and friends of former head coach Blair joined him for a special reunion at this year's celebration.

Blair was head football coach from 1957 to 1963. During that time, he directed his teams to a 26-26-3 mark. He currently serves as director of the career development center at West Chester University.

"Walt, when we needed help, you were always there," Lou Ciocca '65 said.

Blair's players presented him with a wooden BU clock.

"It's quite an experience to have people come from miles away to say hello," Blair said. "This is what makes it all worthwhile."

Blair looked back on his life as an educator with pride. "I always say I never worked a day in my life because in education, it's always a fun day."

THERE WERE OTHERS recognized at this year's dinner, too. Alumni director Doug Hippenstiel introduced past CGA presidents who returned for this year's homecoming.

Margaret Burns, chairperson of the alumni house campaign, thanked and recognized contributors. She said that over $111,000 has been raised for the house so far.

Kelly Toole, president of the class of 1986, presented loyalty awards to alumni who have reached $5,000 and $1,000 lifetime giving plateaus.

The dinner concluded with Emory Rarig, professor of marketing and management, leading a rousing rendition of the BU alma mater.

The night concluded with an alumni dance at the Bloomsburg Moose.

Sunday featured the annual Homecoming Pops Concert.

OVER 600 ALUMNI officially registered at this year's homecoming, but Hippenstiel estimated that there were no doubt thousands of alumni, family and friends in town for the weekend.

Sigma Iota Omega and Sigma Sigma Sigma once again won the awards for most returning Greek alumni. Sigma Iota Omega had 34 returning alumni, and Sigma Sigma Sigma had 58 returning alumni. They each won a trophy for their accomplishments.

The Classes of '40, '50, '54, '60, '65, '70, '75 and '80 had an extra special homecoming as they held their class reunions this year.

Vol. 85, No. 5 | Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania | April 1986

Ceremony signals new era

Ausprich takes oath as 16th president

With family and friends watching, Bloomsburg University celebrated the inauguration of Dr. Harry Ausprich on April 5 as the 16th president.

Guest speaker was Allan W. Ostar, Washington, D.C., president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

As part of the inaugural activities, the internationally famous Fitzwilliam String Quartet presented a concert in Mitrani Hall on Friday, April 4. The concert, a special addition to the university's Artist-Lecture Series, was open to the public.

Ausprich officially took over the reins of the presidency of BU on July 15, 1985. He has stated his intent to build on the solid foundation of the 146-year-old multipurpose institution and to take it to greater heights in the fields of science, education, business, liberal arts, community service and research.

Formerly Dean of the College of Fine and Professional Arts at Kent State University in Ohio, Ausprich holds a doctorate in communications and theatre from Michigan State University. He has a master's degree in theatre and broadcasting from the University of Wisconsin and a bachelor's degree in communications and education from New York State University.

Ausprich's experience also includes positions as dean of the Faculty of Arts and Humanities at State University of New York, dean of the College of Humanities and Fine Arts at the University of Northern Iowa, chairman of the Speech Department at Indiana State University of Terre Haute, chairman of the Department of Speech and Drama at Memphis State University and instructor of Speech and Broadcasting at Iowa State University.

Ausprich has received several national awards and honors in the field of education. The Buffalo, N.Y. native has held leadership positions in numerous professional organizations and is the author of more than 20 papers and publications.

CONGRATULATIONS — President Ausprich receives congratulations from Chancellor James H. McCormick of the State System of Higher Education.

The text of President Ausprich's investiture address follows:

The installation of a President is not the celebration of a person; it is the reaffirmation of an institution. Although I speak in the interest of the university, I do not presume to speak for it.

This institution, Bloomsburg University, has a long established record of achievement which I want to chronicle briefly as I begin my remarks. In 1839 the Waller family and others opened the doors to the Bloomsburg Academy, a private secondary school. Later in 1856, the Wallers obtained a formal charter for a classical school to be called the Bloomsburg Literary Institute. Under the leadership of Henry Carver the first building on this campus was completed in 1867, and it still stands today.

In the intervening years the institution has grown, so that today it has an enrollment of 6,300, offers over 100 different programs of study; and has a physical plant that includes 33 major buildings on 173 acres. With this growth the institution has had three more name changes, the most recent to Bloomsburg University in 1983. And in three years, this university will celebrate its 150th birthday. And we are going to have one splendid party.

What has kept this university alive these past 147 years has been the dedicated leadership of the past fifteen presidents and their ability to guide it to be responsive to the changing needs of our society For example, during World War II, the institution supported the war effort through its V-5 and V-12 programs for pilots and through a cooperative program with Penn State which prepared people for defense industry jobs.

In the 1970s new curricula evolved to offset declines in the demand for teacher education: the MBA was approved, a nursing program was initiated (it was recently accredited), and the School of Extended Programs was developed. Throughout the early years and continuing on to today our university has been a partner with our community. We have never in the past, nor will we now or in the future, overlook the importance of this town, this community, to Bloomsburg University.

The record is impressive, but an institution such as ours is also responsible for its present and future endeavors. As a place of higher learning a university has special obligations and duties to its students and to society. We need to continue to address these obligations and duties today.

I would like to begin by talking about the hopes and designs I have. Then I want to summarize briefly what issues we have been addressing since I began my efforts last July 15. Finally, I will share an agenda with you:

WITH FORMER FIRST LADY — Attending the inauguration of President Ausprich was Mrs. Harvey A. Andruss Sr., whose husband was president of Bloomsburg University from 1939 to 1969.

what direction I see for this university in the months and years ahead.

What is a university all about? The response has its source in Ralph Waldo Emerson's question when he used to meet old friends whom he had not seen in a while. Emerson greeted his friends in this way — "What has become clear to you since we last met?"

A university has a special obligatinn to make things clear to the constituencies it serves: to its students, an understanding of what their education is all about; to its faculties, a sense of standards, goals that are practical and attainable; to its community, an awareness that the university is a place where learned and sensitive professionals work hard to make better the culture and

BU Foundation off to great start!

BU President Harry Ausprich recently announced the reactivation of the Bloomsburg University Foundation and appointed a new board of directors.

The foundation, established to aid the university in achieving its educational objectives through private sector support, held its first meeting on December 10. Ausprich, in naming 14 local and regional leaders to serve on the Foundation Board, said, "We can only achieve the margin of excellence we seek if we can count on strong support from our friends and those we serve."

Elected at the December meeting were Richard Benefield, vice president and managing director of the Hotel Magee, as chair; and Ms. Kathleen Hock, secretary-treasurer of G.M. Hock Construction Inc., as vice chair.

Benefield, in commenting on the foundation, said, "I am especially proud to be involved in this effort. Bloomsburg University is an outstanding resource for our region, and the Bloomsburg University Foundation provides an excellent vehicle to aid in the university's continued growth and development."

Ausprich's other appointments include: John Dorin, chairman of the Bloomsburg University Council of Trustees and senior buyer of the Williamsport plant of the GTE Corporation; J. Jan Girton, senior vice president and chief administrative officer of Columbia County Farmers National Bank; Herbert Hasson, president and chief executive officer of Milco Industries Inc.; Richard Laux, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of United Penn Bank; Mrs. Jane S. Gittler, administrator of Columbia-Montour Home Health Services Inc.; Dr. C. Stuart Edwards, dean emeritus of the university's College of Professional Studies; William Lank, retired senior vice president and director of the United Penn Bank;

Dr. James R. Lauffer, president of the Association of State College and University Faculties at Bloomsburg University; John L. McDowell III, president of McDowell Oil Service Inc.; Carl J. Nurick, area vice president of AT&T Information Systems; Louise Mitrani, local philanthropist and community leader; Joseph Nespoli, a former member of the university's Council of Trustees and owner of Nespoli Jewelers in Berwick.

Ausprich, BU Vice President for Institutional Advancement John Walker and Director of Development Anthony Ianiero serve as ex-officio members of the Foundation Board. Ianiero also serves as the foundation's executive director and secretary, while David Hill, the university's comptroller of community activities, serves as the board's treasurer.

FIRST BANK GIFT — Columbia County Farmers National Bank became the first Bloomsburg area business to join the new President's Club with a $10,000 gift to the Bloomsburg University Foundation. Participating in the presentation were (from left) Jan Girton, senior vice president of the bank, Richard Benefield, president of the BU Foundation; Dr. Harry Ausprich, president of the university; Paul Reichart, CCFNB president; and Anthony Ianiero, director of development at BU.

Bank pledges gift of $10,000

The Columbia County Farmers National Bank of Bloomsburg recently pledged an unrestricted gift of $10,000 to the Bloomsburg University Foundation, according to Paul Reichart, bank president.

"Bloomsburg University is a vital academic and economic force in our community," Reichart said. As a new institution in Bloomsburg, we are pleased to help contribute to its continued success. Bloomsburg is already recognized as one of the outstanding academic institutions in northeastern Pennsylvania. We hope contributions like this will help the university attain even greater recognition."

The $10,000 has been pledged to the foundation at the rate of $2,000 a year over the next five years, according to Jan Girton, senior vice president of the bank.

BU President Harry Ausprich recently reactivated the foundation which is used to aid the university in achieving its educational objectives through private sector support.

Responding to the gift, Ausprich commented, "We're excited that the Columbia County Farmers National Bank has accepted leadership as the first local institution to join the University Foundation's Presidential Club. This support will enable us the opportunity to continue to enhance the many fine programs and services available at Bloomsburg University."

CALDER

Athletic fundraiser joins development staff

BU has appointed Thomas P. Calder as the school's new assistant director of development/athletics.

Calder, formerly a legislative assistant with the National Collegiate Athletic Association, will assist Development Director Anthony Ianiero and direct all Husky Club fundraising events. Calder will also coordinate BU's summer camp program.

A 1975 business and economics graduate of Hofstra University, Calder had been associated with the NCAA since 1984.

Prior to that, he was an assistant lacrosse coach and the assistant director of games operations at the University of North Carolina. He was also an assistant lacrosse coach at Roanoke College from 1975-77.

The names of three alumnae — Flora Miller Anderson '08, Mary Edwards Shuman '09, and Anna Kuschke '09 — have been "immortalized" at BU. Chuck Kocher of the BU groundskeeping staff recently found a piece of glass in the basement of Carver Hall on which the three names had been inscribed. Apparently taken from either Waller or Noetling Halls before they were razed, the glass has now been installed in the greenhouse. The inscription is dated February 16, 1907.

EUDORA LYHNE '45 of Avon, Connecticut, sent the following report: "A group of us from the Class of 1945, most of us who were unable to get to our fortieth reunion, had a mini-reunion at our home here in Avon the weekend of October 12. Eileen Falvey McGovern and I worked together on it.

Those attending were Marjorie Downing Cosgrove and husband, Jean Dickinson Applegate and husband, Mary Schroeder, Phyllis Schrader Walker and husband, Eileen Falvey McGovern and Borge and I. We had also invited Joy Propst Moore, but she called to say that her mother was very ill and she had to cancel at the last minute. We had also invited Elvira Bitetti, who had planned to attend. We couldn't understand why she didn't respond to our latest correspondence, and then Phyllis informed us that she had seen her obituary in the paper. She had passed away in September."

MARGARET A. DUCK FOLLMER '57 sent us the following information in honor of her mother and aunt.

"My mother, Mabel E. Maust Duck came from Jerseytown H.S. in 1915 and was graduated from Normal School Class of 1917, in the teachers' course. She taught for many years in Jerseytown H.S., Sunbury H.S. and Hershey, where she was principal in 1924. She also was a proficient water color artist. Mabel led an active political life in Columbia County and surrounding areas for most of 45 years. She passed away February 8, 1963, after a series of massive strokes, and her husband of 40 years died February 28, 1973, of complications from Parkinson's Disease. They had one daughter, yours truly.

"Mabel Dock's youngest sister, Elsie Maust, came to the Normal School from Bloomsburg High School in 1919, also took the teachers' course and was graduated in 1921. She taught seventh and eighth grade math and geography in Tyrone. In 1922 and 1923 she taught in Pleasantville, N.J., where she met and married Lt. Col. William D. Kelly in 1925. In 1924-1925 she taught junior high students in Hamminton, N.J. She was widowed in the early 1970s and has resided for many years at 6811 Glenmont Avenue Falls Church, Va., with her granddaughter, Kathy. At age 86, Elsie is getting along well, and I enjoyed a visit with her just three years ago. She has one son, William, who lives with his wife, Jolene, in New York City, where he manages a public television station.

"There are also several nieces and nephews — Lee and Kimber Maust of Bloomsburg and Florida, Eleanor Shultz Magilane, magistrate of Danville, and yours truly.

"I now reside at 30410 Greenland, Livonia, Michigan, and I am active as professional tutor and tester at Schoolcraft Community College in Livonia. My husband, William, also of Bloomsburg and a graduate of Penn State (Class of 1956), is a tech specialist at Ford Motor Company in Dearborn, Michigan. Our married daughter, Melody Follmer Wrobleski, and her husband Jim are graduates of Michigan Technological University in the computer and engineering field. Our other daughter, Holly, is a third year student in the School of Architecture at Lawrence Institute of Technology, Southfield, Michigan.

"I am also the proud owner of four of mother's watercolors, painted in 1924, depicting the Jerseytown-Dutch Hill area where she grew up. They grace my living room in their lovely original walnut frames and matting."

DONALD A. PEGG '70 of Bloomsburg has earned an M.S. degree in administration of justice at Shippensburg University.

WILLIAM MURPHY '70 is in his first year as supervisor of special education and director of day programs with United Cerebral Palsy of Delaware County. He oversees a staff of 55 professionals and paraprofessionals who conduct a multi-faceted program for about 160 clients ranging in age from 18 months to 50 years.

Bill received a master's degree in special education from West Chester University and earned supervisory and administrative certificates from Penn State.

With the Murphys, special education is a family affair. His wife, Nancy, preceded him in the Delaware County United Cerebral Palsy program, teaching for four years in the George Crothers Memorial School. She's presently on the staff at Drexel Hill Middle School.

They began their careers in education together the year after receiving their undergraduate degrees. They served as volunteer elementary teachers at the Turtle Mountain Indian Reservation School run by the Catholic Missions in North Dakota.

"It was a wonderful year. We were away from the well-intended advice of relatives and friends. It made us very close as a husband and wife."

A strong advocate of volunteerism, he has recommended similar work to other young people who finish college and don't have a job or aren't sure what they want to do.

"By making a sacrifice for someone else, you're the one that gets back a lot more than you give to another."

In his professional career as well as his volunteer work, Bill has quietly found such rewards by being willing to look beyond outward appearances. He's discovered many human beings worth knowing; many people with abilities worth developing.

Sculpture garden to honor Bob Roberts

Alumni — especially those who knew Percival R. Roberts III or love fine sculpture — are invited to help create a sculpture garden at BU in his memory.

Before his death in 1984, Bob Roberts was professor and former chairperson of the Department of Art at Bloomsburg University. A native of Delaware, he held bachelor and master's degrees from the University of Delaware and a doctorate in art from Illinois State University. He joined the Bloomsburg faculty in 1968.

An artist, poet and teacher, he was named a Commonwealth Teaching Fellow in 1974-1975 in recognition of his exemplary teaching. He won a Commonwealth Service Award in 1976.

Recognition of his extraordinarily fruitful life extended far beyond the campus and even the Commonwealth. In 1963, he was named the ninth Poet Laureate of Delaware, and in 1967, he was chosen as an Outstanding Young Man of America. Among his other honors were a Litt. D. degree from L'Libre Universite' Asie and the American Poets' Gold Cup Award.

At its June 1985 meeting, the Council of Trustees moved to established a mall area south of the McCormick Center for Human Services as the "Percival R. Roberts III Memorial Sculpture Garden."

"The university is now proceeding to acquire exciting pieces of sculpture that reflect a profound love for the best humanity has to offer," says Karl Beamer, assistant professor of art. "The collection will not only symbolize the University's regard for excellence, but also exemplify the precious experience of the beauty in life.

"As in the case of all meaningful collections, the process of acquisitions will continue in perpetuity. Because of the importance of these ideals, the university is ambitiously seeking contributions to this new and exciting endeavor. Your contribution will ensure a permanent collection of fine sculpture."

Please make checks payable to "BUAA-Roberts" and mail to Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

BU unveils exciting celebrity series

BY DURRELL REICHLEY
Staff Writer

An impressive line-up of entertainment will be coming to Bloomsburg University during 1986-87 as part of the university's "Celebrity Artist Series."

Some of the performers scheduled for the upcoming academic year include the Vienna Choir Boys, actor Hal Holbrook, the Broadway touring company of "A Chorus Line" and opera star Roberta Peters.

according to Ted Shanoski, director of cultural affairs at BU, the ambitious line-up is one of the first steps towards a goal of making the university a cultural center for northeast Pennsylvania. "This is the goal of the Community Arts Council (the group which plans the series) and President Ausprich," Shanoski said. "We're spending more money and attracting bigger names."

The 1986-87 schedule is as follows:
Oct. 12, 1986 — Vienna Choir Boys
Oct. 22, 1986 — The Broadway touring company of "A Chorus Line"
Nov. 5, 1986 — Hal Holbrook
Nov 11, 1986 — San Francisco Opera
Feb. 1, 1987 — Northeast Philharmonic Orchestra
Feb. 24, 1987 — Ohio Ballet
March 31, 1987 — Tokyo String Quartet
April 8, 1987 — Roberta Peters

According to Shanoski, the Vienna Choir Boys are one of the most popular choral groups to tour America. "We haven't had a major choral program at BU in a long time," he said.

Shanoski believes "A Chorus Line" will be very popular with students. "It's the first big Broadway production we've had here in years."

Holbrook will he performing his one-man Mark Twain show According to Shnnoski, Holbrook only does 10 or 12 of these performances a year "He's probably going to be our largest attraction."

The San Francisco Opern is "one of the top touring companies in the nation" while the Tokyo String Quartet is among the world's "top four or five string quartets," Shanoski said. Both the Northeast Philharmonic Orchestra and the Ohio Ballet have performed at BU before.

Shanoski also said he hopes to arrange an "artist-in-residence" progrnm with Robertn Peters In an "artist in-residence" program, Peters would spend several days on campus, both performing and working with students.

The "Celebrity Artist Series" is being funded in part by a new $250,000 Arts Endowment Fund which is still being raised. Local philanthropists Marco and Louise Mitrani have already donated $75,000 towards this goal.

Anthony Ianiero, director of development at BU, said he is talking to area businesses and industries to obtain the rest of the money. According to Ianiero, the interest earned from the endowment fund will be used to pay the costs of the performances.

"The series will also be funded by patrons, state grants, money from the Community Activities office, and from admission charges to the performances," Ianiero said.

All of the performances will be held in Mitrani Hall except for the Tokyo String Quartet, which will perform in Carver Hall

Shanoski said ticket prices for the various performances will be determined in the next few weeks. Anyone interested in obtaining more information about the series should contact Ted Shanoski, Director of Culturnl Affairs, Kehr Union Building, Bloomsburg University

GARY BUCH '76 exhibited new paintings at Midtown Galleries in New York City from February 25 through March 29.

The exhibit was Buch's first one-man show in New York City. He received an M.F.A. from Central Washington University in Ellensburg, Washington, and attended the Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture in Skowhegan, Maine, in 1984. He currently resides in Portland, Maine.

Buch has participated in many exhibitions and has been steadily gaining recognition in the past several years. He prefers to work on a large scale and many of his paintings are executived on panels seven by eight feet or larger.

Five new panels were included in the recent show, along with a selection of small paintings, watercolors and drawings. The subjects of these paintings include a new series on water and underwater views by the edge of thickly forested land. There is always an element of psychological intrigue in these paintings as evinced from the titles such as "The Illusion Is Deep as the Night," "Spring to Confuse the Heart," and "Gradually Going Tornado 1985."

regions the university serves. To all it must make clear also the intentions and the goals of the university leadership, which is responsive yet determined; visionary yet practical; and nbove all, open, honest, and fair.

Today, there exists within our universities a chronic crisis of governance, that is, the pervasive incapacity of organizations to cope with the expectations of their constituents. A comprehensive view of leadership is necessnry to help a university develop a new vision of what it can be, then mobilize change townrd the new vision and transmit that vision through its faculty and staff to its students.

Most definitions of leadership reflect fads, fashions, political tides, and academic trends; ns such they tend to mix reality and myth. It makes what Brnque once said about art also true of leadership: "The only thing that matters in art is the part that cannot be explained." The famous modern dance Isadora Duncan pointed out the dilemma of clearness when she said, "If I could tell you whnt I menn, there would be no point in dnncing." It is that inexplicable, undefinable quality that characterizes the essence of effective and, if I may say, visionary leadership.

The role of the university and the role of the president, then, are both marvelous and complex, and they cannot be nurtured if the institution of learning moves with rigidity, slothfulness, or mercurial actions.

One of the first things that good leadership, really good education, teaches, is to walk alone. Too much attention, I believe, has been paid to making education attractive by smoothing the path as compared with inducing strenuous voluntary effort. The university, I believe passionately, must be the place where imagination is not only allowed, but is expected. The faculty of imagination is the great spring of human activity. Without allowing the imagination to be tested, to be nurtured, to be enhanced, it becomes impossible to meet the principal goal of the academy: to seek quality everywhere we go and to achieve excellence.

If a university is not an oasis of excellence in a sea of mediocrity, it does not deserve the name university. But excellence does not come out of the blue, or black, like summer lightning. Excellence must be born and nurtured; it must grow, it must mature, it must be achieved, step by step, day by day, with persistence, with fidelity, and with dogged determination. Our university, therefore, must be a place where clarity of purpose and mission is always present, where leadership is credible and creative, and where the best uses of our imagination allow us to define and seek excellence.

I must say to you how gratified I feel about the pursuit of excellence at Bloomsburg University. Over the past nine months I have experienced evidence, not just rhetoric, but evidence of the efforts by faculty, students, staff and administrators to formulate a special and unique culture which speaks clearly to the issue of quality.

One bit of evidence stands out in my mind, and that is the recent creation, this year, of the University Scholars Program. This program was developed to challenge students who have distinguished themselves academically, have superior intellectual ability, set high standards for themselves, and are serious about pursuing a quality college education. The director of the program and the University Scholars Advisory Committee, comprised of seven faculty, four students, and three administrators, worked very hard this year to establish it and will be monitoring closely its activities. At the March 11, 1986, meeting of the Bloomsburg University Foundation, the Board of Directors voted unanimously to allocate $10,000 for the support of the University's Scholars Program. This fall twenty-five outstanding Bloomsburg freshmen will become the first university scholars.

I must also say that other generous and important scholarships have come our way within recent months: the $500,000 Mitrani Scholarship and the $3.4 million gift from the Fred Smith Estate. These gifts are speaking clearly to the issue of excellence.

Now for my agenda. When I spoke to the faculty on September 10, 1985, I outlined some specific issues that I wanted to address during my first year as President. The agenda included the necessity to draw attention to the basic business of our educational process, and that is to provide a rigorous non-compromising general education program with strong emphasis on the sciences, humanities, and arts. Our level of consciousness has been raised regarding this matter, and I am going to urge that we look again at our commitment to general education by a careful review of our requirements, our program, and our philosophies.

Another agenda item was to provide leadership for a renewed emphasis on cultural activities and programs. One of the most gratifying developments in the cultural arena has been the development of a positive relationship between the Bloomsburg Theatre Ensemble and our university. These efforts will benefit and strengthen both organizations' ability to contribute culturally to our community and region.

We have made another noble effort to present to the university and community at large events next year under a new title, the Celebrity Artist Series. Our goal is a $250,000 endowment for this program, and we already have made progress toward it by receiving a most generous gift of $75,000 from Mr. and Mrs. Marco Mitrani, our loyal friends and supporters. Other gift have been made by members of the newly formed President's Club. Included on the schedule for next year are the Tokyo String Quartet, the San Francisco Opera Production of "La Boheme" in English, Roberta Peters, the Ohio Ballet Company, and the Northeastern Philharmonic, Hal Holbrook in "Mark Twain Tonight," and the Broadway touring production of "A Chorus Line."

Issues discussed here at Bloomsburg University and evidence gleaned from national reports convince me of the great importance of continuing to support with renewed vigor our development efforts. In addition to the monies now being spent on faculty and staff development from our regular operating budget which will continue, I will recommend at the June meeting of the University Foundation that $14,000 be appropriated and targeted for faculty development. These funds will be directed specifically to each of the 27 departments and library. I want the departments to have the option to determine the ways in which development monies can be of most benefit to them given the goals and missions of their respective academic programs. Other procedures, now in place, for using development resources for staff, management, and faculty, will continue.

PROCESSIONAL TO HAAS CENTER

Another matter I asked the university to consider was university governance, and a dedicated committee has been working on a new model for eight months. I will be meeting with the committee soon to share with it my views about the report.

A final agenda item was to rededicate ourselves to, and put into place, an effective development and fundraising program. The university's fundraising efforts yielded more than $1.1 million in 1985 (excluding the $3.4 million scholarship from the Fred Smith Trust), and in the first three months of this year, the Office of Development has raised over $400,000 in gifts and pledges.

These, then, are some of the items I presented to our faculty last fall. Perhaps the most encouraging aspect of all is that we have made good progress. The agenda has been received most receptively by our university community and by our town, and I am delighted by all of this.

What course should this university set for the months and years ahead? Two major directions stand out in my mind. The course should embrace a renewed and vigorous redefinition and reinterpretation of intellectualism and values.

I ask you please to listen to a comment by J. L. Childs, Professor of Education at Columbia University:

> The educator should recognize that American life has entered upon a period of social transition; and that one of his most important obligations is to become intelligent about these new conditions and about the ideal aspirations of the American people, so that the university may do its share in helping the young to adjust to that which lies ahead.

This comment was given in an address made in 1935 — 51 years ago. No one would or could deny Child's view that educators have an obligation to help themselves, their community, and their students to become intelligent. It is the development of the mind, the eliciting of intelligence, the encouragement of dialogue and thought that will lead to the development of a citizenry of intellectuals. The meaning of the word "intellectual" is derived from a Latin verb meaning "to gather and select the best fruits of a harvest." The original image of an intellectual was a person who gathered ideas, feelings, and intuitions — as others gathered fruits — and sorted out and acted on the best of them.

Today, we must be intellectual to survive. We have to make sense of our environment, fathom the meaning of words, understand our actions, and develop theories to test the physical properties of the stuff of the world. In the university, faculty and students should develop the quest for "know-why" ahead of "know-how." Then intellectualism is being fostered.

In contrast with intellectualism, the university should not be a place for the maintenance of stupidity. Stupidity has to do with thoughtlessness, blind acceptance of ideas, internalization of other people's prejudices, and most centrally, the loss of control over one's actions. We have a responsibility to mitigate stupidity, to be intellectual ourselves, to think about what we say, do, and teach — and to expect no less than this from our students.

That, my colleagues and friends, is what I believe our first goal for our university in the months and years ahead should be to articulate a precise view of intellectualism.

The second major agenda item I wish to address during the coming months and years has to do with values. Those we have embraced at this university are values to which all of us, including me, enthusiastically endorse. I am asking us please to consider a reevaluation of the basic values that brought us initially into teaching, into research, into the academic life and make certain that these reasons still make sense to all of us, are still useful to all of us, and are still productive.

A value which we have long fostered at Bloomsburg, a value which our students particularly are aware of, is our caring attitude. I would say to you that this university is known and highly regarded for the countless ways we project and embrace our caring spirit to our constituencies.

The issue of values again can be explicated by recalling Emerson's question: "What has become clear to you since we last met?" Values are what tie us all together, what make sense to all of us, and what is really important to all of us. A value for the young who will one day lead, as well as for the leaders of today, comes from a character in George Bernard Shaw's play "Man and Superman."

> I want to be thoroughly used up when I die, for the harder I work the more I live. I rejoice in life for its own sake. Life is no "brief candle" to me. It is a sort of splendid torch which I have got hold of for the moment, and I want to make it burn as brightly as possible before handing it on to future generations.

When we extend beyond ourselves and develop a team network with values clear and attainable, then our students will understand

Inauguration photos by Robert H. Brown Jr.

Toffler's purpose in FUTURE SHOCK when he stressed the importance of a lifetime of learning. Salwyn Enzer, director of Southern California's Project Outlook, confirmed Toffler's view when he stated, "The best preparation for the year 2000 and beyond is to learn to learn."

This is a significant challenge for the university, a challenge for articulating a new interpretation of the value of leadership; but if accomplished will be expressed in the following thought:

> Fail to honor people,
> They fail to honor you;
> But of a good leader,
> When his work is done, his aim fulfilled,
> They will all say, "we did this ourselves.

High above the portals at Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., John F. Kennedy's words are etched in marble:

LORRAINE, EMILY and SARAH

ON HIS WAY TO CEREMONY

> I am certain that after the dust of centuries has passed over our cities, we too will be responsible not for victories or defeats in battle or politics, but for our contribution to the human spirit.

This is what values are all about.

Finally, we, at this university, must never be satisfied at being good. We must continually aspire to be the best that we can become. You know what this requires: Teaching, research, and service that are better than just good. It means good students and demanding academic programs that make these good students even better men and women in mind and heart as they grow here. It means more than adequate facilities, classrooms, laboratories, studios, offices, computers, social and living quarters that contribute to the educational process. It is an ambiance, a beautiful campus, that inspires the best and discourages the worst in us.

Above all, there is an all pervasive spirit that characterizes what we are and what we are doing. All of us are caught up in one of the greatest endeavors to which men and women may aspire — to seek and find and teach what is true in a world of falseness, sham, and deceit, to lead the ways to goodness by the way we live our lives in response to grace, to inspiration, and finally to cherish the beauty of it all that is also ours to have, to portray, and to give.

At Bloomsburg University, I will work assiduously with you to embrace these vitues and goals, along with a genuine desire to help develop the best intellectual environment and to help maintain and foster a value system based on what we are at Bloomsburg University today and what we hope to be tomorrow.

This is a very special day for me — for my my wife, my children, for my family who have come to share the joy of this day with us. To my many friends who are here from various parts of the country, and to all of you, my good colleagues, I look forward to many productive, full, happy years with you. Thank you.

BASE OF STUDY IN FLORENCE, ITALY

For those BU alumni who wished they could have travelled abroad as undergraduates, but had neither the money nor the time, Bloomsburg offers exciting study-abroad programs for summer 1986.

Dr. William Carlough, director of the programs, says the cost is significantly below similar programs offered by other institutions, and the setting in each case is "magnificent." A number of participants in recent years have signed on for audit credit because they were not especially interested in academic credit, but found this the lease expensive way to travel and visit in Europe.

One program is scheduled for Florence, Italy, during the period from July 9 to July 31. The group will fly by Swiss Air from New York to Milan, and then drive by chartered bus to "the city of the Renaissance." Housing and three meals a day will be provided in a beautiful old villa on a hillside overlooking the city.

Bloomsburg faculty members Christine Sperling, Marjorie Clay and Richard Micheri will teach European Art II, Contemporary Moral Problems and Issues in World Politics respectively. Students may choose any one of the courses, and the cost is included in the basic price.

As classes meet only in the morning, the afternoons and evenings are available for visits to the city. Three-day weekends provide opportunity for more extended travel to Venice, Rome, Pisa and other cities.

The cost for air transportation, room, meals and tuition is only $1,599. This is Bloomsburg's first study-abroad center, and Carlough hopes it will be both successful and rewarding for the participants.

SALZBURG, AUSTRIA is the setting for another study-abroad program sponsored by the Pennsylvania Consortium for International Education from July 1 to July 31. Students will live with Austrian families in this city of Mozart and "The Sound of Music."

Two courses will be offered: Music and Opera Theatre, taught by BU's Dr. William Decker, and Introduction to Philosophy, taught by Dr. Carlough. With classes only the morning and three-day weekends, students will have the opportunity to take optional guided tours to Venice, Vienna and Switzerland.

The cost of $1,850 includes airfare from New York to Munich, transportation to Salzburg, room, lunch and dinner for the entire month, and tuition.

OXFORD, ENGLAND will be the setting of another program offered by the consortium for three weeks beginning on August 4.

BU faculty members Dr. Mary Hill and Dr. Seymour Schwimmer will teach Introduction to Exceptional Individuals and Contemporary Moral Problems respectively.

This is an opportunity to study at England's oldest university, founded in 1167. Classes, as well as room and board, are scheduled at Mansfield, one of Oxford's colleges. Room, board and one-day weekend trips in conjunction with the course elected by the student are all covered by the low program fee of $750. Tuition ($205 per three-credit course) and weekend meals are additional.

Airfare is also additional and can be arranged on your own or by the Center for International Studies. The center is offering airfare to Oxford with a side trip to Holland that leaves on July 31. This option includes three nights in Amsterdam, bed and breakfast, canal boat tour of the city, and full-day excursion in the northern area of Holland for $751. If you wish to arrange your own air travel, several airlines are offering flights to England this summer for $179 each way.

Classes are held Monday through Thursday for the three weeks abroad. This allows the participants to have plenty of time to tour England, including Stonehenge, Cambridge, Blenheim Palace and many other major sightseeing attractions.

For additional information and applications for any of these programs, contact Dr. Carlough at Bakeless Center 218, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, Pa. 17815. His telephone number is 717-389-4332.

LONDON THEATRE will be enjoyed during a 10-12 day study tour in May arranged by Dr. Susan Rusinko of the BU English Department.

Open for credit or non-credit, the trip enables participants to see plays in their native context in the theatre capital of the world and to explore London on their own or with a group.

Previous trips have included visits to Stratford-on-Avon, Stonehenge-Bath and an informal luncheon meeting with actors, directors and playwrights.

The cost of the study trip includes round-trip transportation from Bloomsburg, hotel and breakfasts in London, theatre tickets and tuition.

Included in the theatre events will be a play at each of two unique, modern arts complexes — the National Theatre and the Barbican, at least one comedy or musical in a West End (London's Broadway) theatre, and one play at a small fringe theatre (New York's off-Broadway).

Credit participants will meet with Dr. Rusinko during the last two weeks of the spring semester for pre-trip discussions of London theatre. Upon their return to the states, they will write a paper toward earning three credits.

For more information, contact Dr. Rusinko at Bakeless 114 or by phoning 717-389-4429.

Hunsinger man of many roles

Elton Hunsinger, 72, who served as an administrator and trustee at Bloomsburg University for many years, died at his home on March 25.

Hunsinger, of Main Street, Aristes, Pa., was also a long-time high school teacher and sports coach

He was born in Geneva, N.Y., on Oct. 3, 1913, a son of the late Burt and Katherine Weller Hunsinger.

He graduated from Conyngham Township High School and received his bachelor's degree in health and physical education from East Stroudsburg State College and his master's degree in administration from Bucknell University.

HUNSINGER

He began a long career at Bloomsburg State College as dean of men in 1961 and advanced to dean of students and associate vice president for student affairs.

Hunsinger also served as director of placement and as food service administrator. He was on the president's council and served as a member of several college-wide committees.

He retired in 1979 as administrator for federal grants and associate vice president. He was a member of the university's council of trustees at the time of his death.

Before coming to Bloomsburg, he was a teacher, athletic director and coach of all varsity sports at Conyngham Township High School from 1936-1948. His basketball teams won 237 games and lost 54 while in all sports his teams had a record of 438 wins, 156 defeats and six ties.

From 1948-1961, he was a teacher and coach at Ashland High School. As basketball coach, he had an 80 percent winning record, and his teams appeared consistently in the state playoffs.

Hunsinger also served as a PIAA official for 35 years. He officiated basketball and football games in central Pennsylvania and at one time, was the only official in the state who had officiated for five different college sports.

In 1935, Hunsinger tried out with the Hazleton baseball team of the Eastern League for two weeks and was invited to spring training by the Philadelphia Phillies the following year, but decided to finish college instead.

He worked as a professional baseball umpire from 1945-1947 in the Pony, Ohio State and North Carolina leagues.

In the middle 1940s, Hunsinger ran a baseball school in the Bloomsburg area for the New York Giants and worked with baseball greats Carl Hubbell and Hans Lebert.

In 1967, Hunsinger was appointed by Gov. Raymond Shafer to serve as the first advisor to the Senate Committee on Education, a position he held for two years.

Hunsinger received the Outstanding Service Award from the Pennsylvania Basketball Coaches Association in 1977 for his achievements in the coaching field. In 1981, he was inducted into the Jerry Wolman Chapter of the Pennsylvania Sports Hall of Fame.

Hunsinger was a member of St. Peter's Lutheran Church, Aristes; the Ancient Adopted Scottish Rite Valley of Bloomsburg, Ashland Lodge 294; and the Bloomsburg Elks.

His wife, the former Grace Kostenbauder, died in 1982.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Ted (Carol) Maurer, of Mount Lakes, N.J., a son, Dale Hunsinger, of Maryland, seven grandchildren; and a brother, Weller Hunsinger, of Ringtown.

Contributions to the Elton Hunsinger Memorial Fund may be sent to the Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

University receives over $5 million in '85

Last fall, Bloomsburg University President Harry Ausprich stated that public universities need private support to spell the difference between an adequate and a great institution of higher learning.

If 1985 is an indication, Bloomsburg University is well on its way to becoming a superior school. During the calendar year, monetary, scholarship, and equipment gifts to the university and its Alumni Association amounted to nearly $5 million.

"Such support," says Ausprich, "will help Bloomsburg recruit and retain outstanding faculty, develop its professional staff, acquire advanced research and teaching equipment, improve its learning facilities and enrich cultural activities. This all leads to the University's excellent reputation in the world of higher education. Equally important is how many of these gifts help students — tomorrow's leaders — develop to the fullest their potential through academic scholarships and access to the best of resources."

THE LARGEST GIFT, according to Anthony Ianiero, director of development, was $3 million from the estate of the late Fred G. Smith, a Shenandoah businessman. It will provide scholarships annually to students from five high schools in the nearby anthracite coal region.

Bloomsburg philanthropists Marco and Louise Mitrani gave $500,000 in trust for academic scholarships. A $5,500 contribution from Berwick Forge and Fabricating Corporation enriched the General Scholarship Fund.

The University was fortunate to receive a number of outstanding equipment gifts. AT&T donated $255,000 worth of new computer equipment to be utilized in the scientific and research area and by the College of Business. Shared Medical Systems gave $7,000 in computer equipment for the second consecutive year. IBM and Tandy Corporation donated computer equipment totalling $5,000. A $2,000 video printer was received from Polaroid. The first half of a $19,200 pledge from Air Products and Chemicals Co. will assist in renovations of the computer center.

ALUMNI OF THE UNIVERSITY supported alumni programs, projects and the recently acquired Alumni House to the tune of nearly a quarter million dollars. Other cash gifts to the university totalled $40,000 and in-kind gifts, another $32,000. The Bloomsburg University Foundation was the recipient of gifts in December totalling $22,000.

Nearly $80,000 was raised by Husky Club donors and others for athletic scholarships, while a $3,000 donation to the athletic scholarship fund came from McDowell Oil Co.

"All these gifts and contributions are greatly appreciated by the entire University community," Ianiero commented. "They provide a great incentive for us to continue our efforts to increase the academic status of Bloomsburg University throughout 1986 and future years."

Four gift categories have been created by the Foundation: University Medallion Society — $100,000 or more, President's Club — $10,000 to $99,999, Carver Tower Associates — $5,000 to $9,999, and Maroon and Gold Club — $1,000 to $4,999.

Gifts and pledges to the University in the first three months of 1986 total over $400,000, of which the Foundation is directly responsible for $165,000.

The Foundation has established an Arts Endowment Fund, spearheaded by a $75,000 contribution from Marco and Louise Mitrani. In addition, the Foundation is supporting the new University Scholars Program with a $10,000 grant.

The Foundation's priorities are in the following areas: Capital needs and academic equipment, faculty development, library support, academic scholarships, fine arts, program development, and athletics. The Foundation is housed in the Development Office in Carver Hall.

University plans anticipate future ne

BY DURRELL REICHLEY
Staff Writer

In an effort to keep up with today's changing technology, BU officals are busy planning improvements and new programs for the university.

The renovation of Sutliff Hall, the introduction of a University Scholars program and the addition of several new degrees are just a few of the plans currently in the works. University administrators have numerous advancements and new projects planned for both the university's facilities and its academic programs.

SUTLIFF HALL — One of the biggest projects coming up is the total renovation of Sutliff Hall, home of the College of Business.

According to Robert Parrish, vice president for administration, the renovations will consist of reconstructing the interior of the building and the construction of a small addition to the west side of the building. The top floor of the building will house faculty offices for business professors and also the office of the Dean of the College of Business. The first floor will house classrooms, seminar rooms, and computer labs. Also included in the renovations will be the installation of an elevator for handicapped students.

"The university has changed since Sutliff Hall was built," Parrish says. "It's time to adapt it to its current use."

Parrish adds that the building is currently not efficient in the areas of heating and air conditioning because of its large number of glass windows.

Work on the building is scheduled to start around May 10 and will take about one year, according to Parrish. "We hope to have it ready by the fall of 1987," he says.

The approximate cost of the renovations will be around $553,000, Parrish says. This total may be supplemented by an additional $90,000 from the university's operating budget.

OLD SCIENCE HALL — Another project on line is the total renovation of Old Science Hall.

"We want to make Old Science an arts and humanities building," Parrish says. "It'll have classrooms and faculty offices and perhaps art studios or a small theatre."

The building is over 70 years old and Parrish says that the university needs to better utilize the building's interior space.

"It's a productive building, but it needs renovation. The new interior will be different."

According to Parrish, the renovations will cost about $3.3 million dollars. The funds have already been released by the state's Department of General Services. It'll be in design for about a year and then in construction for about another year and a half, he says.

NEW DORMITORIES — The university has received concept approval from the Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education (SSHE) for another project, the construction of a new dormitory complex on the upper campus. The dormitories will be low-rise garden style apartments featuring passive solar heating. They are intended for upperclassmen and, according to Parrish, will house approximately 300 students.

The new dormitories will help decrease crowded conditions in existing dormitories.

The project will cost approximately $3.5 million and will be funded through the issuance of bonds. "We hope to begin construction during the summer of 1987," Parrish says. He expects construction to take no more than a year.

CENTENNIAL GYM — Another tentative project is the total renovation of Centennial Gym. "It was once used as a fieldhouse, but now that we have a more modern fieldhouse (Nelson Fieldhouse), we no longer need to use Centennial for that purpose," Parrish says.

Plans for the building include tearing out the concrete bleachers to open up the floor area of the gym. The building's pool will also be renovated. The remodeled building would be used for physical education classes, student intramurals and a physical rehabilitation program (in cooperation with the Bloomsburg Hospital).

According to Parrish, the renovations would cost about $3.2 million and would be funded by state money. The idea is currently being discussed in House Bill 383.

ANDRUSS LIBRARY — Also in the current capital request is an addition to Andruss Library. The library was originally designed for 3000 students, Parrish says. "Now, it's being used by 6300 students. It's too cramped."

The addition to the library would add more racks for circulation materials and would also add more study area for students.

Parrish says the tentative cost for this project is $8.8 million. "This is the first time that I'm aware of that the library addition has been included in an SSHE request," he adds.

BEN FRANKLIN BUILDING — The university is also planning to renovate the Ben Franklin Building. The building is approximately 45 years old, Parrish says. "It's one of the primary student service buildings, but it doesn't even have an elevator."

Renovations to the Ben Franklin Building would cost around $3 million, Parrish says. The university is already in the process of remodeling the admissions office (located on the first floor of the building).

Parrish says the university plans to install elevators in each of the four buildings that don't have them. Elevators would be installed in Ben Franklin, Carver Hall, Navy Hall and the Haas Center for the Arts. This project would cost about $840,000.

LIBRARY MALL — BU officials are contemplating the development of the area behind the library and in front of the McCormick Human Services Center into a mall area. It would feature a sculpture plaza, a reflecting pool, trees and post lighting, Parrish says.

"It would significantly enhance the appearance of the campus," he says. "It would probably cost around $28,000, but there are no funds for it at this time. We are currently looking for donations."

UNIVERSITY SCHOLARS PROGRAM — A University Scholars program will be starting at Bloomsburg University this fall. The intent of the program is to enable academically promising students to reach beyond the limits of a traditional college education and become exposed to challenging learning opportunities based on their abilities. Eligibility for the program is based largely upon high school performance.

Students in the program will participate in special general education Scholars seminars featuring interdisciplinary study of selected topics. They will also attend other out-of-class presentations related to these topics. The seminar courses will be taught by selected faculty members who will be designated Scholars Faculty.

The remainder of the students' courses will be selected from regular course offerings to satisfy majors, minors and other liberal arts requirements.

Many of the scholars will be awarded scholarships of at least $500. The money for these awards will be made available through the Bloomsburg University Foundation.

Upon successful completion of the program, the student will be designated as a University Scholar on his/her permanent academic record as well as his/her diploma. The University Scholars will also be honored at their graduation ceremonies.

OLD SCIENCE HALL

1985: The yea

By DURRELL REICHLEY
Staff Writer

The year 1985 was a very eventful one for both Bloomsburg University and the BU Alumni Association. The arrival of a new president, the purchase of the Alumni House, and a championship football season all made the news in 1985. Some of the biggest stories from March 1985 to March 1986 included the following:

APRIL — The BU Alumni Association purchased the home of the late Dorothy John Dillon (Class of 1924) for approximately $110,000. The working offices of the Alumni Association are now headquartered in this Alumni House. The house is located along Lightstreet Road, two houses above the campus maintenance center. The staff of the Alumni Association moved into the house in August. An open house for alumni was held Homecoming Weekend.

The Alumni Association presented over $19,000 in alumni scholarships to members of the student body for the 1985-86 academic year.

JUNE — The BU Council of Trustees announced that

niversity Scholars will have many special programs and services sal, they will also be fully integrated into the mainstream of the nunity so that they may enjoy the same aspects of university life dents experience: residence hall living, cultural activities, rship activities, sporting events and other co-curricular programs. E. Cole, chairperson of the Department of Biological and Allied es, is the director of the program.

his program we can recruit students who would have gone to a e," says Dr. Larry Jones, provost and vice president for academic be rigorous, exciting and very demanding."

s committee has selected approximately 125 candidates for the m this total, the committee will choose about 20 students to take ogram, Jones says.

IPUTERS — BU is working to keep up with modern computer ones says. He hopes to increase the number of microcomputers student use. "We now have 200 microcomputers for student use," next year we hope to have 300. Many disciplines are using them."

OR INSTRUCTIONAL SYSTEMS DEVELOPMENT — In an effort th on and off campus teaching through the emerging technologies, d the Center for Instructional Systems Development. The center's) to support the design and development of computer-based leodisc courseware for interested BU faculty, (2) to serve as a rtnership by seeking and supporting interactive videodisc projects tor corporations through grants and sponsorships, and (3) to l cooperate with the College of Graduate Studies and Extended upporting human resource development in the instructional ster's degree program and extended educational programs for ness training.

as already been awarded $66,131 through the Ben Franklin hnology Partnership Program. This money will allow BU to work ager Medical Management Corporation to develop courseware for d re-training of nurses and physicians in critical care medicine. as also received an Education for Economic Security Act grant of lop an individualized interactive videodisc model for teacher thematics.

ects are being developed with the cooperative effort of the center nembers and graduate students completing thesis requirements in al technology program. These projects include a chemistry lab year college chemistry students, teaching signed English to ers of the hearing impaired, and redesigning five courses in the whereby 50,000 art slides may be accessed via optical laser disc. ailey, professor of mathematics and computer science, is the center. Julie Abell, instructor of mathematics and computer coordinator of the center.

EES — BU is planning to offer two new bachelor's degrees: a ence in adult health and fitness and a bachelor of arts in social adult health and fitness is proposed to deal with the need for ess programs for adults and older people. This need is due in part crease in the mean age of the general population and a great elderly population in Pennsylvania. The program would prepare areer in the field of adult health and fitness.

Jones, the degree in social welfare would add a professional iology department. The degree would feature a social work al welfare is currently only an option in the sociology degree

SUTLIFF HALL

"The new degree would allow the sociology department to seek accreditation by the Council on Social Work Education (CSWE)," Jones says. "It would give it a greater degree of credibility."

The two degrees were approved by the BU Council of Trustees on March 7. They will now be considered by the SSHE Board of Governors.

BU added a new master's degree program this past fall. Students can now obtain a master of science degree in instructional technology from BU.

"When we announced the program, we immediately had 40 candidates," Jones says. "The program is specialized. It allows a graduate to work with a company and utilize all of the available technologies."

Also in the area of graduate studies, the College of Business is hoping to revise the current M.B.A. program at BU, Jones says. "We want to create an 'executive' M.B.A. program. The executive program uses both faculty and practitioners. It also allows students to take the classes at different times."

Jones says there is also an increased interest in minors in recent years. "Minors are very popular now. Students want to get good credentials. A minor gives them an edge.

"We've added about a dozen new minors," Jones says. "We have a minor in computer science coming up now. We expect to see a lot more."

TELEVISION — Jones hopes to use the new television studios in the McCormick building to help keep up with technology. "We can utilize the studios to provide instruction," he says. "We can also pick up signals from satellites with our dish (located on the roof of the building).

"We'd also like to hook into the local cable system. Then we'd be able to initiate broadcasts from here at the university. There are over 200,000 homes in the region that we could broadcast to."

STRATEGIC ISSUES GROUP — The university recently formed the Strategic Issues Group to provide strategic planning for the university. According to Jones, this group will look at local demographics, student and faculty ideas and the strengths and weaknesses of the university. The group will then come up with some goals and objectives for BU.

But Jones doesn't foresee any major problems for BU. "We've got a strong core of liberal arts courses surrounded by strong professional schools."

the 2,000-seat auditorium in the Haas Center for the Arts will be named the Marco and Louise Mitrani Hall. The Mitranis have made numerous contributions, totalling over half a million dollars, to Bloomsburg University. "Naming the auditorium in honor of the Mitranis will acknowledge their support of the arts and their years of service to BU and the community," said John Dorin, chairman of the Council of Trustees.

BU's new FM radio station, WBUQ, started operations on June 17. Located in the McCormick Human Services Center, the station broadcasts at a frequency of 91.1.

Three Distinguished Service Awards were presented during the annual banquet of the BU Alumni Association on Alumni Weekend. Recipients of the 1985 Distinguished Services Award were Frank J. Furgele '52, Ed. D., superintendent of the Brandywine School District in Claymont, Delaware; Carl L. Stanitski '60, M.D., an orthopedic surgeon in Pittsburgh; and Conrad L. Stanitski (Carl's twin brother) '60, Ph.D., who was a chemistry professor at Randolph-Macon College in Ashland, Va. at the time.

Richard S. Benyo '68, a free-lance writer and former executive director of RUNNER'S WORLD magazine and Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs at BU were recipients of Young Alumni of the Year awards.

JULY — Dr. Harry Ausprich officially took over the presidency of BU on July 15, 1985. Ausprich is the 16th president of BU.

Dr. John E. Dittrich, new dean of the College of Business, began his duties on July 1, 1985. He came to BU from the business faculty of the University of Colorado.

AUGUST — Fred G. Smith, a Shenandoah businessman, bequeathed $3 million for student scholarships at BU. Smith died in July at the age of 80. The scholarship is the largest in the 146-year history of BU. The trust is currently valued at $3 million and includes a provision to increase its net worth to $5 million. To be eligible for a scholarship, students must be residents of Ashland, Mount Carmel or Shenandoah boroughs or Mount Carmel Township

OCTOBER — A $3.45 million dormitory complex will be built on BU's upper campus near Nelson Fieldhouse to help relieve student housing problems. A plan to build a five-building apartment-style complex was approved by the State System of Higher Education (SSHE). The new dormitories will help decrease crowded conditions in existing dormitories. Construction could begin as early as the spring of 1987.

BU's 58th annual Homecoming was one of the best-attended and most successful alumni celebrations in recent years. BU grads met the university's new president, Dr. Harry Ausprich; toured the new Alumni House, and celebrated a spectacular victory over Millersville in the Homecoming football game.

NOVEMBER — BU's football team captured its first-ever Pennsylvania Conference championship with a convincing 31-9 victory over Indiana University of Pennsylvania and received its first-ever invitation to the NCAA Division II national playoffs. The Huskies went on to win their first playoff game ever, 38-28 over Hampton (Va.) University but lost in the semifinals to North Alabama 34-0. Along the way, the Huskies set the record for most victories in a season by a Bloomsburg football team, finishing 12-1. The team also won the Lambert-Meadowlands Cup, awarded every year to the top Division II team in the east.

Coach stresses academics

Pete Adrian, assistant head coach and defensive coordinator at the University of Rhode Island for the past 10 seasons, has been named as the new head football coach at Bloomsburg University.

The 37-year-old Steubenville, Ohio native replaces George Landis who left BU recently to accept a position as head football coach at neighboring Bucknell University.

Adrian has helped Rhode Island head coach Bob Griffin lead his teams to consecutive 10-3 seasons in 1984 and 1985 and appearances in the NCAA Division I-AA national playoffs. Rhode Island has captured three of the last five Yankee Conference titles. Rhode Island also won the Lambert/Meadowlands Cup in Division I-AA this season.

Adrian brings with him a philosophy that Division II football should be played for fun. "Football is something to do," he said at a recent press conference. "It should be fun. I've coached for 16 years at the Division II and Division I-AA levels and I believe it's the best level to coach at. The kids are there because they want to be there."

One thing that impressed BU officials was Adrian's concern for high academic standards. He stresses that players attend class. At Rhode Island, Adrian coached in a program which not only produced winning records but also a 94 percent graduation rate for players.

One of the ways Adrian hopes to maintain the Huskies' academic standards is by instituting a mandatory in-season breakfast program for the players from 7:15 to 8:15 every morning. "They'll get a decent meal, and the morning is a great time to study," he said.

Adrian says he is comfortable coming in after the success of George Landis. "The spotlight doesn't bother me," he said. "It's one of the attractions of the job. The people here expect to win now. As a coach, I expect to win.

"Bloomsburg may not be 12-1 again," Adrian said, "but I think it's important for the program to be 7-3 or 8-2 next season. We'd like to be as competitive as possible every year. I think Bloomsburg should be able to effectively compete for the Pennsylvania Conference Eastern Division championship every year. I'm going to try to keep us number one."

On the field, Adrian plans to have the Huskies throw the ball more. "Last year, Bloomsburg was very balanced between the throw and the run — about 2,000 yards each. With me, it'll probably be more like 3,000 (yards) passing and 1500 (yards) running."

Adrian has already appointed two of his assistant coaches. They are Vin Sinagra, who will handle the offense, and Joe Vladello.

Besides coaching at Rhode Island, Adrian has also coached at Idaho State University and West Virginia University. He earned his bachelor's degree in physical education at West Virginia in 1970 and his master's degree in physical education at Rhode Island in 1971.

The new head coach says he is looking forward to his job at BU. "Everything here is on the uplift," Adrian said.

Adrian, his wife, Chris, and his sons, Rocco, 9, and Zachary, 7, will be moving to the Bloomsburg area in the near future.

Landis left BU in January to take over a Division I-AA program at Bucknell that struggled to a 3-7 record this past season. Also going to Bucknell with Landis was Lou Maranzana, assistant head coach and defensive coordinator.

"This decision was certainly made with mixed emotions," Landis said. "I had the opportunity to meet and work with many outstanding people at Bloomsburg and it meant a lot to me both personally and professionally. Bloomsburg was good to me and I appreciate the support of many people both on campus and in the community."

In four years, Landis turned the Huskies around from 0-10 in 1981 (before he arrived) to 12-1 in 1985. The Huskies won the Pennsylvania Conference championship this past season and posted the only undefeated regular season in the nation among Division II schools. The Huskies then went on to the NCAA Division II semifinals before losing to North Alabama.

For its efforts, BU was named the ECAC Team of the Year and winner of the Lambert/Meadowlands Cup as the top Division II team in the east.

Landis received several honors for his work in 1985, including a unanimous selection as Pennsylvania Conference Coach of the Year. He was also named as the Kodak Coaches' College Division I (NCAA Division II, NAIA Division I) national Coach of the Year. In addition, Landis was honored as the recipient of the Irving Marsh-Stan Lomax Award given by the Metropolitan New York Football Writers Association as the top small college coach in the east.

Landis recorded a 24-18-1 record in his four seasons at BU.

TAKING COMMAND — Bloomsburg University's new football coach, Pete Adrian, gives instructions to his players during the first day of spring practice.

Office technologies topic of workshop

Interested in mastering methods of teaching office technologies? A three-week workshop offered by the BU Department of Business Education and Office Administration will help you do just that.

The workshop will be held at Lansdale School of Business from June 23 to July 11. Instructors will be Dr. John J. Olivo Jr., chairman of the sponsoring department, and Mrs. Charlotte Cubbler.

The by-word for this three-week workshop is "share" and the results will allow each participant to take away an extensive collection of teaching methods and materials in office technologies. Ideas and samples that are guaranteed to work, as well as student-designed lessons, will be presented and shared. Hands-on experience with IBM compatible equipment will be provided for both novice and experienced teachers. Field trips to various businesses are being planned.

The workshop format will consist of morning sessions, which focus on sharing ideas, lesson plan development and other teaching methodologies, and afternoon sessions, which focus on hands-on opportunities with a variety of software.

The first week of the workshop will deal with methods of teaching word processing, followed by methods of teaching spreadsheets in week two and methods of teaching information processing in week three.

The registration fee of $10 per week or $25 for all three weeks includes all materials and coffee breaks. The workshop is funded through a grant from The Pennsylvania State University Center for Vocational Education.

Contact Dr. Olivo at 207 Sutliff Hall, BU, for more information.

SSHE boasts 83,168

Official figures for the fall term of the 1985-86 academic year show 83,168 students enrolled in the State System of Higher Education (SSHE).

The total enrollment for the fall semester reflects an increase of 821 students over the previous year. Tallies show 72,061 undergraduate and 7,823 graduate students are attending SSHE institutions. There are 3,284 students listed as unclassified.

"These figures indicate that the State System is thriving," said SSHE Chancellor James H. McCormick. "By maintaining our mission of low-cost, high-quality education, we continue to attract students who are looking for affordable higher education."

Ten of the 14 SSHE universities recorded increases in the first semester, while the remaining four posted declines. Bloomsburg's enrollment for 1985 was 6,439, up 250 over 1984.

Distinguished Alumna celebrates 100

BY DURRELL REICHLEY
Staff Writer

One of Bloomsburg University's oldest living graduates celebrated her 100th birthday recently. Vera (Hemingway) Housenick, Class of 1905, reached the special milestone on Feb. 20. A distinguished citizen in the town of Bloomsburg, she has devoted much of her life to education and community service.

Mrs. Housenick was born on Feb. 20, 1886 in College Springs, Iowa. Her family moved to Bloomsburg when she was 11 years old.

She graduated from high school in 1903 and enrolled at the Bloomsburg Normal School.

Mrs. Housenick has fond memories of her two years at the Normal School. One of her favorite memories is that of Long Porch. This was a piazza about 140 feet long which was connected to a dormitory (which later became Waller Hall and is currently the site of Lycoming Hall) and was a favorite gathering spot for students.

"I remember there were chairs there and we used to go out there and sit and talk," she says.

Mrs. Housenick recalls that one of the major social activities in the early 1900s was dancing. But, she says, those dances were quite different from the dances of today. The girls danced with girls and the boys danced with boys. In order for a boy to dance with a girl, he had to get permission from a teacher.

Another difference that Housenick recalls between college life now and college life in the early 1900s was that, back then, visitors couldn't stay overnight in the dormitories.

"I was visiting a girlfriend of mine one night, and I wanted to stay overnight," she says. "I got in without being seen, but at lights out (which was around 10 o'clock), a teacher came in and found me. She said I couldn't stay, but I told her I didn't want to walk home by myself. So she had a teacher walk me home. I didn't try that again!"

Female students at the normal school had regular calisthenics periods, Mrs. Housenick says. "We had to wear special gym suits. They were navy blue and consisted of bloomers and stockings. We had to do exercises and marches."

She even remembers some of the professors she had. These included Professor Cope, who taught science; Professor Wilbur, who taught geometry; and Professor Sutliff, for whom Sutliff Hall was named.

Mrs. Housenick graduated from the Bloomsburg Normal School in 1905 and then worked for several years as a teacher. She taught in Mifflinville, Pa., and Atlantic City, N.J.

In 1909, she married Charles Housenick and returned to Bloomsburg. "I quit teaching to become a housewife, but I filled in occasionally as a substitute teacher at the Third Street School in Bloomsburg," she says.

Throughout her life in Bloomsburg, Mrs. Housenick has been very active in a number of service organizations in the Bloomsburg area.

She served as the secretary of the BU Alumni Association for almost 25 years and received a Distinguished Service Award from the Alumni Association for her efforts.

VERA HEMINGWAY HOUSENICK '05

She was twice president of the Delta Club, a member of the Public Library Board, a member of the Bloomsburg Hospital Auxiliary, and one of the founders of the Girl Scouts in Columbia County (even though, she says, "I didn't have any daughters").

Mrs. Housenick was also very active in the First Presbyterian Church, Bloomsburg. She was a Sunday school teacher, the church's first female deacon, a member of the church's Board of Trustees, the church's first female elder, served as president of the Women's Organization, and was a member of the missionary society.

She is still a member of First Presbyterian Church, although she doesn't get there as often as she used to. "If the weather's good and I feel good and someone can help me, then I can get there," she says.

Mrs. Housenick served the university community in yet another way. After the death of her husband (who founded what is now Independence Ford) in 1955, she began to take in students to live with her in her home. She says she had between five and eight young men living in her home for a number of years.

"I had two rules in my house at that time," she says. "First, the boys were not allowed to come home drunk or bring any alcohol in the house. Second, they weren't allowed to have any girls in their rooms. The first time they broke a rule — out they went! But I didn't have any trouble."

Her rapport with the students was so good, she says, that on their birthdays, she would even have a party for them.

Now, Mrs. Housenick, whose children include one son (who is deceased), two grandchildren and five great-grandchildren, lives with her grandson, Charles C. Housenick II, Class of 1960, and his wife, Nancy.

Mrs. Housenick keeps herself busy these days by reading and knitting. She especially enjoys knitting bedsocks for the hospital auxiliary.

"I used to keep my great-grandchildren in sweaters that I knitted," she says.

She also keeps busy doing her "assignment." Mrs. Housenick's granddaughter-in-law, Nancy, suggested to her about a year ago that she write her memoirs.

"I wanted her to do it for her 100th birthday," Nancy says. "So I ask her each day how she's doing on her 'assignment.'"

Mrs. Housenick even tries to get out to Alumni Weekend activities in the summer when she's able.

In celebration of her 100th birthday, the town of Bloomsburg presented Mrs. Housenick with the key to the city in recognition of her civic activities. She also received a letter from President Reagan commemorating the event.

For her age, Mrs. Housenick is in good health and spirits. "I just take things a day at a time," she says.

Rakowsky 'trustee in residence'

BY DURRELL REICHLEY
Staff Writer

Sixteen years ago, Stan Rakowsky '70 was sitting in a classroom at Bloomsburg State College studying to be a secondary school teacher. Last month, Rakowsky returned to the classrooms of Bloomsburg University, this time in a slightly different role.

Rakowsky, vice chairman of the BU Council of Trustees, was taking part in a new Trustee in Residence program at BU. He was the first trustee to take part in the program, in which trustees spend several days on campus meeting with students, faculty and administrators.

Rakowsky, who is also the superintendent of the Clearfield Area School District, met with education majors and with faculty and administrators from the College of Professional Studies.

"Since I'm in the field of education, I wanted to talk with education majors," he said. "I hope, as a practicing administrator, I can bring new ideas to the classes."

The goal of the Trustee in Residence program is to enable trustees to learn more about how the university functions, Rakowsky said.

"Personally, I want to get a feel for what's going on. Through this program I'm getting to know more people and seeing more interaction."

Since some of the trustees live a considerable distance from Bloomsburg and don't get to the campus as often as they would like to, the Trustee in Residence program will help trustees keep in contact with the university, Rakowsky said.

RAKOWSKY

While on campus, Rakowsky sat in on an Academic Affairs Advisory Committee meeting, talked to a Social Foundations of Education class, attended several graduate classes, talked with special education students, and met with various faculty members.

In the Social Foundations of Education class, Rakowsky answered questions from students on topics like politics in education, the role of athletics in academics, the Gramm-Rudmann bill, high school administration, minimum salaries for teachers and the importance of money from the private sector in education.

Other trustees who will be participating in the program in the future include Elbern Alkire and Gerald Malinowski, according to Rakowsky.

Rakowsky has been a member of the Council of Trustees since December 1983.

"I feel very strongly about the school," he said. "I'm giving back to BU what I received as a student. It's my way of repaying the university."

Rakowsky holds a master's degree from Penn State and is currently enrolled in a doctoral program there.

He began his career in education at North Schuylkill High School where he taught English and coached football and track for a number of years. He left North Schuylkill in 1975 to accept a position in the Towanda Area School District as assistant principal and director of athletics. Rakowsky became principal of Clearfield High School in 1976 and was appointed superintendent of the Clearfield Area School District in 1984.

Rakowsky, a bachelor, lives in Clearfield, Pa. He is a member of the BU Alumni Association.

Athletes win titles

A second consecutive national championship for wrestler Rick Bonomo, three national titles for swimmer Joan Wojtowicz and a playoff appearance by the ladies' basketball team were the highlights of this year's winter sports season at Bloomsburg University. Season wrap-ups for BU's winter sports teams are as follows:

MEN'S BASKETBALL — The men's team registered its 20th consecutive winning season, finishing 15-11. The Huskies narrowly missed a berth in the Pennsylvania Conference playoffs and settled for fourth place in the Eastern Division with a 7-7 division record.

Glenn Noack, a senior, finished his career in second place on the Huskies all-time scoring list behind Jerry Radocha '77. Noack scored 1,504 points in his four seasons at BU. He was named to the PC Eastern Division All-Star team for the 1985-86 season

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL — The women's team made it to the PC playoffs for just the second time in the school's history. The Huskies finished the season 9-12 overall, 8-5 in the Eastern Division. The Huskies battled West Chester in the first round of the playoffs but lost, 64-58.

Jean Millen, a senior, became the first BU women's player to score 1,000 career points. She reached that plateau in a game against Lock Haven on Feb. 3. Millen went on to finish her career with 1,113 total points. She is also BU's all-time women's rebounding leader with 940.

Millen and freshman Theresa Lorenzi were both named to the PC Eastern Division All-Star team for the 1985-86 season

WRESTLING — BU's wrestling team finished third in the Eastern Wrestling League and second in the Pennsylvania Conference. The Huskies finished with a 12-5 dual meet record

Rick Bonomo, a junior, became the first BU wrestler ever to win back-to-back NCAA Division I national championships by winning the 118-pound title at this year's championships in Iowa City, Iowa Rick's brother, Rocky, also a junior, finished eighth at 126 pounds to give BU its first season ever with two Division I All-Americans. As a team, Bloomsburg had its best showing ever at the national championships, finishing seventh with 373/4 team points Also representing the Huskies at nationals were Bruce Wallace, Dave Morgan and Darrin Evans.

MEN'S SWIMMING — This young team had some difficulties but gained valuable experience on the way to a 4-8 record. The Huskies finished ninth in the PC championships.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING — The women's team continues to be one of the top teams in the conference, finishing second to Clarion for the fifth consecutive year. The women posted an 8-2 record this year and have a combined record of 42-5 over the last five seasons.

Freshman Joan Wojtowicz won three national titles at the NCAA Division II women's swimming and diving championships in Orlando, Fla Wojtowicz won titles in the 200-, 500- and 1,650-yard freestyles. Kelly Knaus, a senior, became an honorable mention All-American by finishing 12th in the 200-yard backstroke As a team, BU finished 14th in the nation. Also representing BU at nationals were Carol Gurniak, Amy Cole, Margaret Norris and Beth Roeder.

Asst. trainer named

Rolene Wagner has joined the Bloomsburg University Department of Health, Physical Education and Athletics as the assistant athletic trainer.

The 29-year-old Hughesville area native comes to Bloomsburg from Passaic Valley High School in Little Falls (NJ) where she has served as physical education teacher and head trainer since 1980

WAGNER

Wagner will assist BU physical therapist and head trainer Art Hopkins in handling the university's physical therapy clinic located in the Nelson Fieldhouse.

A 1978 graduate of Lock Haven, she received a bachelor of science degree in health and physical education as well as her certification in athletic training Following graduation, she worked with the United States Pan-Am men's judo and women's handball teams at the U.S. Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colorado. While at Passaic Valley, Wagner completed her work toward a master's degree in health and physical education at East Stroudsburg University. She also implemented a student trainer program at P V.H.S. and began a program affiliated with William Paterson College of New Jersey.

Former dean dies

Alden P Huker, who served as the second dean of Arts and Sciences at Bloomsburg University in the 1960s, died July 30, 1984, in Manchester, Conn. He earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at Harvard and his Ph.D. in music at Boston University.

Use A Small Donation
To Create A Large Gift . . .

Because your strong and continued support is important to maintain and develop the programs of our University, we would like to introduce you to the concept of giving a charitable gift through the use of life insurance.

Many people who would like to make a substantial gift to the University cannot afford to give up the future income which the gift would produce.

A tax deductible gift of life insurance allows you to be of generous assistance to the University without jeopardizing your own financial security. It offers benefits to the donor and to the University which are unique:

- It permits you to arrange for a substantial gift with a comparatively small outlay
- There is no delay in the payment of proceeds and no "shrinkage" due to taxes, fees or other costs.
- There is no publicity involved with the gift, unless you desire it.

If you are interested in this method of giving, we can assist you in setting up a program of donation to benefit the University fund of your choice. Please complete the form below and return it to the B.U. Foundation Office.

Highlights of Alumni Weekend

By DURRELL REICHLEY and DON CHOMIAK
Student Staff Writers

Four Bloomsburg University alumni and a well-known university employee were honored at the BU Alumni Association's annual luncheon June 7. The luncheon was part of Alumni Weekend activities held Friday and Saturday, June 6 and 7.

Dr. Lee R. Beaumont, Class of 1943, and Richard F. Laux, Class of 1952, received Distinguished Service Awards. Dr. Robert E. Boose, Class of 1968, and Jane E. Elmes, Class of 1972, received Young Alumni of the Year awards. And Dominic Anthony Cusatis, known at BU as "Tony the Baker," received an Honorary Alumnus award.

Other activities held over the weekend included the 50-year reunion of the Class of 1936, the dedication of the Alumni House, the dedication of the newly-named Boyd F. Buckingham Campus Maintenance Center, and reunion dinners for the classes of 1941, 1949, 1950, 1951, and 1952. The weekend's festivities drew alumni from as far away as California, Colorado and Florida.

Alumni Weekend kicked off Friday night with a special banquet for the 50-year reunion of the Class of 1936. Eighteen members of the class returned to BU to renew old friendships and talk about college days.

The banquet featured dinner, a short film about the 1935-36 school year, a slide show of BU past and present, and remarks about the evolution of Bloomsburg University from President Harry Ausprich.

"In 1936, the enrollment at Bloomsburg State Teacher's College was 596," Ausprich said. "Today, enrollment at Bloomsburg University is 6,439."

"In 1936, there were 45 faculty members," he continued. "Today, there are 390."

"And 50 years ago, there were five major programs of study. Today, there are over 100."

A. David Mayer, president of the Class of 1936, gave a humorous and nostalgic look at the class.

Alumni Weekend festivities continued Saturday morning with the dedication of the Alumni House.

The house, purchased by the Alumni Association in April 1985, was the home of the late Dorothy John Dillon (Class of 1924) and is located on Lightstreet Road, just east of campus. The building houses the offices of the Alumni Association

"This is our house when we come to campus," said Mary Anne Klemkosky, president of the Alumni Association. The Alumni House campaign, which was launched last year on Alumni Weekend, has already generated over $100,000 in donations toward the cost of the house.

Following the dedication of the Alumni House, the festivities moved down Lightstreet Road to the campus maintenance center. Here, university alumnus Boyd F. Buckingham, Class of 1943, was honored at dedication ceremonies for the newly-named Boyd F. Buckingham Campus Maintenance Center. Buckingham served the university for 28 years and is a vice president emeritus of BU.

The annual luncheon followed at noon and attracted nearly 300 alumni and friends.

Klemkosky reported that 1985-86 was a very good year for the Alumni Association. "This past year we awarded 40 scholarships worth over $18,000," she said. "We held 20 chapter meetings, awarded 170 student loans, raised over $168,000 for general purposes, raised over $111,000 for the Alumni House, started a student alumni council, held our first senior send-off picnic, and started an Alumni Fellow in Residence program."

Elections were then held for the Alumni Board of Directors. Elected to the board for three-year terms were: Francis D. Sell '35, Boyertown; C. Stuart Edwards '41, Bloomsburg; Sara Marie Dockey Edwards '44, Berwick; Constance Stanko Gobora '52, Levittown; Richard R. Lloyd '62, Belle Mead, N.J.; Barbara A. Caruana '77, Lancaster; and Sheri A. Lippowitsch '81, Emmaus.

Elected to a two-year term was Richard E. Grimes '49, Harrisburg.

During the board's reorganization meeting, Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, Orwigsburg, was elected president; G. Thomas Hughes III '76, Easton, vice president; Sandra Swetland Williams '66, Somerset, N.J., secretary; and John J. Trathen '68, Catawissa, treasurer.

FOR THREE-YEAR TERMS:

FRANCIS D. SELL '35. Although retired as a successful teacher and coach, "Doc" continues to keep busy as a Realtor in the Boyertown area. One of Bloomsburg's greatest boosters, "Doc" brought his granddaughter, Jennifer, to Bloomsburg on July 1, 1983, the day Bloomsburg State College became Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania. As a result, Jennifer was the first person offered admission to Bloomsburg University. "Doc" has been the "driving force" behind the Pennsylvania Dutch Chapter of BU Alumni in the Reading area and a very loyal supporter of BU's athletic program. "Doc" and his wife, Mabel, often come to Bloomsburg "just for a ride" and to eat at Hotel Magee. "Doc" was first appointed to the Alumni Board in 1981 to fill an unexpired term and was elected for a second three-year term. Doc lives at R.D. 5, Box 690, Boyertown.

C. STUART EDWARDS '41. After graduating from Bloomsburg, Stu earned a Master of Education and Doctor of Education degrees at Pennsylvania State University. He also completed non-degree work at Northwestern University. After many years of service to Bloomsburg University, he retired as dean emeritus of the College of Professional Studies. The Alumni Association presented its Distinguished Service Award to Stu in recognition of his service to his Alma Mater. He and his wife, the former Eda Bessie Bellhartz '41, are among Bloomsburg's most loyal alumni. Eda Bessie is the author of PROFILES OF THE PAST, A LIVING LEGACY, which traces Bloomsburg University's history from 1839 to 1979. Stu formerly served on the Alumni Board of Directors from 1973 to 1982 and was president from 1981 to 1982. He has continued to represent the Alumni Association on the University's planning commission and on the Bloomsburg University Foundation Board of Directors. He also served on the presidential search committee whose work resulted in the appointment of Dr. Harry Ausprich. Stuart lives at 705 Country Club Drive, Bloomsburg.

SARA MARIE (SALLIE) DOCKEY EDWARDS '44. Sallie and her husband, Frederick Jay Edwards, became well-known in the Bloomsburg area as the owners of The Studio Shop on Main Street. Since their retirement from that business, Sallie has continued to be active as a self-employed interior designer. In pursuing that interest, she completed several courses of study in design composition, floral arrangement and color coordination, including a course in interior design at the New York School of Interior Design in 1965. Sallie and Fred enjoy traveling and spend the winter months in Florida. Sallie has always been active in community activities, most recently as chairperson of the Berwick Bicentennial Celebration. She and Fred are the parents of a daughter, Claudia Ann. Sallie has completed her first three-year term on the Alumni Board of Directors. Sallie lives at 545 East Eleventh Street, Berwick.

CONSTANCE STANKO GOBORA '52. Both Connie and her husband, Harry '50, have devoted their lives to teaching in the Levittown area. They have also become active in the Philadelphia Chapter of BU Alumni, with Harry currently serving as president and Connie as treasurer. Their interest in Bloomsburg has passed to their children: Kim graduated in 1983, Ed will be a senior this fall, and Harry Jr. attended BU before transferring to East Stroudsburg. Connie has completed her first three-year term on the Alumni Board and lives at 19 Jonquil Lane, Levittown.

RICHARD R. LLOYD '62. Dick is best-known by his Bloomsburg contemporaries as an outstanding basketball player and "all-around nice guy." He has been associated with Rutgers University since 1965, when he joined the basketball coaching staff. He served as head coach from 1971 to 1973 and then accepted the position of assistant university secretary for the 1973-1974 academic year. In 1974 he was appointed university director of alumni relations and continued in that post until 1984, when he was named director of annual giving for the Rutgers University Foundation. In 1968 he received a Master of Education degree in continuing education at Rutgers. Dick has maintained strong ties with BU by serving as coordinator of the BU Alumni-Student Recruitment Program in New Jersey since its inception in 1979. He and his wife, the former Marian Layton, have hosted nearly all the annual training sessions in their home. Dick also was a faithful member of the Alumni Board from 1976 to 1982 and was inducted into the BU Athletic Hall of Fame in 1984. He and Marian are parents of three children: Deborah, Rick and Brian, and they live at 80 DeHart Drive, Belle Mead, N.J.

BARBARA A. CARUANA '77. While at Bloomsburg, Barbara was a member of Pi Omega Pi and Phi Beta Lambda. She served as student representative on the School of Business Search and Screen Committee and was listed in "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges." She was recipient of the R. Bruce Albert Alumni Scholarship, the Mary L. Frymire Kirk Alumni Scholarship; and the National Business Education Award of Merit. After teaching for one year, she joined Armstrong World Industries, Inc., as an analyst/programmer. Since then she has advanced from systems specialist (1980-1981) to senior project analyst (1981-1983) to litigation administrator (June 1983 to 1986). In June she was named manager of a corporate records management and administrative services, a newly established position in the firm's financial administrative services department. She was in the Class of 1985 of Leadership Lancaster, a Lancaster County Community Leadership Training Program. In addition to membership in the BU Alumni Association, she serves as a volunteer at St. Joseph Hospital, a member of the Highland Presbyterian Choir and the Music and Worship Committee. Her other interests are music, tennis and reading. Barbara lives at 1905 Oregon Pike, Apt. F-8, Lancaster.

SHERI A. LIPPOWITSCH '81. Sheri's activities as a BU student included serving as treasurer of CGA and membership in Delta Mu Delta. She received a Service Key Award and was listed in "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities." Sheri has been working for Air Products and Chemicals, Inc., in Trexlertown since February 1982, with two years in the accounting area and over two years in market research. She earned an MBA degree at Lehigh University in October 1985. Sheri has been the key contact person in helping to organize a chapter of BU alumni at Air Products. She served part of a year on the Alumni Board as a representative of the Class of 1981. Sheri lives at 119 Colonial Court, Emmaus.

FOR A TWO-YEAR TERM:

RICHARD E. GRIMES '49. Since graduation in 1949, Dick has probably attended more Alumni Weekends and Homecomings than any other alumnus. He retired in 1984 after a long career as a special education teacher in the Harrisburg School District. He completed graduate work at Bloomsburg, Temple and Penn State. In 1972 he was named "An Outstanding Elementary Teacher in America." Dick served on the Alumni Board from 1975 to 1982. He lives at 1723 Fulton Street, Harrisburg.

Distinguished Service Awards

Recipients of the 1986 Distinguished Service Awards were Lee R. Beaumont 43', Ph.D., professor emeritus of Indiana University of Pennsylvania; and Richard F. Laux 52', chairman of the board and chief executive officer of United Penn Bank, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The Distinguished Service Award was created in 1948 to recognize alumni who have excelled in one of three areas: significant accomplishments in his or her profession, outstanding service to the university and/or the Alumni Association, or contributions to mankind.

Dr. Lee R. Beaumont, former military man and retired professor of the School of Business at IUP, is the author of numerous articles in professional journals. His current publications include Century 21 Keyboarding, Basic Keyboarding & Typewriting Applications, and Basic Information Keyboarding Skills.

Following graduation from Bloomsburg State Teacher's College in 1943, he served for 20 years as a Regular Army Officer. During that time, he held the position of Director of Secretarial and Clerical Courses for four years at the U.S. Army Quartermaster School in Bad Tolz, Germany. It was here that Dr. Beaumont wrote his first textbook, MILITARY TYPEWRITING — which was used for many years by the U.S. Army to train thousands of military typists.

Upon his retirement from the Army in 1963, Dr Beaumont held the position of professor in the School of Business and the Graduate School at Indiana University of Pennsylvania for 15 years. Upon his retirement in 1978, the title of professor emeritus was conferred on him by the IUP Board of Trustees.

A speaker and guest instructor, Dr. Beaumont has lectured at numerous universities, state and regional in-service programs, workshops, and conventions all over the country.

Dr. Beaumont is a member of Delta Pi Epsilon, a national honor society for business educators, the National Business Education Association, the Eastern Business Education Association, the Pennsylvania Business Education Association, and an honor roll member of the Association for Information Systems Professionals.

Richard F. Laux, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of United Penn Bank in Wilkes-Barre, started his career as a teacher, for a semester, at Upper Darby Senior High School, Upper Darby, Pa.

Following his graduation from Bloomsburg in January of 1952, and during his semester as a teacher, he made arrangements to attend Florida State University for his graduate work

In August of 1953, he graduated from Florida State with an M.S. degree in management and finance from the University's business school While at Florida State, he had a graduate assistantship and taught undergraduate business courses. After graduation, he took a position with the Fort Lauderdale National Bank as assistant cashier until October of 1956.

In 1957, he returned to Pennsylvania. "I saw a renaissance occuring in Wilkes-Barre," said Laux. Offered a position at the Miner's National Bank in Wilkes-Barre, he took it and worked his way up. About 17 years ago, the bank changed its name to United Penn.

Laux is the first vice chairman of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association, Group III, and a member of the Governing Council. He is a director of the Greater Wilkes-Barre Chamber of Commerce, director and first vice chairman of the Wilkes-Barre General Hospital, director and secretary-treasurer of Bloomsburg University's College of Business Advisory Board, director of the Bloomsburg University Foundation, and holds several other positions in his community.

A widower, he has a daughter, Carol, and lives at 101 White Birch Lane, Elmcrest, Dallas, Pa.

'Young Alumni of Year'

This year's recipients of the "Young Alumni of the Year" awards were Robert Eugene Boose 68', Ed.D., deputy director of the New Jersey School Boards Association; and Jane M. Elmes 72', assistant professor of speech, communications and theatre at Wilkes College.

In its second year, the "Young Alumni of the Year" award was created to recognize alumni under the age of 40 who have demonstrated potential and promise in their respective professions. Also considered are professional achievements to date, outstanding service to the university, and/or contributions to mankind.

A member of the Class of 68', Dr. ROBERT BOOSE is the second representative of his class to receive the honor of a "Young Alumni of the Year" award. In March of this year, Dr. Boose accepted the position of deputy director of the New Jersey School Boards Association.

After graduating from Bloomsburg State College in 1968, Dr. Boose stayed at Bloomsburg to pursue his masters, which like his bachelor's degree was in business education. After receiving his M. Ed. in 1972, he went to Temple to complete his doctoral studies.

In 1975, Dr. Boose graduated from Temple with his Ed.D. in business education. He then took a position with the Mercer County Schools as the county school business administrator. There he was responsible for reviewing the budgets of 11 school districts. He served as administrator until July of 1979, when he accepted the position of Mercer County Superintendent of Schools. After four years as superintendent, he left for Maine to serve as commissioner of the Maine Department of Educational and Cultural Services. A position he held until March of this year.

Dr. Boose has served as a member of Mercer County Special Services Board of Education, Mercer County Vocational Schools Board of Education, Mercer County Community College Board of Trustees, a member of the Board of Trustees of the University of Maine, and the Maine Maritime Academy Board of Trustees.

In the fall of 1984, Dr. Boose appeared on a segment of 60 MINUTES with Harry Reasoner.

Articles written by Dr. Boose have been published in EXECUTIVE EDUCATOR (1980 and 1983) and AMERICAN SCHOOL BOARD JOURNAL.

Dr. Boose, his wife, Joyce, and daughter, Lauren, live in Trenton, N.J.

JANE M. ELMES regards her years at Bloomsburg as the most formative of her speaking and teaching skills. Currently, she is assistant professor of speech, communications, and theatre at Wilkes College. A position she has held since 1985.

After graduating from Bloomsburg State College in 1972, her career began as teaching assistant and forensic coach in the School of Interpersonal Communication at Ohio State University. In 1974, she left Ohio State and started at Clarion State College as director of individual speaking events for the Department of Speech Communication and Theatre.

In 1979, she was elected the chairperson of the department and held the office until 1983, resigning to become executive director of the Clarion Spring Festival of the Arts in 1984

While she was serving as chair, the department experienced a 17% increase in majors, placed 90% of its undergraduate majors in jobs directly related to their fields of study, placed 50% of alumni in graduate programs, received $10,000 in funding to develop curricular programs, and acquired $15,000 in scholarship funding from private sources. Following the Spring Festival of the Arts in 1984, she then left for the University of Pittsburgh to complete her doctoral studies.

Now at Wilkes College, in addition to teaching, she is co-director of the Center for Instructional Communication, and is involved in establishing and advising a student chapter of the International Association of Business Communicators at Wilkes College.

Her home is at 292 North Main St., Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Building named for Buckingham

Boyd F. Buckingham '43, vice president emeritus of Bloomsburg University, was honored during Alumni Weekend when the university's campus maintenance center was dedicated in his honor.

The structure was completed in April 1970 at a cost of $275,000. It is the headquarters for the physical plant department, which has been involved in all aspects of the physical expansion of the campus and the maintenance and general appearance of the complete physical plant of the university. It also houses a computerized energy management system that achieves an annual cost avoidance of more than $300,000 a year.

The University Council of Trustees voted unanimously at the September 1985 quarterly meeting to name the building in Buckingham's honor. During the program, remarks concerning Buckingham were given by John Dorin, chairman, Council of Trustees; Nick Dietterick, director of public information; Dr. C. Stuart Edwards, dean emeritus; Richard Benefield, president of Hotel Magee, Inc. and MIE Hospitality, Inc.; and Edward G. Edwards, executive vice president of Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

Buckingham served as a member of the university's Department of Speech faculty from 1953 to 1955, as director of public relations from 1965 to 1970, associate vice president for development and external relations from 1970 to 1974, and vice president for administration from 1974 until his retirement in December 1981.

From 1965 to 1974, when Buckingham served as director of development and associate vice president for development and external relations, he directed the most extensive physical plant expansion in the history of the university. Nineteen new buildings and other projects were added to the campus during this period at a cost of approximately $21 million. Buckingham's dedicated leadership during this expansion, resulted in the Bloomsburg University campus being recognized as one of the most attractive and best maintained in the State System of Higher Education.

In the community, Buckingham has served as president and board member of the Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce; vice president and board member of the Bloomsburg Area Industrial Development Association; chairman and member of the Bloomsburg Town Planning Commission; and member of the Columbia County Housing and Redevelopment authorities.

Buckingham is a 33rd Degree Mason, affiliated with the Scottish and York Rite Masonic bodies, and has served as commander-in-chief of the Caldwell Consistory.

He was a 1974 recipient of the Distinguished Service Award of the university Alumni Association and in 1980 received the Outstanding Citizen Award from the Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

Twenty-five Presidential Scholars have been selected to enter Bloomsburg University's new Scholars Program, which begins this fall Approximately 180 students were eligible, 66 applied, and 25 were selected. Eligibility is based upon high school achievement, S.A.T. scores of 1100 or higher, with a minimum of 500 on both the verbal and math scores, and a ranking in the top 20% of the graduating class.

Once eligible, students are selected on the basis of their application, essay, and the interviews of references. Although high academic achievement provides eligibility, personal characteristics and extracurricular involvement are important to the selection process.

To remain in the program, students must maintain a minimum G.P.A. of 3.0, and to receive recognition on their transcripts, they must achieve a mimimum G.P.A. of 3.5. Of the 25 selected, 22 are Pennsylvania residents, two are from New Jersey, and one is from Delaware.

These Presidential Scholars will become members of a select group of students who share a common interest in learning and a curiosity about many areas of study and co-curricular activities. They will participate in special Scholars Seminars featuring interdisciplinary study of slected topics and attend other out-of-class symposia related to these topics.

Scholars students will also take a general education course related to the seminar each semester. These scholars courses will be taught by university faculty who are designated Scholars Faculty. The remainder will be selected from regular course offerings to satisfy majors, minors, and other liberal arts requirements.

In addition to the recognition received and the opportunity to engage in special courses and symposia, each Presidential Scholar will be awarded a Freshman Scholarship. The money for this award is made available through the Bloomsburg University Foundation and has no need-based restrictions attached to it.

An attempt will be made to see that Presidential Scholars have the opportunity to room together in a single residence hall. Consequently, in addition to participating together in several scholars courses, there will be the opportunity for Presidential Scholars to interact with each other as well as with university faculty on an informal basis. These people will also be fully integrated into the mainstream of the campus community so that they may enjoy the same dimensions of university life that other students experience: residence hall living, a wide array of socio-cultural activities, campus leadership offortunities, sporting events, and other co-curricular programs.

Dr. James E. Cole, formerly chairperson of the Department of Biological and Allied Health Sciences, is the director of the Scholars Program. He will work closely with the University Scholars Advisory Committee in monitoring and evaluating the program. Both the director and the advisory committee report to the provost and vice president for academic affairs.

The University Advisory Committee will be composed of four presidential scholars, the director of the scholars program, the vice provost and associate vice president

Eight faculty retire

The retirements of eight Bloomsburg University faculty members and the conferring of faculty emeritus status upon six retirees were announced recently by the university.

Joanne E. McComb, associate professor in the department of health, physical education and athletics since 1960, retired June 20. She completed 26 years at BU and 32 years in the field of education. In addition to her teaching assignments, McComb had served as coach of the women's basketball team for a number of years and earlier served as advisor to the cheerleading squad. At the time of her retirement, McComb was associate director of athletics.

Dr. Robert C. Miller, professor of curriculum and foundations, has been at BU since September 1961. Upon retiring in December 1985, he completed 24 years at the university and 31 years in the field of education.

Dr. Matthew Zoppetti, professor of curriculum and foundations, completed 17 years at BU and 30 years in education upon his retirement on June 14. Zoppetti came to the university in September 1969.

Dr. James B. Crensy, professor of accounting and a former assistant to the president, completed 26 years at BU upon his retirement in May.

Dr. Margaret Long, associate professor of business education and office administration, joined the staff in September 1961, and completed 25 years of service, retiring May 9.

Eli McLaughlin retired on June 20. McLaughlin, an associate professor of health, physical education and athletics, also coached men's swimming and was previously an assistant football coach. He completed 25 years at BU.

Dr. Joseph P. Vaughan, professor of biological and allied health sciences, completed 19 years of service at the university in May.

Robert G. Davenport retired May 24 as an associate professor and counselor in the Center for Counseling and Human Development and Health Services. He completed 25 years at BU.

In addition to Miller, faculty emeritus status has been conferred on five previously announced retirees. The names and retirement dates are: Ben C. Alter, December 1985; Dr. Julius R. Kroschewsky, May 1986; Dr. John P. Master, June 1986; Dr. David A. Superdock, May 1986; and Dr. William S. Woznek, May 1986. Also, the honor was conferred on A.J. McDonnell Jr., posthumously, effective November 1985.

The "Celebrity Artists Series," Bloomsburg University's cultural string of entertainment for 1986-1987, will feature performances by eight reknown acts, from the Vienna Choir Boys to Hal Holbrook in "Mark Twain Tonight."

The series begins on Oct. 12, with the Vienna Choir Boys at 2:30 p.m. The choir will present a program of operettas, sacred songs, secular and folk music.

The second of the eight is the Broadway show "A Chorus Line," which will be performed on Oct. 22, at 8 p.m. A long running favorite, it is a lavish, larger than life musical.

Hal Holbrook is soon to follow, gracing the stage with his presentation of "Mark Twain Tonight," Nov. 5th at 8 p.m. "A flawless characterization," said the New York Daily News, "Two hours spent with him is a rare theatrical experience."

One of the most popular operas in the world today, "La Boheme," performed by the Western Opera Theater, the traveling company of the San Francisco Opera, will bring the youthful and romantic milieu of bohemian Paris to Bloomsburg University on November 11. The performance begins at 8 p.m.

The Northeastern Philharmonic starts off 1987, arriving in Bloomsburg on February 1. In the season of The Maestros, in search of a new music director, the Philharmonic is featuring some of the most gifted young conductors in the country, as they compete for the position. Performing at 2:30 p.m., the Philharmonic is also featuring solo performances by contralto Maureen Forrester and soprano Lucy Shelton, an added dimension to this Classics IV program.

The ballet comes to Bloomsburg on Feb. 24. In a return visit, the Ohio Ballet will perform at 8 p.m.

The Tokyo String Quartet, a group of extraordinary popularity and impact, according to the San Francisco Chronicle, will present their program on March 31, at 8 p.m.

Closing the series is "An Evening with Roberta Peters." One of the pre-eminent artists of the opera and concert stage in this century, Roberta Peters will perform on April 8, at 8 p.m.

All performances will be held in Mitrani Hall except the Tokyo String Quartet, which will be held in Carver Hall.

The opportunity is available to become a series subscriber, to see seven shows, excluding Hal Holbrook, or all eight performances. Alumni can see the package of seven for $40. The entire series is $50. The advantages of becoming a series subscriber include: a lower cost, better seats, and no waiting in line for tickets.

Tickets are also available for individual shows at $12 and $10 for all but the Philharmonic, which is $7. Tickets can be purchased by calling the Kehr Union box office at 389-3900, Monday-Friday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Ticket orders will be filled when payment for tickets is received. The Mitrani Hall box office will open one hour before performances for ticket sales.

To become a subscriber, contact Dr. Ted Shanoski, Director of Cultural Affairs, Kehr Union, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, Pa. 17815.

Poetry winner named

The winner of the second annual University and College Poetry Prize Contest is Frederick Deets (writing under the pen-name of Steed Richman), a graduate student in secondary education, according to an announcement by contest coordinator Richard Savage. The prize of $100 will be awarded for Deets' cycle of poems entitled "The Universe Revised," and Deets' name will be published in the quarterly bulletin of The Academy of American Poets, with which the contest is affiliated.

Honorable Mentions were awarded to Lori Fraind for her poem "The End of the Tier" and to Kelly Ann Cuthbert for her poem "The Barn."

More than 60 poems were submitted for the contest.

The University and College Poetry Prize Contest was originated by The Academy of American Poets in 1954 and was initiated last year at Bloomsburg University by Savage in conjunction with the English department. More than 130 colleges and universities throughout the country participate in the program.

"The winning poems show a strikingly imaginative command of language," according to Savage, "and express an unusual vitality and range of insight. They attempt to dramatize the private world involved with the public world and contain some original and memorable perspectives on the contemporary milieu."

Deets began writing poetry about six years ago and also writes stories and plays. He received a B.A. in political science from Wilkes College and an M.A. in communication studies from Bloomsburg University.

Judges for the contest were Savage and Richard O'Keefe.

Kehr Union addition in the works

Bloomsburg University is planning an addition to the Kehr Union Building which will enlarge the facility by over 50 percent and cost $2.75 million.

The BU Council of Trustees recently recommended the funding request be submitted to the State System of Higher Education (SSHE).

Robert Parrish, vice president for administration, said that cramped quarters for student and group activities is the main reason for the addition.

"The building is extremely heavily used because it's so centrally located," added John Trathen, director of student activities and the Kehr Union. "Everyone feels jammed in, especially in the fall and spring."

The union is the center of much campus activity. It houses the student snack bar, meeting rooms, information desk, mail room, administrative offices, study lounge, bowling alleys and a game room.

The 27,000-square-foot addition will be built onto the back of the existing structure, which contains about 50,000 square feet of space, Parrish said. Included in the addition will be a 5,700-square-foot general purpose theater and convention room that will seat between 400 and 500 people, according to Trathen.

Also included in the addition will be an enlargement of the snack bar, a "multi-cultural" room and about 2100 square feet for a student organization center.

The student health center, now located on the third floor of the McCormick Human Services Center, will be moved into the union to make it more accessible, Trathen said.

"It's a handsome addition," added Parrish.

Funding for the addition will come from the same state bond issue that is earmarked for new residence halls on the BU campus. BU will repay the cost of the addition by levying a $20 per semester student fee. Students approved the fee in a referendum earlier this year.

The state Department of General Services will assign an architect to the project after funding is approved, according to Trathen.

Parrish told the trustees he hopes to dedicate the new addition in 1989. An exact timetable will be set when funding is approved by the SSHE.

27 regional high school seniors receive first Smith scholarships

Twenty-seven 1986 graduates from five school districts in nearby counties are recipients of the first Bloomsburg University scholarships established through the multi-million-dollar trust fund of the late Fred G. Smith of Shenandoah.

The scholarships range from $1,000 to $3,795 and total $67,781. Mt. Carmel High School has the most recipients with 14. The others include: six from Shenandoah, three from Cardinal Brennan and two each from North Schuylkill and Lourdes.

Established in memory of his wife, the scholarship fund, known as "The Fred G. Smith Golden Rule Trust Fund," was announced after Smith's death last July. The trust fund, the largest scholarship fund in the 147-year history of BU, was valued at $3 million. It included a provision to increase its net worth to $5 million. Annual scholarships could amount to as much as $300,000.

Stipulations in the will require recipients to be academically talented and have financial need; to be residents of the township of Mt. Carmel or the boroughs of Ashland, Shenandoah or Mt. Carmel, and be graduates of Shenandoah Area, North Schuylkill Area, Cardinal Brennan, Mt. Carmel Area or Our Lady of Lourdes high schools.

The high schools and recipients:

Cardinal Brennan — Thomas Hornung, John Misiewicz, Kathleen Scott;

Mt. Carmel — Regina Amrich, Edward Arnoldi, Jacqueline Cuff, Joann Difranceseo, John Ficea, Christine Hirkala, Patricia Laughlin, Michael Marlow, Sandra Moncavage, Thomas Moser, Susan Serovich, Tamara Trione, Michaelyn Wascavage, Kimberly Wesoloskie;

North Schuylkill — Karen Stohn, Cindy Woodward;

Our Lady of Lourdes — Thomas McAndrew, Cynthia Megosh;

Shenandoah — Angela Breslosky, Tracy Bright, Darlene Gwiazdowski, Nanette Sacco, Linda Sawka, Debra Thompson.

University relations director appointed

Sheryl R. Bryson, formerly of the Public Affairs Office, East-West Center, Honolulu, Hawaii, is the new director of university relations at Bloomsburg University.

Following a national search, Bryson was appointed in mid-April and reported to her new position on June 2. She replaces Jessie McCoy, who resigned this past December to become assistant city planner at Chesapeake, Virginia.

"Sheryl Bryson is an excellent choice," comments BU President Harry Ausprich. "Not only is she well-qualified in general public relations endeavors, but she has special skills in writing, editing, management, teaching and research. She'll be a great asset to our Institutional Advancement team."

BRYSON

Bryson joined the East-West Center in July 1979 and became a senior editor in the Publications Office in 1982. In that capacity, she was in charge of publications for the Environment and Policy Institute and the Resource Systems Institute, along with supervising four other editors. In early 1985, she became head of the publication section in the Public Affairs Office. She has been supervising and directing the publications that describe the East-West Center and its work to a variety of audiences.

In addition to her duties at the East-West Center, from July 1979 to July 1980 she was associated with the University of Hawaii as an editor and writer with the Publications and Information Office. From 1982 through spring 1986, she lectured and taught a newswriting course each semester at the university.

After receiving her bachelor of arts degree in journalism from Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa, in 1967, Bryson earned her master of science degree in journalism and mass communication from Iowa State University in 1977 with a prize-winning thesis concerning readership of a special interest magazine.

From February 1968 to July 1970, she held positions as an assistant editor with Adhesives Age magazine in New York and as an editor with the Register and Tribune Syndicate of Des Moines.

Bryson was associated with Iowa State University for the next nine years. She started as an editor and proofreader with the institution's University Press and then joined the Department of Journalism and Mass Communication as a part-time instructor. She later became a graduate teaching assistant and later a full-time instructor. In her last year at Iowa State, she was associate editor and information specialist with the Iowa Agriculture and Home Economics Experiment Station.

In recent years, Bryson has been involved in several professional activities pertaining to her field and has published a variety of articles. Her professional memberships include: Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication, Society for Scholarly Publishing, Scientists' Institute for Public Information and Council of Biology Editors, Inc.

Bank gives $10,000

An unrestricted gift of $10,000 has been pledged by the Commonwealth Bank and Trust Company, N.A., to the Bloomsburg University Foundation at the rate of $2,500 a year over the next four years, William D. Davis, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of the bank, has announced.

The Bloomsburg University Foundation, established in 1970 as a non-profit education corporation, was reactivated by BU President Harry Ausprich last December. Its solicited gifts and grants are used to assist the university in carrying out its educational missions.

In making the announcement, Davis said, "Our institution is pleased to make this financial gift in support of Bloomsburg University's educational goals. An investment in higher education today should help provide greater prosperity for the entire region in future years."

Expressing appreciation for the gift, Dr. Ausprich commented, "The Commonwealth Bank's gift is very generous and an indication of the kind of support this community and region is providing to our university. Businesses and industries have responded very positively to the Foundation's requests of which we are appreciative."

New department formed

In the works for three to four years, a new department has joined the College of Arts and Sciences. On July 1, the Department of Mass Communication began operations.

"The new department draws the existing journalism courses out of the English Department and merges them with the mass communication courses from the Department of Communication Studies," said John P. Maittien-Harris, the chairman of the new department. The department will consist of major sequences including journalism, telecommunications (radio and television), film, public relations, and advertising.

The department's chairman is almost as new to the University as the department. About to start his second year of teaching at Bloomsburg, Maittien-Harris has a heavy background in journalism and mass communication. Having spent the past 13 years teaching journalism, public relations, and mass communication courses, Maittien-Harris hails from Australia.

He began his career as a newspaperman. A veteran of government and finance reporting, he became a copyeditor for a large Australian financial paper, similar to the Wall Street Journal. He then spent 15 years in corporate public relations. During his first year at Bloomsburg, he taught journalism courses in the English Department. As chairman of the new department, with a staff of seven professors, he has to move slowly at first.

"It will be three to four years before the program completely takes over," said Maittien-Harris. "There are students under the previous programs who will be allowed to finish under the guidelines they started with."

He added that there will be a minimum 2.5 GPA requirement and a cap of 225 students in the department. Currently there are 270 mass communication students on campus, but none will be eliminated. Over the next four years, the number will drop to the 225 cap.

New faculty members named for fall

Faculty appointments for 1986-1987 have been announced by President Harry Ausprich:

Christopher P. Hallen, Dover, N.H., assistant professor of chemistry. He comes to BU from the University of New Hampshire, where he taught three years in the department of chemistry. He was awarded his B.S. degree in chemistry from Assumption College, Worcester, Mass. He is currently in a doctoral program in analytical chemistry at the University of New Hampshire at Durham, N.H.

Emeric Schultz, assistant professor of chemistry, comes from the University of Maine. He previously taught at Carroll College, Waukesha, Wis., and at the University of Illinois. His degrees, a B.A. in chemistry and a Ph.D. in biochemistry, were earned at the University of California at Berkeley and the University of Illinois at Urbana, respectively.

Mary Ann Cegielsky, instructor of nursing, received her R.N. in nursing from Ashland State Hospital School of Nursing in 1973 and her B.S. degree in nursing from Penn State in 1976. She is currently enrolled in a master's degree in nursing program at Villanova University. She had been an instructor in mental health nursing at Pottsville Hospital School of Nursing.

Elaine K. Francis, instructor of nursing, was awarded her bachelor's degree in nursing from the University of Kansas and her master's in nursing from the University of Utah. She had been nurse-midwife in private practice with OB-GYN Associates, P.C., in Aurora, Colorado.

Juan Jose Liebana, instructor of languages and cultures, earned his bachelor's equivalency in Spanish literature from the University of Madrid and his master's degree in modern language education from Florida International University. He is currently enrolled in a Spanish doctoral program at Penn State.

A. Alejandro Bernal, assistant professor of languages and cultures, was an assistant professor of Spanish at DePauw University in Indiana. He earned his B.A in literature, linguistics and education from Catholic University of Valparaiso, Chile; his M.A. degree in foreign languages and literature from the University of Wisconsin, and his Ph.D. in Spanish from Indiana University.

Carol B. Burns, assistant professor of art, was associated with the Capital Children's Museum in Washington, D.C., until last October. Her B.S. degree in art education was received from Penn State, her M.A. in fine arts from the University of Northern Colorado, and her master of fine arts from Cranbrook Academy of Art in Michigan.

Edward D. Huthnance, associate professor of mathematics and computer science, has been an associate professor at Midwestern State University in Texas since 1982. He earned a B.S. in physics, an M.S. in applied math and a Ph.D. in mathematics at Georgia Institute of Technology.

Mark R. Jelinek, assistant professor of music, will come to Bloomsburg from Temple (Arizona) Union School District where he has been orchestra director. He received both his bachelor's and master's degrees in music education from Eastern New Mexico University.

Lucille S. Rosholt, instructor of music, previously served as director of music at First Presbyterian Church of Bloomsburg and as a part-time instructor at BU. She earned her bachelor's and master's degrees in music education from the University of Michigan.

Lensing 'misses' N-disaster

(Editor's Note: The following article about Ellen Lensing, retired BU faculty member, was written by Bill Norris for The Transylvania Times in Brevard, N.C.

Most Americans know of the nuclear disaster that struck the power plant at Chernobyl in the Soviet Union on April 26 through the media coverage given the tragedy, but one American from right here in Transylvania County was actually over there right when it happened.

Ellen Lensing, a retired educator who has been living here for several years, has just returned from a 15-day tour of the Soviet Union and Central Asia, and the nuclear accident happened while she was there. As a matter of fact, the group she was was touring with was headed for Kiev, only 80 miles south of Chernobyl, when they first got word of the tragedy.

"We had left Moscow and were in the city of Bakhara enjoying the big May Day festivities there on May 1 when we heard what had happened. The first word we had was when the officials in charge of our tour asked us the addresses of and how to reach our next of kin. At first we didn't know what for, then it was explained that they simply wanted to tell them that we were all right. Then our tour was diverted back to Moscow since we couldn't continue on to Kiev," she explained.

"It was still very secretive to us, and we really didn't know just how bad things were until we reached London on our return trip home. I'm still not certain that we know how bad things really were over there, but it sure is good to be home again here in Transvylvania County," she smiled.

Flirting with a nuclear disaster is not new for Ellen Lensing. She was still actively teaching in Pennsylvania, only 80 miles from Three Mile Island when the nuclear accident occurred there in 1979.

"Maybe it's just something about me that attracts these things. I'm going to have to get some sort of radiation protection," she chuckled.

Other than the Chernobyl disaster, she thoroughly enjoyed the tour of the Soviet Union. "I didn't feel confined at all, and even though there were naturally a few places where we were not allowed to go, we were free to go shopping in their stores and see many of their famous sites with no restraints. I found the people there very anxious to communicate, and they tried very hard to accommodate us as best they could. I would not hesitate to go over there again."

Another event highlighted Ellen Lensing's trip to the Soviet Union. While in Bakhara awaiting the return trip to Moscow, she and her tour roommate were enjoying the big May Day parade, similar to the Fourth of July celebration in this country.

"We had really enjoyed watching all the color and marching units that always accompany a May Day parade in Russia, and we were trying to get across the street when a traffic policeman saw us and misinterpreted what we were trying to do. He thought we were members of the parade, so he diverted everything so that we could get in. We decided to go along with him, so we joined the parade, marching through the mile-long route, smiling and waving to the crowd just like we belonged there.

"It was really lots of fun, and when we returned to tour headquarters we enjoyed watching the expressions of the others' faces when we told them that we had not only seen the parade, but had actually been in it."

The mile-long walk along the parade route was not trouble at all to the former Brevard College instructor, who is an avid hiker. She is a member of the Pisgah Hikers Club and regularly goes on scheduled hikes. That group has already honored her by presenting a hiking shirt inscribed with the wording, "Survivor of Chernobyl," across the front.

So while very few Americans can claim survival from nuclear disasters at both Three Mile Island and Chernobyl, there are probably none who can claim that and actual participation in a May Day parade in Russia, as well.

New degree offered

The degree program of bachelor of arts in social welfare has been approved for Bloomsburg University by the Board of Governors of the State System of Higher Education. The BU Council of Trustees previously approved the program.

The BA in social welfare will be offered through the department of sociology and social welfare. According to G. Alfred Forsyth, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, a growing number of social welfare students who would normally get their degree as an option in sociology can now graduate with a bachelor of arts in social welfare as early as 1988.

In September 1985, sociology majors numbered 141, a 47 percent increase over the previous fall semester. Eighty-four of these majors are social welfare option students, a 62 percent increase over the previous year.

Graduates of the program are qualified to work in mental health/mental retardation programs, children and youth agencies, drug/alcohol treatment or recreation programs.

Provost steps down

Dr. Larry Jones, provost and vice president for academic affairs at BU, will step down from both posts on July 31, according to BU President Harry Ausprich.

Jones will begin "a special administrative assignment for the university" at the end July. He had served as interim president from the time Dr. James McCormick left BU in 1983 to become chancellor of the State System of Higher Education until President Ausprich took office last July. He had been one of three finalists for the presidency.

The post will be filled from within on an interim basis for 1986-1987. A permanent successor will be named after a local and nationwide search, with a target date of July 1, 1987.

Trustees extend president's contract

The Bloomsburg University Council of Trustees extended the contract of President Harry Ausprich from three to four years after a satisfactory evaluation of his first year in office.

"I look forward to many, many long years of service to Bloomsburg," said Ausprich, who came to BU in July 1985.

Ausprich was initially given a three-year contract; with the extension, his contract will now run until June 30, 1989.

According to Janice Fitzgerald, spokeswoman for the State System of Higher Education (SSHE), all presidents of the state-owned universities must be evaluated annually, either formally or informally.

Council Chairman John Dorin said that Ausprich's evaluation was "informal." The evaluation consisted of a series of questions to the BU Alumni Association, the student government, and BU representatives of two statewide unions: one for college professors and the other for non-instructional staff.

"Dr. Ausprich has performed satisfactorily this past year," concluded trustee Stanley Rakowsky, who headed the evaluation committee.

Society honors business profs

Three faculty members from the Bloomsburg University College of Business have been recognized as outstanding professors by the graduating seniors of Delta Mu Delta, the national honor society in business administration.

The professors honored were Dr. Anne Batory, assistant professor of marketing and management; Dr. Bernard Dill, professor of finance and business law; and Charles Chapman, associate professor of business administration.

Each honors student in a major is asked to select the individual from the business faculty who has most closely met the criteria. Batory was selected by the students in marketing, Dill by the finance majors, and Chapman by the students majoring in accounting and management.

According to Brian Hargraves, president of Delta Mu Delta, the society created the awards not only to recognize the outstanding professors, but to indicate to the university community what kinds of professors are most appreciated by the top students.

Dowd, Dedea win Rochester award

During the 1985-86 academic year, a major contribution was donated to Bloomsburg University to initiate an endowed scholarship in honor of ex-Bloomsburg football player, Vernon Rochester.

As a freshman starting running back, Rochester was selected to the All-Pennsylvania Conference Eastern Division Second Team. During his sophomore year, Rochester made the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) Honor Roll for his amazing 201 total offensive yards against Lock Haven. In the fourth game of the 1983 season, Rochester sustained a spinal injury, which unfortunately resulted in a quadriplegic condition.

The Husky football team has since dedicated itself to Rochester and his overall recovery. After losing the first three games of the 1983-84 season, the team won five consecutive games and played for the Eastern Conference crown. In 1984, the team won the Eastern Division of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference and played in the state championship game. The 1985-86 team not only captured the state championship but was also awarded the coveted Lambert Cup and was chosen as the ECAC's "Team of the Year." To add to an already brilliant season, the Huskies advanced to the semi-final game of the NCAA Division II Championships.

In addition to being associated with the tremendously successful football program here at Bloomsburg, Rochester is an inspirational source both on and off the field. One only has to look on the sidelines at the football games to see Rochester cheering on the team. He continues to overcome his physical set-back by being involved in many extra-curricular activities both on campus and in the local community. Rochester just recently co-hosted the local Easter Seal Telethon which was broadcasted from BU's television studios. Moreover, since he resumed his studies in the communication field, he has maintained a "B" average.

For his courageous efforts, the "Vernon Rochester Most Courageous Athlete Award" has been established by a former employee of the university. The annual scholarship will be presented by Vernon himself to the player (or players) who has displayed the most courage during the previous football season as determined by the football coaches and physical therapist. The scholarship is to be used by the student-athlete to pay part of his educational expenses at BU. This year, Rochester presented the award to Joe Dowd and Jay Dedea at the Husky Club's annual Day of Champions Banquet, held on May 3.

With the contributions received from interested alumni and friends, the scholarship will become a self-sufficient entity based on the interest accrued in the scholarship account. With this in mind, if you wish to contribute, make your check payable to the Vernon Rochester Award, and send it to the Development Office, Carver Hall, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

Should you have any questions, please feel free to contact either John S. Miika, dean of student development, at (717) 389-4199 or Tom Calder, assistant director of development/athletics, at (717) 389-4663.

Fellow coaches honor McLaughlin

Eli McLaughlin, former Bloomsburg University men's swimming and diving coach, was honored by fellow coaches of the Pennsylvania Conference at the recent championships held at Clarion University.

A "Coaches Award" plaque in appreciation of McLaughlin's 23 years of contributions to the conference swimming and diving program, was presented to Stanley Rakowsky, who represented McLaughlin at the meet. McLaughlin was ill at the time and requested Rakowsky, a former team manager and currently a BU trustee, accept the award on his behalf.

It was only the second time in the history of the conference that this award was given. Ed Norris, former West Chester University coach, received the award in 1969.

McLaughlin retired from coaching in September 1985 and retired from teaching in June.

McLAUGHLIN

In his 23 seasons, the West Chester graduate produced a national champion and had nine different swimmers and one diver gain All-American status in 130 events at the NCAA Championships. He also achieved the "Master Coach" award in 1982, presented by the College Swimming Coaches Association of America.

His teams finished among the top three squads in the Pennsylvania State Athletic Conference (PSAC) Championships on 14 occassions, and he coached 15 conference champions in 27 events. He was voted as the PSAC "Coach of the Year" by his peers in 1979 and served as host for five PSAC Championships.

As historian for the PSAC Men's Swimming and Diving Coaches Association, he compiled the "PSAC Profiles," a manual of the sport in the conference from 1959-1983. The publication was the result of many hours of research to preserve the records established in PSAC championship action.

In addition to his coaching responsibilities in swimming and diving, McLaughlin was an assistant football coach from 1961-63, assistant baseball coach in 1964 and 1965, head baseball coach in 1967 and the director of aquatics until the fall term of 1983.

Gardner in new post

Veteran Bloomsburg University swimming and diving coach Mary Gardner has relinquished those duties to assume the role as the school's associate athletic director. Gardner completed her 12th season in charge of the Huskies' swimming and diving program and will assume her new duties on July 1, replacing Joanne McComb, who retired after 26 years at Bloomsburg.

Gardner was the only women's swimming and diving coach in the history of the sport at the university and established a record of 86-28. She has coached 44 performers to multiple All-American honors as well as directing many Pennsylvania Conference champions.

Gardner joined the BU Department of Health, Physical Education and Athletics in 1974 and initiated the program that winter. In just the fifth season of collegiate competition, she led her 1978-79 unit to the school's lone undefeated campaign, posting a record of 10-0.

Over the past five seasons under Gardner, the Huskies registered a dual mark of 42-6 and have been separated from the Pennsylvania Conference Championship by only powerful Clarion in each of those years. The conference runner-up showings have been enhanced by solid performances at the national championships by her teams. This season her squad, dominated by underclassmen, finished 14th among the country's NCAA Division II schools.

She also served as Bloomsburg's initial head field hockey coach from 1974-77 and recorded 20 victories, 12 losses and nine ties. In addition to her coaching responsibilities, Gardner has been the university's director of aquatics, handling the direction of both the Nelson Fieldhouse natatorium and the Centennial Gymnasium pool and Bloomsburg's extensive recreational swimming and diving activities.

For the past four years, she has also been the Director of Equal Opportunity in Sports (DEOS) at the university.

GARDNER

A native of Hatboro, Pa., she received both her bachelor of science and master of education degrees at East Stroudsburg University.

While at ESU, she lettered four years in field hockey and co-captained the Warriors for all four seasons in swimming and diving. Gardner was a four-time EAIAW regional champion and three-time AIAW national champion in the breaststroke. She was undefeated in dual competition in the breaststroke during her collegiate career. She is a member of the East Stroudsburg Athletic Hall of Fame.

Gardner and her husband, Dean, reside at Berwick R.D. 2 with their children, Kaitlin and Timothy.

Two newcomers on grid schedule

Norfolk State and Slippery Rock are newcomers to the Bloomsburg University football schedule in 1986, which has been announced by head coach Pete Adrian.

The defending Pennsylvania Conference champion Huskies once again have a schedule that features five home contests with Lock Haven visiting Robert B. Redman Stadium first, that game set for September 20 at 1:30 p.m. PC Eastern Division rival East Stroudsburg will visit on October 4 followed by Mansfield on October 18 in the school's 59th annual Homecoming contest.

Two home games are set for the month of November as Slippery Rock takes the place of California (PA) on the schedule on November 1 in a 1 p.m. meeting, and Kutztown rounds out the PC East action in another 1 p.m. contest on November 8.

Bloomsburg will open the campaign on the road traveling to mid-state rival Shippensburg on September 13. The only night game on the schedule will be Friday, September 26, when the Huskies visit West Chester. Other road games are slated for October 11 at Cheyney and October 25 at Millersville.

The Huskies, who posted an 11-0 regular season mark in 1985 and finished 12-1 after losing in the national semi-finals, also travel to Norfolk State on November 15. The Spartans replace Buffalo State on the schedule and the game will take place in NSU's 32,000 seat Foreman Field.

Coach resigns

Sue Hibbs, Bloomsburg University women's basketball coach for the past several years, resigned recently from her coaching position. Hibbs had led the Huskies to the Pennsylvania Conference playoffs last season.

Retired prof dies

Dorothy McHale, a former assistant professor of English at BU, died June 9 at Geisinger Medical Center, Danville. McHale, a resident of Bloomsburg, was 71 years old.

Born April 13, 1915, in Pittsburgh, she was the daughter of the late John and Jan O'Connor. McHale was employed at BU from 1964-1982.

She was a member of St. Columba Catholic Church, Bloomsburg.

Surviving are her husband of 24 years, Michael J. McHale, and a brother, John O'Connor III of Pittsburgh.

Professors honored

Five Bloomsburg University faculty members were honored as outstanding instructors by the Arts and Sciences Student Council.

The faculty members are Dr. John Baird, professor of psychology; Dr. Duane Braun, associate professor of geography and earth science; Dr. David Minderhout, professor of philosophy and anthropology; Dr. James Sperry, professor of history; and Dr. Marci Woodruff, assistant professor of communication studies.

The awards were given by the students and G. Alfred Forsyth, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, at a reception at the Hotel Magee.

BU professors published

Bloomsburg University is well represented in a variety of publications by various members of the English Department.

Glenn Sadler is in the final stages of preparation of an important book for the Modern Language Association (the English profession's most prestigious organization), OPTIONS FOR TEACHING CHILDREN'S LITERATURE. His volume includes essays by prominent scholars on the teaching of children's literature on campuses across the country. Also, he has written articles on George MacDonald and C. S. Lewis for a forthcoming reference work published by MacMillan entitled WRITERS FOR CHILDREN.

Susan Rusinko's book, TOM STOPPARD, a study of the plays of one of England's major living dramatists, is her second in the Twayne English Author Series (published in paperback and hardbound editions February, 1986). Her work in progress is Volume 5 of A HISTORY OF BRITISH DRAMA and covers the period from 1950 to the present. She reviews books about drama regularly for WORLD LITERATURE TODAY, a review journal, and she has published reviews and articles in MODERN DRAMA, THE SHAW REVIEW, and THE BERNARD SHAW ANNUAL.

The summer of 1985 saw the release of a five-volume CRITICAL SURVEY OF DRAMA (Salem Press), which included the following articles: an overview of American drama from its beginning and an essay on James Bridie by Rusinko; critical essays on John Drinkwater, George Lillo, John Mortimer, Lennox Robinson and James Shirley by Gerald Strauss; essays by Michael McCully on James Sheridan Knowles and by William Baillie on John Heywood.

The forthcoming MASTERPLOTS II, American Fiction Series, includes review articles by Virginia Duck on May Sarton's THE SMALL ROOM and James Baldwin's IF BEALE STREET COULD TALK; by Rusinko on Zelda Fitzgerald's SAVE ME THE WALTZ, Djuna Barnes' NIGHTWOOD, Mary McCarthy's THE GROUP and Joyce Carol Oates' UNHOLY LOVES; by Strauss on Ross Macdonald's THE UNDERGROUND MAN and THE LONG GOODBYE, Bernard Malamud's A NEW LIFE; and by Danny Robinson on Edith Wharton's VALLEY OF DECISION.

Rusinko is also represented in MAGILL'S SURVEY OF CINEMA: FOREIGN LANGUAGE FILMS by her critical analysis of the 1968 award-winning Czechoslovakian film, LOVES OF A BLONDE and in MAGILL'S CINEMA ANNUAL—1986 by a review of AGNES OF GOD. Strauss' essay review of Matthew Bruccoli's biography of Ross MacDonald appears in MAGILL'S LITERARY ANNUAL—1985.

Currently available in Andruss Library are Sadler's two-volume edition of George MacDonald's fairy tales and his article on MacDonald in TWENTIETH CENTURY CHILDREN'S WRITERS; Rusinko's TERENCE RATTIGAN and TOM STOPPARD; Baillie's A CHOICE TERNARY OF ENGLISH PLAYS; Duck's article on American Indian novelist, Jamake Highwater, in CRITICAL SURVEY OF LONG FICTION, articles on English dramatists Terence Rattigan and Benn Wolfe Levy by Rusinko and on John Drinkwater and John Mortimer by Strauss in the DICTIONARY OF LITERARY BIOGRAPHY: MODERN BRITISH DRAMATISTS; and CRITICAL SURVEY OF DRAMA, with contributions by Baillie, McCully, Rusinko and Strauss as mentioned above.

ASPA unit wins award

The Bloomsburg University student chapter of the American Society for Personnel Administrators (ASPA) has been named a Merit Award Chapter, according to John Dittrich, dean of the College of Business.

The award is in recognition of the quality of the program conducted by the chapter.

Dittrich said there are more than 30,000 executives who are members of ASPA and more than 200 student chapters. Less than 10 percent of the chapters will receive recognition.

"It is a tribute to the students and their faculty advisor, Prof. Howard Kinsinger, that their efforts should be noted by such a distinguished group. The visibility and distinction brought to Bloomsburg University when they receive the award at the national convention in New Orleans will be immeasurable."

Two officers from the local chapter were planning to travel to New Orleans for the national convention June 15.

experimental and advanced clinical psychology at Susquehanna.

Dr. Fisher was certified for private practice as a psychologist in 1961. She was also the first clinical psychologist and director of treatment at the State Correctional Institution at Muncy on weekends and summers from 1947 to 1959. She became a full-time psychologist at the prison from 1959 until her retirement in 1972.

Dr. Fisher was a pioneer in many ways. She was the first teacher to use the Project Method in the Sunbury schools in 1925; she organized and supervised the first class of day care for trainable retarded children; she was the first supervisor of all special classes; she developed the system of testing in all grades; she was the first to set up a program of filing and keeping records in each individual's file; she was the first to make a city-wide school evaluation; she compiled a directory of community resources of Sunbury; she was the first state president of the Pennsylvania Chapter of the International Council for Exceptional Children, and wrote to state education departments on the East Coast, urging them to establish classes for retarded children.

She also served as director of Region III of the ICEC; she was the first president of the local Sigma Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma International Honor Society for Teachers; she broadcast radio programs for the ill, shut-ins and children; she appeared on television at the World's Fair in Chicago; and was Sunbury's first guidance director and school psychologist certified by the State Department of Education.

After her retirement from Muncy in 1972, Dr. Fisher served as a volunteer at Sunbury Community Hospital; was president of the Sunbury Business and Professional Women; was president of the Women's Society of Christian Service and president of the Carrie M. Purdy Missionary Circle, both of St. John's United Methodist Church, where she has been a member since 1908.

She is a member of the American and Pennsylvania psychological associations, Soroptimist International, Sigma Alpha Iota Music Sorority of Susquehanna University, Salvation Army board, American Association of Retired Persons, National Retired Teachers, Eastern Star 266, Messiah Shrine 44, Pennsylvania Association of Retired State Employees, Pennsylvania Retired Teachers Association; American Association of University Women, Mental Health Association, Pennsylvania Council for Research in Mental Retardation, Triangle Club of Selinsgrove, Mary Derr Rockefeller Auxiliary, Susquehanna University Auxiliary, Pennsylvania Association for Retarded Citizens and the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association.

Dr. Fisher's biography has been published in "Who's Who of American Women," "National Register of Educational Researchers," "Who's Who in the East," "Dictionary of International Biography," "World's Who's Who of Women," "International Who's Who of Intellectuals" and "Who's Who of American Women."

She has received many awards and recognitions, including a certificate of merit for distinguished service as a teacher, civic leader and psychologist from the "Dictionary of International Biography"; civic appreciation award from the Sunbury Salvation Army, and a public service award for outstanding contributions to human welfare from the Pennsylvania Psychological Association.

BU athletes hear Danny Litwhiler

BU alumnus Danny Litwhiler '38 reminisced about his baseball-playing days at Bloomsburg State Teacher's College and the Husky Club honored BU's outstanding athletes at this year's 12th annual Day of Champions sports banquet.

Litwhiler, a former professional baseball player and currently a minor league batting coach for the Cincinnati Reds, was the featured speaker at the dinner held May 6.

A native of Ringtown, Litwhiler spent 11 seasons in the major leagues with the Philadelphia Phillies, St. Louis Cardinals, Boston Braves and Cincinnati Reds. He had a career batting average of .281 with 982 hits in 1,057 games. He also won two Gold Gloves for his fielding and was the first outfielder in history to play a full season of 150 games or more without making an error.

Litwhiler was also head baseball coach at Michigan State for 19 seasons, compiling a record of 488-388, and at Florida State, where his teams went 189-81. He was also one of the original inductees into the BU Athletic Hall of Fame.

Litwhiler told the BU student-athletes that his background at Bloomsburg is what carried him through the majors. "When I was coaching, I told my students, 'Get your degrees,'" he said. Litwhiler coached major league stars Steve Garvey and Kirk Gibson.

He also recalled Dr. Haas and Dr. Nelson who helped him decide to go into professional baseball. "Dr. Nelson gave me money for a bus ticket and bats to go to my first professional team," Litwhiler said.

Litwhiler's speech included many humorous stories of his college days, including the story of how he got to be called "Danny." There was a professor named Danny Hartline teaching at the time Litwhiler was in college. "He was a grand old man," Litwhiler said. "And he was called 'Danny.' So I decided I didn't want to be called just 'Dan' anymore!"

But there was a touching side to his story, too. It came when he mentioned that BU had named the university's baseball field the "Danny Litwhiler Field." "I've gotten many awards before but nothing gave me as much of a thrill as seeing my name on that field up there," he said. "Twelve years of Litwhilers played on that field."

Following Litwhiler's speech, awards were given to BU's outstanding athletes.

Rick Bonomo was honored with the Danny Litwhiler Outstanding Underclassmen Male Athlete Award. Bonomo won his second straight NCAA Division I national wrestling championship this season.

REUNION — In the audience when Danny Litwhiler '38 (left) returned as the guest speaker for the Day of Champions Sports Banquet in May was his former roommate, Francis "Doc" Sell '35

Joan Wojtowicz was the recipient of the Joanne McComb Outstanding Underclassmnn Female Athlete Award. Wojtowicz won three NCAA Division II national swimming championships this year.

Tony Woods received the Robert Redman Outstanding Senior Male Athlete Award. Woods was an All-American defensive back on BU's state champion football team.

Karen Hertzler was selected as the outstanding senior female athlete. Hertzler earned All-American honors in both field hockey and softball.

George Landis was named BU Coach of the Year. Landis, now the head football coach at Bucknell University, led the Husky football team to a 12-1 record and a trip to the NCAA Division II national semifinals.

The Vernon Rochester Most Courageous Athlete Award went to two people — Joe Dowd, wide receiver on the Husky football team, and Jay Dedea, quarterback for the Huskies.

Glenn Noack received the Time Markets/McDowell Oil Basketball Award, Rick Bonomo received the Good as Gold Wrestling Award and Frank Sheptock received the Berwick Forge and Fabricating Football Award.

Don Bridenstine of Liberty Chevrolet received the Husky Club Outstanding Service Award for initiating the automobile lending program and for his overall support to the BU athletic program.

Joanne McComb, who retired at the end of this academic year, was honored for her 26 years of service at BU. McComb was the associate athletic director at BU. In tribute to her service, the outstanding underclassman female athlete award was named in her honor.

It was also announced at the banquet that BU assistant wrestling coach Carl Poll was named assistant wrestling coach of the year by Wrestling USA magazine.

LUTHER PECK '37 was featured in a recent newsletter of the Hospital Auxiliary, State University of New York at Stony Brook: "The tall, lanky, gentle man sporting a volunteer's uniform approaches, wearing a soft smile. His quiet movement belies the strong spirit, longevity and tenacity of his service. Luther Peck is a volunteer par excellence. Having clocked over 3,000 hours at University Hospital, Lou is the uncontested champ!

"Lou grew up in a farming town in Pennsylvania and was graduated from Bloomsburg State Teachers College. He came to New York City in 1937, served in the Army for three years, married and had three children. His first wife died. In 1965, after being introduced by their mutual children, Lou married his present wife, Claire. The children, Dianne, Carole, Roger, Deborah and Lewis, who were friends, together with their own ten children, now make a big, happy family."

CARMEL SIRIANNI '44 is an unopposed candidate for re-election to the State House of Representatives from the 111th District.

The Hop Bottom lawmaker cited her strong support for farmers over the years and noted her recent service on the Joint State Committee on Milk Marketing. This committee, composed of consumers, milk dealers and farmers, after extensive research, decided to continue the Milk Marketing Board.

She also noted she was instrumental in securing an additional $2.6 million in compensation for those farmers who were left uncompensated for their milk when Schepps Cheese filed for bankruptcy because the Indemnity Fund was short of cash.

"I've always made a point in serving my constituents to be forthright in my views, open and accessible to everyone and willing to do what it takes to solve people's problems," she said.

Another of her legislative goals has been to force the Department of Environmental Resources to recognize, identify and clean up illegal dumping in the district. She also referred to her strong stand against an expansion of legalized gambling in Northeastern Pennsylvania.

She serves as minority chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, is a member of the Labor Relations Committee, the Policy Committee, the Committee on Committees, and the Local Government Commission.

She has represented the 111th District, which includes Sullivan and Wyoming Counties and parts of Bradford and Susquehanna Counties, since 1975. She earned a master's degree at Bucknell University and was a high school guidance counselor before her election to the House of Representatives.

Maietta first 'Alumni Fellow'

BY DURRELL REICHLEY
Staff Writer

Growing up in a family of 10 showed Dr. Donald Maietta '50 the importance of caring for others. "The older children helped care for the younger children," Maietta says.

This caring attitude has stayed with Maietta throughout his entire life. He has spent 36 years in the field of special education and is currently an associate professor of special education at Boston University.

Maietta, a former professor at Bloomsburg State College, returned to Bloomsburg in April to share his experiences with students and faculty as BU's first "Alumni Fellow in Residence." Accompanying Maietta was his wife, the former Eleanor McClintock '49.

According to Alumni Affairs Director Doug Hippenstiel, the Alumni Fellows Program was initiated this spring by the BU Alumni Association. Under the program, an outstanding alumnus/alumna will be invited back to campus each semester to share his/her experiences with students, faculty, staff and other alumni.

During his stay, Maietta toured the BU campus and met with faculty and students in the special education and communication disorders department.

Maietta was impressed by the attitude of the special education faculty "The faculty members have a real passion for what they're doing," he says. "They relate well with the students."

He also enjoyed meeting with some of the student officers of the various clubs and organizations in the special education department. "It's good to be an active student," Maietta says. "A student needs to do things outside of the classroom to add to his or her development."

Maietta's interest in special education blossomed while studying speech pathology and English at BSC. He says he enjoyed doing clinical work and reading various special education journals.

Upon graduation from BSC in 1950, Maietta received a fellowship to do graduate work at the University of Pittsburgh. At Pitt, he studied speech pathology, psychology and audiology, and continued doing clinical work. There's one particular case which he still remembers today.

"There was a steelworker who lost his voice in an accident," Maietta says. "He was hit in the throat by a hot steel bar. I helped the man regain his voice. It made me feel so good."

Since receiving his master's and doctorate degrees from Pitt, he has been involved in three major areas of special education: instruction, research and writing, and community service.

Maietta has taught special education at Boston University for the last 20 years. During his tenure at Boston, Maietta has taught several courses in Europe as part of the Boston University Overseas Graduate Program. He has taught in such European cities as Stuttgart, Munich, Frankfurt, Heidelberg, Naples and Nuremberg.

Prior to teaching at Boston, Maietta served from 1955-1965 as a member of the BSC faculty. He was also an instructor at West Liberty State College for two years.

Maietta has also been very active in the area of research and writing. He has had over 30 publications and papers and is currently working on several more.

He also keeps himself busy with community service. Maietta has served as a consultant with several publishing companies and with several Boston-area school districts.

Maietta's wife, Eleanor, was employed as a teacher after her graduation from BSC but quit teaching to raise the Maiettas' two sons, Chris and Eric. Today she helps her husband with his publication manuscripts and also enjoys oil painting.

Reflecting on his career in education, Maietta says, "Students are the binding link. When the students learn, the professor benefits. The energy, passion, and desire to learn is great when everything comes together."

HENRY DOBSON '63 has become one of 15 high school teachers in the U.S. to be recognized as distinguished teachers of honorstudents by the University Scholars Program at Penn State University. The award was based on the testimony of Dobson'sformer students which, for him, is the most rewarding part.

"In the classroom I gave them my best shot," said Dobson. "I wanted them to learn the basic skills and also to develop enthusiasm to continue to learn. I see myself as a life-long learner."

After high school, the Mt. Carmel native took a year's worth of engineering classes at Penn State before serving 18 months in the Army.

He received a degree in math and physics education at Bloomsburg in 1963, then got his master's degree in physics at Syracuse University in 1968.

After graduate school, he took courses at the University of Rochester, the University of California at Berkeley, Columbia University, and the State University of New York at Brockport. Along the way, he got a boost from nine National Science Foundation scholarships.

In 1980 he returned to PSU to receive his doctorate in curriculum and instruction for science education.

The ALUMNI QUARTERLY

Boyd Buckingham honored

The ALUMNI QUARTERLY

Vol. 86, No 3 | Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania | December 1986

HAPPY BIRTHDAY — The Alumni Board acted to name the Alumni House in honor of Howard F. Fenstemaker '12 just in time for his birthday. Paying a visit to tell him the good news were Mary Anne Klemkosky '59 (second from right), Association president; and Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs. Also shown is Mrs. Fenstemaker. (Story on page 8)

AGREEMENT SIGNED — Effective January 1, 1987, the Annual Fund will be conducted by the Bloomsburg University Foundation. Participating in the signing ceremony were Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, president of the Alumni Association; Jane Gittler '72, vice chairperson of the BU Foundation; and Dr. Harry Ausprich, president of the University

Foundation, alumni join forces for BU

An agreement signed October 17 clears the way for the Alumni Annual Fund to be coordinated and administered by the Development Office in conjunction with the Bloomsburg University Foundation, effective January 1, 1987.

The Alumni Board of Directors agreed unanimously at its June meeting to join forces with the Foundation in its quest for private support of the University. The Foundation was reactivated by President Harry Ausprich in January 1986 and has raised more than a half million dollars in gifts and pledges since that time.

As part of the agreement, the Alumni Association will receive a guaranteed annual budget from the Foundation, with a percentage increase each year to fund traditional alumni programs and to provide new services.

In a letter to alumni, Mary Anne Klemkosky '59, president of the Alumni Association, said, "We look forward to your continued support of and investment in the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association so that we may increase our services to you and all alumni."

With the merging of the two funds, the BU Development Office will serve as the coordinating body for all university fundraising activities and programs to optimize fundraising efforts, according to Anthony Ianiero, director of development.

A message from President Ausprich

It was a great pleasure for Lorraine and me to welcome many of you back to campus for Homecoming 1986. Learning to know more of you each year is a true joy for us. You have each helped to make Bloomsburg a special university, and we are proud to be a part of it.

This academic year has already seen several new "firsts." Our enrollment is the strongest in the institution's history, especially with upperclass students returning in greater proportion than expected. The University Scholars Program is well underway, and the Celebrity Artist Series, a new thrust in cultural programming, successfully opened its first season.

A number of new initiatives are planned for this year, many of which you will be reading about in greater detail throughout the year. We are delighted to be working with the Alumni Association in the transfer of the Alumni Association Annual Fund to the Development Office. The new Annual Fund Drive will help us coordinate more effectively our fundraising efforts.

Two new academic programs are moving forward. The Board of Governors recently approved the bachelor's degree in adult health and fitness. Special funding through the SSHE technology initiative will allow us to pursue a new degree program in health physics.

This fall we will be appointing the committees to prepare for the 1989 Middle States review and the university's sesquecentennial celebration in 1989. Plans to enhance the library facility are in the conceptual stage. Sutliff Hall renovations for the College of Business are to begin in the immediate future, and we are working with the architects on plans for classrooms, faculty offices and studios in Old Science.

The new university governance structure is being considered by the faculty. We anticipate it will be implemented this fall.

This spring I shall be teachinga communications course, and I am looking forward to developing this new relationship with some of our students. In order to expand contacts with our external constituencies, I will be visiting our trustees and community leaders in their home areas and planning more visits with our legislators.

Informal talks with many faculty and others this fall are helping me become much better acquainted with the essence of what makes Bloomsburg University special. There are many, many dedicated faculty and staff here who are committed to educating our future alumni. In the months ahead we shall be working together to strengthen your alma mater.

We do welcome your letters and visits and look forward to greeting you whenever you come to campus.

Over $650,000 raised in 1986

From January 1, 1986, through early October, Bloomsburg University, the Bloomsburg University Foundation, Inc., and the Alumni Association garnered $652,777 in gifts and pledges. Significant gifts include:

* $4,000 in china and flatware from Service America.
* $6,000 in computer equipment from Shared Medical Systems.
* $10,000 to purchase a new football scoreboard from Weller Vending and Hairport/University Cuts ($5,000 each).
* $10,000 from Columbia County Farmers National Bank, $10,000 from Commonwealth Bank and Trust Co., N.A., $10,000; $2,500 from First Eastern Bank, $10,000 from First National Bank of Berwick; $10,000 from Bloomsburg Bank-Columbia Trust Co., $4,000 from First Federal Savings and Loan; and $2,500 from United Penn Bank.
* $5,000 from Berwick Forge and Fabricating to support scholarships.
* Twelve donations to the Foundation's President's Club at $10,000 and above.
* Seven donations to the Foundation's Carver Tower Associates Club at $5,000 and above.
* Twenty-one Maroon and Gold Club memberships at $1,000 and above.

Alumni contributed more than $131,000 through the Alumni Association.

Teacher's bequest sets up scholarship

A $20,000 scholarship fund for students pursuing an undergraduate degree in nursing at Bloomsburg University has been provided in the will of a former faculty member, Helene Robertson.

Robertson, who died November 5, 1985, was a member of the BU nursing faculty from 1981 to 1985 when she taught the senior-level nursing course in community health.

The announcement of the scholarship fund was made at a luncheon in early November. Attending were two sisters of Ms. Robertson, Stephanie and Mary Ruscavage, and a niece, Donna Ruscavage. Also present were Dr. Harry Ausprich, university president, and other officials representing the administration and the nursing department.

Two $500 scholarhips from the fund will be awarded for the first time next spring to two baccalaureate nursing students. Applicants for the scholarships must be entering the junior or senior year in the nursing program, have an overall grade point average of at least 3.0 on a 4.0 scale and demonstrate financial need.

Ms. Robertson received her diploma as a registered nurse from Bridgeport (Conn.) Hospital in 1946. She earned a bachelor of science degree in education, physical and biological sciences from New York Teachers College in 1951. In 1961, she earned a master's degree in psychiatric-mental health nursing from New York University.

Ms. Robertson was active locally in the Columbia County Mental Health Association, American Association of University Women, Ss. Cyril and Methodius Church in Berwick, and the National Nursing Honor Society of Sigma Theta Tau.

SMS donates computer

For the third consecutive year, Shared Medical Systems, Inc., of Malvern, has given BU an IBM XT personal computer system with a graphic printer and color monitor valued at nearly $7,000.

Two previous gifts have been used by students, faculty and staff members of the university's computer center. The equipment received this year will be shared jointly by the office of Career Development and Placement and the Office of Cooperative Education.

Nominations sought for alumni awards

Nominations are invited for the 1986 Distinguished Service Awards which will be presented on Alumni Day, June 6, 1987.

Established in 1948, the award recognizes alumni who have distinguished themselves through professional accomplishments, service to Bloomsburg University and the Alumni Association, and/or contributions to humanity.

Nominations are also invited for Young Alumnus/Alumna of the Year. The criteria are the same, with the added dimension of "potential" or "promise." Nominees should be not be over 40 years of age by June 6, 1987.

Please send as much information about the nominee(s) as possible. Address your letter to Awards and Recognition Committee, Fenstemaker Alumni House, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

Deadline for nominations is February 1, 1987.

Foundation veep

Jane Skomsky Gittler, Class of 1972, has been named vice chairperson of the Bloomsburg University Foundation. She succeeds Katherine Hock, who resigned in June because her family business relocated to North Carolina.

Gittler is director of the Columbia-Montour Home Health Services, Inc., and serves as chairperson of the hospital review committee of the Central Pennsylvania Health Systems, Inc. A native of Berwick, she has been involved in health, hospital and family planning services since returning to the area in the late 1960s. Her husband is William F. Gittler Jr., also a member of the Class of 1972.

New members of the foundation board are Howard McKinnon, president of Berwick Forge and Fabricating; Allan M. Kluger, president of Hourigan, Kluger, Spohrer, Quinn and Myers, Wilkes-Barre; Drue M. Hummel, corporate director of Magee Enterprises; and David W. Poch, senior vice president, Commonwealth Bank and Trust Co., Williamsport.

Dick Benefield bills himself as the "Jolly Fat Man" of Hotel Magee, but behind his generous girth, behind his raspy, resonant voice, lie a lean intellect and a nimble talent for handling people.

As chairman of the Bloomsburg University Foundation, he helps many campus programs pay their rent — he says his service is part of the "civic rent" he owes his community.

"I think you have to pay your civic rent," he says over coffee in the Hotel Magee Publick House on a brisk early-autumn morning. "If you're put here and you get to live in a free country and a good community, you owe something more than your taxes. First and foremost right now, for me, is to raise money for the Bloomsburg University Foundation."

If Benefield were to calculate his civic rent by the success he's had at doing that, his bill would be paid for years to come. The Foundation, under Benefield's chairmanship, plans to raise significant funds for university programs.

In acknowledgement of his service, BU bestowed its highest honor — the University Medallion — on Benefield during commencement exercises in May. The only other recipients to date are Marco and Louise Mitrani, Bloomsburg philanthropists who established a major scholarship fund and aided in the renovation of the auditorium in Haas Center for the Arts which has been named in their honor.

In presenting the award to Benefield, BU President Harry Ausprich said the recipient "epitomizes the individual deserving of a Bloomsburg University Medallion.

"I would venture to say that everyone in the audience today knows indirectly of Mr. Benefield through his long tenure at the Hotel Magee. . . . His relationship with the University has grown to be a very strong one over the years, and we are sincerely delighted to honor him today for his many contributions and support."

(Mr. Benefield) "has been most generous in assisting the University many times and in ways not publicly acknowledged. His support in this quiet, unobtrusive manner has been most helpful to the University in meeting special needs. . . .

"His noteworthy service, community involvement, and outstanding support of the University is appreciated by all who know him."

Benefield is 60-years-old. His hotel and restaurant career began in 1946 when he worked as a meat cutter, waiter, cook and desk clerk at a State College restaurant while earning a degree in hotel administration at Penn State.

He remains active as an alumnus of that institution and has received numerous awards from the University and the Penn State Alumni Association.

Benefield, who moved to Bloomsburg in 1954 to manage the Hotel Magee, is now vice president and general manager of that well-known establishment.

BENEFIELD

As a community leader, he has served as United Way chairman, president of Bloomsburg Rotary, and district governor of Rotary International. The Rotarian of the Year award is named for him, and he was voted "Citizen of the Year" by the Bloomsburg Chamber of Commerce in 1986.

Within his profession, he has on several occasions been president of the Pennsylvania Hotel Motor Inn Association and chairman of the American Hotel and Motel Association. Within the hospitality industry he has received a number of awards, and is a member of the "Hospitality Hall of Fame."

While Benefield is proud of the recognition he has received, he is more concerned with making sure the programs he's involved with reflect excellence.

"The state pays about 50 percent of the operating costs for the university," he notes. "The other 50 percent must come from tuition and fundraising. If you just accept what the state gives you and the tuition, you're just not going to be the best. The margin of excellence has to come from somewhere else."

"Somewhere else" is the Bloomsburg University Foundation. The Foundation's members, many of whom Benefield recruited for the task, provide the money and leadership that provide the margin of excellence. He spreads his theory of civic rent wherever he goes.

Among the believers are other regional business leaders like James A. Magee, president of Magee Enterprises, and Herb Hasson, president of Milco.

"This university has many more qualified students every year than it can accept," says Benefield. The University has nearly five applicants for each space in the freshmen class.

While that figure shows that BU has exacting academic standards, says Benefield, the university must remember that its mission is essentially to provide an education to people from the middle and working classes.

He notes that hundreds of children of employees of Magee Industries, Milco, Weis Markets and other local businesses and industries have been able to get a college education because Bloomsburg University exists.

By making the owners and presidents of these companies aware of that fact, Benefield encourages them to contribute to the Bloomsburg University Foundation and to get involved with its administration.

"We need two things at BU," he concludes. "We need funds, and we need the expertise, counsel and advice of leaders in the field. We need role models."

Successful grad serves as role model

Robert D. Moyer '63 returned to campus in late October as the second Alumni Fellow in Residence. The program was initiated last spring under the sponsorship of the BU Alumni Association to bring outstanding alumni and current students together.

"This is a great opportunity to showcase our alumni who can serve as excellent role models for our students," said Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs.

Moyer is owner, senior board member and vice president of the Shawnee Group Companies, a 20-company conglomerate based in real estate sales and development, travel and health care. He is primarily responsible for supervision of construction and daily operations of Shawnee Village, the largest single-site timeshare and real estate development property in the country.

He is also president and chief operating officer of Shawnee Mountain, the third largest ski area in Pennsylvania with annual revenues of over $5.5 million.

From 1964 to 1976 he became a senior manager with Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co., one of the big eight accounting firms in the country, at Glens Falls, N.Y., and Bethlehem, Pa. He later became a founding partner of Moyer, Sbebelsky & Company, an accounting firm in Shawnee-on-Delaware.

A licensed certified public accountant in Pennsylvania and New York, Moyer is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the Pennsylvania Institute of Certifed Public Accountants. He earned an MBA degree at Bucknell University in 1964.

He maintains a relationship with Bloomsburg University by serving on its advisory board to the College of Business.

In his community he is president of the Shawnee Fire Company and a member of the Monroe County General Authority. He was responsible for bringing Geisinger Medical Center to Shawnee to establish a drug and alcohol treatment center for adolescents and a health care clinic for the community.

Moyer is married to the former Jeannette Hilscher, and they are the parents of three children: Robert Jr., 20, a junior at Penn State; Kristen, 17, a senior at East Stroudsburg High School; and Todd, 14, a freshman at East Stroudsburg High School.

The Alumni Fellows program is supported by the Deans' Fund for Academic Excellence. The selection committee includes Dr. C. Stuart Edwards '41, Dr. Mary Lou John '45, and Dr. Frank Radice '49.

The next Alumni Fellow in Residence will be Dr. Charles Scarantino '64, M.D., Ph.D., who is chairman of the Division of Clinical Radiation Oncology at East Carolina University's School of Medicine. His visit will be in April.

We're sorry mail was delivered late

Director's Note: We received several letters from alumni who told us they did not receive information about Homecoming until the week after the big event. We're sure there are others who got late delivery but did not write to us.

The Alumni Association cannot afford to send a mailing to all alumni at first class rates. Instead, we must mail our materials at the presort, non-profit bulk rates.

The Homecoming letter was mailed from Wilkes-Barre on September 19. Postal officials have told us there is no reason why the mail should not arrive at any point in the country within two weeks, three weeks at the most.

If you did not receive your Homecoming mailing on time, we urge you to file a formal complaint with your local or regional postal officials. The customer relations people tell us they want to know when there are delivery problems.

Next year Homecoming will be held on October 24, and we have already decided to mail the information in mid-August, even though we run the risk of alumni putting it aside and forgetting about it.

It is not too early to make your hotel/motel reservations for next year. Be sure to indicate you are part of the BU group because some are holding blocks of room for us.

We apology to any alumni who were unable to participate in Homecoming because they did not receive the information on time.

Interim Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs Daniel C. Pantaleo made the announcement following a recommendation by an internal search committee. Baird replaces G. Alfred Forsyth, who was appointed provost and vice president for academic affairs at Millersville University.

In accepting the appointment, Baird said "I'm looking forward to the challenge of the deanship and working closely with faculty, students and administrators for a productive year."

Baird came to BU as an assistant professor in 1971. He was promoted to associate professor in 1974 and to full professorship in 1979. He served as department chairperson from 1977 to 1980.

Since 1978 he has been a consulting psychologist with Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. In 1980 he was a visiting research associate at the Institute of Behavorial Science, University of Colorado. Baird has also done consulting and evaluating for Bechtel Power Corp., Lewisburg Federal Penitentiary and Bloomsburg's Family Mental Health Clinic.

A 1966 graduate of the University of Virginia, Baird received both a master's degree (1969) and a doctorate (1971) from North Carolina State University. He is a licensed psychologist in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania and a permanent certified psychologist for the New York education department.

Baird was recognized as an outstanding teacher by the College of Arts and Sciences Student Council for 1985-1986. He is the author of numerous papers and publications in his field.

Cage coach hired

Joe Bressi, formerly head women's basketball coach at Bishop McDevitt High School in Harrisburg, has been named head coach of the women's basketball team at BU. During his 10 years of coaching at Bishop McDevitt, he posted a 237-43 record.

Bressi replaces Sue Hibbs, who resigned to assume full-time teaching duties in the university's department of health and physical education.

While coaching at Bishop McDevitt, Bressi's teams captured seven league titles and five district crowns, not to mention winning four championships in the former South Central Penn League and three titles in the Mid-Penn League's Division I.

More of Bressi's accomplishments with the ball club include capturing three District III Class AA championships and two Class AAA titles in post-season action. His squads appeared in four consecutive PIAA Eastern finals, winning twice and advancing to the state championship contest in those seasons.

Bressi, a native of Kulpmont, is a 1971 graduate of East Stroudsburg University.

Retired nurse dies

Nettie I. Seely, 85, of Berwick, died in July. She retired in 1968 as a nurse in the BU infirmary, where she was employed seven years.

Familiar post

Dr. Charles H. Carlson, assistant vice president for academic affairs, is serving as acting dean of the College of Graduate Studies until July 1987. He is filling the post while Dean Daniel Pantaleo serves as interim provost and vice president for academic affairs.

Carlson joined the music faculty of BU in 1959 and was promoted to full professor in 1962. He was named acting director of graduate studies in 1966 and permanent director in 1968. From 1970 to 1972 he served as dean of graduate studies.

During 1972-1973 he was selected to serve as interim president while a national search was conducted. In 1974 he was once again named dean of graduate school, serving in that role until his appointment as assistant vice president in 1982.

He was also a former chairman of the music department and a former director of the Maroon and Gold and Studio Bands.

Carlson earned his bachelor's degree from San Jose State University and his master's and doctoral degrees from Columbia University.

Admissions director

James P. Christy, former director of admissions at Gannon University, has been named director of admissions at BU, according to Dr. Tom L. Cooper, dean of enrollment management.

Christy assumed his new position in July, replacing Bernard J. Vinovrski, who resigned to accept a similar position at Wilkes College.

One of Christy's prime responsibilities is to supervise the university's student marketing program that includes every facet of student recruitment and selection.

"We're fortunate to have attracted a person with Mr. Christy's strong admissions background," Cooper said. "I am optimistic our admissions program will continue to flourish under his leadership."

After receiving his bachelor's degree in psychology from Wheeling (W. Va.) College in 1974, Christy earned his master's degree in counseling in higher education from Kutztown University in August 1976.

He was appointed admissions director at Gannon in July 1983. For three years prior to that appointment he was director of admissions at Mount Saint Mary College in Newburgh, N.Y. He also had served as an admissions counselor at Temple University and Allentown College of St. Francis de Sales.

Christy was named one of the Outstanding Young Men of America in 1981. In 1983, he was again nominated for the honor. He holds memberships in a number of national, state and regional associations pertaining to his field of admissions and counseling.

Former chair dies

Gertrude E. Flynn, Ed.D., first chairperson of the BU department of nursing, died October 27 in New Hampshire after a prolonged illness.

Flynn was appointed to direct the planning and development of the new bachelor of science in nursing degree program at the start of the 1974-1975 academic year. She chaired the department from 1974 to 1981, during which time the program received full State Board of Nursing approval and graduated its first three classes.

A prominent personality in psychiatric nursing, Flynn received her degrees from Carney Hospital School of Nursing in Boston, the University of Rochester, the University of Buffalo and Boston University.

Prior to her appointment at Bloomsburg, she was a visiting professor at the University of Massachusetts' Division of Nursing. Previously, she was a professor and clinical nursing chief at the University of Rochester School of Nursing and initiated the bachelor and master's degree curricula for psychiatric nursing at SUNY Buffalo where she was a faculty member.

Flynn's dedication to professional nursing education made her a significant pioneer and advocate in this area, according to Dorette Welk, chairperson of the BU nursing department.

Grad joins staff

Susan M. Mitchell, Class of 1982, has been appointed to the new position of assistant director of development at Bloomsburg University. Prior to beginning her duties in August, she was program director of healthworks for Berwick Hospital Corp. She previously served as coordinator of industrial services for more than two years and was a public relations assistant for nearly a year and a half.

In announcing the appointment, Anthony Ianiero, director of development, said, "The experience Ms. Mitchell has had over the past four years has given her a broad background in public relations and development. We'll be able to utilize her many talents to help attain both our short and long range development goals for the university."

A native of New Jersey, Mitchell graduated from BU with a degree in office administration.

Interim provost

Daniel C. Pantaleo, dean of the College of Graduate Studies and Extended Programs at BU, has been named interim provost and vice president for academic affairs for the 1986-1987 academic year.

In making the announcement, President Harry Ausprich said: "Dr. Pantaleo is a fine academician who has served Bloomsburg University with distinction for nearly 10 years. His accomplishments reflect the strong faculty and administrative staff we are fortunate to have at Bloomsburg. His credentials are excellent, and his leadership skills are exceptional. I look forward to working with him in this capacity in the coming year."

Pantaleo came to Bloomsburg in 1977 as an assistant professor of chemistry. In August of 1980 he was appointed dean of the School of Extended Programs. He has been dean of graduate studies and extended programs since 1982. He served as acting associate vice president for academic affairs during the 1984-1985 academic year.

Prior to coming to Bloomsburg, he was a Fulbright lecturer attached to the Science Education Center at the University of Philippines for a six-month period. From 1970 to 1976 he was a chemistry professor at Floyd Junior College in the University System of Georgia at Rome, Ga.

Pantaleo received his bachelor of science degree in chemistry from Manhattan College, New York City, in June 1966. He received his doctorate in chemistry from Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., in 1970. He has completed post-doctoral courses along with research projects at Georgia State University and Louisiana State University.

He has served as an institutional representative to the National University Continuing Education Association and to the Center for the Advancement of Experiential Learning. His professional associations include membership in the Pennsylvania Association of Deans of Continuing Education of which he was vice president in 1981-1982 and president in 1982-1983.

His writings have appeared in publications throughout the state and nation. He has attended and presented papers at a variety of meetings and conferences pertaining to his field.

Under his leadership, the first courses-by-television were offered and a $26,000 state grant was received for a model project in rural adult basic education.

Over the past 10 years, he has made more than 380 presentations to educational, civic and community groups on continuing education, astronomy, chemistry and other subjects.

Swim coach named

David Rider, head swimming and diving coach at Norwin (Pa.) High School for the past eight years, has been named director of aquatics at BU. The 39-year-old former resident of Greensburg replaces Mary Gardner, who resigned the position earlier this year to assume the duties of associate athletic director.

Rider will serve as head coach of the Huskies' swimming and diving programs as well as oversee the daily operations of the university's two pool facilities.

While at Norwin, he served as both the men's and women's coach and established a combined dual meet record of 159-63-3. His 1982 women's squad captured the Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association state championship, and his men's team was the PIAA runner-up in 1984. During Rider's tenure, 61 performers earned All-State honors and 16 competitors gained All-American status.

He also established the Norwin Aqua Club, which boasted several junior and senior national qualifiers and placed performers in the U.S. Olympic trials. The club also holds some national records.

In addition to his coaching responsibilities, Rider taught physical education and computer programming courses at Norwin.

Previously, he taught in the North Allegheny School District, where he developed and administered the community's aquatic program. Rider was the school's men's swimming coach for two seasons from 1977 to 1978, compiling a 20-2 mark while coaching 15 All-State and two All-American swimmers. He was the founder and coach of the Allegheny North Swim Club.

From 1972 to 1974, he was on the staff of the Sewickley YMCA and served with the Peace Corps in Morocco from 1968 to 1971.

Rider received his bachelor's degree in Near Eastern archaeology from the University of Chicago in 1968. He was a member of the school's varsity swimming and water polo teams. He earned a master's degree in sports sciences and his physical education certification at Slippery Rock University in 1973.

He is certified by the American Red Cross in standard first aid and is an instructor in CPR and water safety.

He holds memberships in the American Swimming Coaches Association, National Interscholastic Swimming Coaches Association, Pennsylvania Swimming Officials Association, and is a past president of the Pennsylvania High School Swimming Coaches Association.

He and his wife, Sherry, are parents of three children: Christopher, Andrew and Jessica.

Schwimmer dies

Seymour Schwimmer, a professor of philosophy at BU for 21 years, died in July at Presbyterian University of Pennsylvania Hospital in Philadelphia while awaiting heart tests.

At his death, he was chairing his department's program evaluation.

"He was one of our most caring faculty," said Dr. G. Alfred Forsyth, then dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, who described Schwimmer was "a probing, question-asking person who always wanted to undercover the underlying logic behind things.

He had wide-ranging interests in philosophy, economics and mathematics. He was co-author of "The Economic Almanac 1958" and co-authored scholarly papers in both philosophy and mathematics.

A native of New York City, Schwimmer was born September 13, 1924, and graduated from City College of New York in 1946. He served in the U.S. Army in 1946.

He later worked as a statistician and economist for the National Industrial Conference Board. He was employed for three years at the Cornell University Auto Crash Injury Research Project.

He taught mathematics in the New York City public schools from 1962 to 1966. He received a master's degree from Columbia University in 1965 and did additional graduate work there and at New York University. He was a member of the American Philosophical Association, the Eastern Pennsylvania Philosophical Association and B'nai B'rith.

He is survived by the wife, the former Ruth Fortinsky, to whom he was married 40 years; two sons, Peter of Denver, Colo., and Robert of New York City, and a brother.

Personnel director

J. David Cunningham, formerly of Washington, D.C., has been named director of personnel and labor relations, effective August 1.

Cunningham was director of the academic collective bargaining information service, Labor Studies Center, and associate professor at the University of the District of Columbia.

He gained his personnel experience when he served as assistant to the vice president for administration and finance in the personnel services office at the University of Oregon in Eugene.

He was an assistant professor and chairman of the Division of Social Science and Fine Arts at Central Oregon Community College in Bend, Oregon, and an instructor and chairman of the department of social science and history at Mount Angel College in Oregon.

He is a labor relations consultant and has authored numerous publications and research studies.

Cunningham received his bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of South Dakota and his Ph.D. from the University of Oregon.

Jones in new post

Former BU administrator Larry W. Jones has been named dean of the College of Professional Studies at Morehead State University in Kentucky. Until August 1, he was provost and vice president for academic affairs.

Jones served as interim president of the university after Dr. James McCormick became chancellor of the State System of Higher Education in July 1983 and during a search which led to the appointment of Dr. Harry Ausprich, who took office in July 1985.

Prior to coming to BU in 1981, Jones was academic vice president and dean of faculty at Eastern Montana College, where he was founding dean of the School of Business and Economics.

He also held various administrative and teaching posts at Moorehead State University in Minnesota. As a former fellow of the American Council on Education in academic administration, he served as assistant to the president of Oregon State University. He has been a fellow of the Bush Leadership Foundation and the Mott Foundation.

Jones received bachelor's and master's degrees from North Dakota State University and a doctorate from the University of Oregon. He did post-graduate work at the graduate school of business at Harvard University.

He and his wife, Ellen Barker, a psychology professor at BU, are the parents of two daughters.

Alumni/student mixer

BU students had the opportunity to meet informally with alumni engaged in a variety of professions and occupations on the afternoon before Homecoming. The first annual alumni-student mixer was suggested by Steve Andrejack '74, a member of the Alumni Board of Directors.

Alumni participating in the mixer were Dr. William Stevenson '61, partner in Accountants' Service Bureau of Long Island and director of Financial Planning Services of Long Island; Dr. Frederick R. Maue '76, staff psychiatrist, Geisinger Medical Center; Dr. Alex J. Dubil '66, superintendent, Bloomsburg Area School District; Sue Mitchell '82, assistant director of development, BU; Harold Ackerman '65, assistant professor of English, BU; and Dr. John J. Trathen, director of student activities and Kehr Union, BU.

Several alumni board members also participated: Lois Lawson '33, retired social welfare administrator; Doug McClintock '73, deputy director, Columbia County Redevelopment Authority; and Clayton Hinkel '40, retired faculty member, BU.

Forsyth at MU

G. Alfred Forsyth, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences since 1978, resigned in August to become provost and vice president for academic affairs at Millersville University.

Forsyth has also served on the faculties of the University of Victoria in British Columbia, the University of Colorado, the University of New Hampshire and Purdue University. He has written more than 50 journal articles and conference papers.

A native of Kearney, N.J., he is a 1961 graduate of Dickinson College. He received a master's degree from North Carolina State University in 1963 and a doctorate from Purdue in 1967.

He and his wife, Peggy, are parents of two children.

N.Y. alumni meet

BU alumni living in the Binghamton, N.Y., area attended a dinner at the Vestal Steakhouse on November 7. A luncheon in Oneonta and a dinner in Albany were cancelled, however, because not enough reservations were received. Spring events in both Binghamton and Albany will be planned.

Attending the dinner at Vestal were Henry (Al) and Margo Snyder '70 of Deposit; Sharon and Daniel Wolfe Jr. '68 and '66 of Susquehanna, Pa.; John H. Samsel '62 of Binghamton; William E. Nunn '54 of Oneonta; Donna Dajnowski '78 of Binghamton; and Rhea Strausser Klapprodt '68 of Apalachin.

Planning underway for 150th celebration

Initial preparations for BU's sesquicentennial celebration in 1989 have begun, under the chairmanship of John L. Walker, vice president for institutional advancement.

Any alumni who have historical artifacts or materials they would be willing to donate or loan are asked to contact the Alumni Office.

Alumni interested in serving on the various planning committees are also invited to contact the Alumni Office.

SRO crowds

Three of the four fall offerings of the BU "Celebrity Artist Series" were nearly sold out, and the fourth drew a good audience.

Dr. Ted Shanoski, director of cultural affairs, reported that over 700 season subscriptions formed the nucleus of near-sellouts for the Vienna Choir Boys, "A Chorus Line," and Mark Twain Tonight with Hal Holbrook.

He described Western Opera Company's "La Boheme" as "a good performance, a major production."

Tickets are still available for each of the remaining events:

February 1 — Northeastern Philharmonic with Maureen Forrester;

February 24 — Ohio Ballet;

March 31 — Tokyo String Quartet; and April 8 — An Evening with Roberta Peters.

Individual tickets can be purchased by calling the Kehr Union box office at 389-3900, Monday-Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Mitrani Hall box office will open one hour before performances for ticket sales.

All sales are final. No refunds. Programs are subject to change.

Projects funded

Money for an overhaul of BU's Centennial Gymnasium has been cut from the state capital budget, BU officials have learned, but five smaller projects have been approved.

The gymnasium plans were passed by the Legislature, only to be cut by Gov. Dick Thornburgh, according to Sheryl Bryson, BU director of university relations.

The overhaul of the 50-year-old gymnasium was to cost $3.7 million. It was the largest BU project sent to the governor.

Another request, $7.87 million for a new library facility, was cut by the Legislature before the budget reached the governor's desk.

University officials were "very disappointed" that the two projects weren't included," Bryson said.

Centennial gym and the library project were considered top priorities when BU outlined its capital budget requests earlier this year.

On the brighter side, BU received funding for five smaller projects it had requested:

— $1.44 million for a new boiler that can handle the university's needs in the summer and act as a supplementary unit in the winter.

— $840,000 to complete the second phase of a project to assure access for the handicapped.

— $221,000 for safety improvements to the rigging and electrical system in Mitrani Hall in the Haas Center for the Arts. The system was declared unsafe by a consultant.

— $961,000 to install elevators in Carver Hall, Haas, Navy Hall and the Ben Franklin Building.

— $55,000 for furniture and other equipment in Sutliff Hall.

New trees planted

One hundred twenty new trees have been planted on campus over the past three years, according to Robert Parrish, vice president for administration. The new plantings include those on the library mall, near the softball field and in front of Centennial Gymnasium.

Enrollment gains

Enrollment has increased by 2,500 students this fall at the 14 state-owned universities, according to the State System of Higher Education. There are 85,674 students enrolled in the schools.

BU was one of the big gainers, posting an increase of 318 students over last year's 6,439 students, for a new total of 6,757.

More faculty ok'd

BU President Harry Ausprich has authorized the addition of six faculty for the 1987-1988 academic year, according to Dr. Dan Pantaleo, interim provost and vice president for academic affairs.

The academic deans will meet with the provost soon to determine priorities for the new positions, particularly as they apply to the emphasis areas arising from the analysis currently being done by the BU Strategic Issues Group, Pantaleo said.

Cochrane fills post

Donna J. Cochrane, a full-time temporary assistant professor of business education at BU for three years, has been named assistant dean of extended programs for the 1986-1987 fiscal year.

Cochrane has been co-coordinator of BU's summer conference program for four summers, has had four years' experience in business, and has taught high school and college for 16 years.

She has bachelor's and master's degrees in business education from SUNY Albany and is preparing her dissertation as a doctoral candidate at Temple University in Philadelphia.

She has taught numerous courses and seminars in the fields of sales, business and communications, and she is a member of several professional organizations and associations.

Wanzie with SSHE

Mary A. Wanzie, acting director of personnel at BU from August 1985 to July 31, 1986, has transferred to the Human Resources Division of the State System of Higher Education in Harrisburg.

In her new position as labor relations coordinator, Wanzie will be involved in faculty third-step grievance processing, contract interpretation, and assisting in arbitration.

Wanzie came to BU in 1970 and held stenographer positions in the vice presidential offices for academic affairs and administration before going to the personnel office in May 1974. She subsequently served as a personnel assistant II and personnel analyst I and II. She was previously acting director from August 1982 to June 1983.

Whitmer retires

James R. Whitmer, associate professor of history, is retiring at the end of the current semester. He came to Bloomsburg in September 1964.

VIRGINIA E. CRUIKSHANK '30, who taught in Shamokin and Shikellamy School Districts before her retirement, has had new poems published in a variety of anthologies.

"Our World's Most Cherished Poems" contains her poem, "To My Mother on Her 99th Birthday." The poem is dedicated to her mother who recently turned 100. The anthology has been published by "World of Poetry," Sacramento, California, and was edited by John Campbell, noted Shakespearean performer.

Her poem, "On a Museum Piece," has been published in "The Art of Poetry, A Treasury of Contemporary Verse," edited by John Frost and published by the American Poetry Association.

Another new anthology, "Masterpieces of Modern Verse," also published by The American Poetry Society, contains two of her poems, "No Reward Needed" and "Amaryllis."

"Words of Praise: A Treasury of Religious and Inspirational Poetry," includes her poem, "A Child's Story of the Birth of Jesus."

Last August, Miss Cruikshank received the "Golden Poet of 1985 Award" from the "World of Poetry." She has received 14 Award of Merit certificates and has been named this year as "Golden Poet of 1986." The award will be presented in Orlando, Fla.

Miss Cruikshank has had poems published in several magazines including "Adventure in Poetry Magazine" of Texas, "Keystone Gardner" of Pennsylvania, and "The Lantern" of New York.

She is a member of the Stella Woodall Poetry Society, and the Pennsylvania and National Federation of State Poetry Societies.

Her name will be included in the forthcoming edition of "Who's Who in Poetry."

Representative: Frank J. Golder, 1103 S. Market Street, Bloomsburg, PA 17815 (717) 784-5783

FRANK J. GOLDER '31, long-time educator and coach, was the grand marshal at this year's combined BU and Bloomsburg High School homecoming parade. He retired from Bloomsburg High School in 1975 after 38 years as a teacher, coach and principal.

He is remembered by his college friends as the school's outstanding athlete from 1927 to 1931. After graduation from Bloomsburg, he spent six years teaching and coaching at Hughesville High School while earning a master's degree from Columbia University Teachers College.

In the fall of 1937, he joined the Bloomsburg High School faculty to teach English and civics and coach basketball.

During his 19 years of coaching in the Susquehanna Valley League, his team won 10 championships. For 13 years he was a member of the District IV PIAA board of directors, serving as chairman for the last three years.

He was high school principal for his final 14 years at Bloomsburg.

He was presented a meritorious service award from Caldwell Consistory in 1973 for his contributions to the youth of the Bloomsburg area.

In 1976 he received the BU Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award and a life membership. For a number of years, he served as an alumni representative on the university's planning commission.

Golder is married to the former Myra Ritter.

ORVAL C. PALSGROVE '31, a faithful member of the Philadelphia Chapter of Bloomsburg alumni for nearly 50 years, died October 30 in Christiana, Delaware. Born in Schuylkill Haven, he was a resident of Prospect Park for 34 years.

He was a technical writer for Westinghouse for 30 years, retiring in 1973. He had also taught school in Frackville for 11 years.

Alumni House named for past alumni leader

In recognition of nearly 75 years of loyalty to his Alma Mater and the Alumni Association, the board of directors of the Bloomsburg University Alumni Association voted unanimously at their October meeting to name the Alumni House in honor of Howard Fowler Fenstemaker, Class of 1912.

After graduating from Bloomsburg Normal School, Mr. Fenstemaker received an A.B. degree (magna cum laude) at the University of Michigan in 1918, where he also was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa.

He joined the faculty of Bloomsburg State Teachers College in 1926 and taught foreign languages and other subjects until his retirement in 1963. He completed graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania and received a master's degree from New York University in 1933.

During Mr. Fenstemaker's years on the Bloomsburg faculty, his interest and participation in college activities went far beyond the classroom as he served on countless committees and accepted a multitude of assignments.

The latter included serving as editor of THE ALUMNI QUARTERLY from 1926 to 1971 and as president of the Alumni Association from 1962 to 1973.

He was the recipient of the University's first honorary degree, the doctor of pedagogy, in December 1983. He was also the recipient of the Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award in 1964.

Howard and his wife, the former Mary Edwards, live in Bloomsburg. His son, Howard Jr., a retired Chicago Sun-Times editor, lives in LaGrange Park, Illinois, and his daughter, Dr. Mary Lou John, a faculty emerita of BU, lives in Bloomsburg.

'Sampler' big hit

Thirty-two students from eastern and central Pennsylvania and Delaware attended the third annual College Sampler Program this past summer.

The program gives academically talented black students who have completed their junior year in high school and plan to attend college a one-week sampler of college experiences on the Bloomsburg campus.

Sampler students, invited because of their impressive PSAT scores as juniors in high school, experience a variety of college activities. They take such courses as fine arts experience and intercultural communications that are taught by outstanding professors. They also learn about dormitory life, jobs after graduation, finding the right college, financing their education, human genetics, managing their time, the capitalistic system and more.

Watch those contacts!

Did you know that NCAA legislation states that an in-person off-campus recruiting contact by a representative of an institution's athletic interests (for example, Husky Club) is prohibited.

This legislation is not applicable to:

(1) Off-campus recruiting contacts made by an institution's representative in conjunction with the institution's regular admissions program for all prospective students, including non-athletes, and

(2) The contacts made with a prospective student athlete by an established family, friend or neighbor, it being understoon that such contacts are not made for recruiting purposes and are not initiated by an institution's coaching staff member.

Surviving are his widow, the former Elizabeth Criton, two sons, two daughters, a brother and seven grandchildren.

ESTHER EVANS MCFADDEN WHITENIGHT '34 died recently in Bloomsburg at age 73. She was an elementary school teacher for more than 30 years, retiring in 1973 from the Memorial Elementary School in Bloomsburg, where she taught for 20 years. She also taught in the Catawissa and Lancaster County school districts.

Her first husband, Joseph D. McFadden, died in 1949. She is survived by her husband, M. Paul Whitenight, with whom she would have observed their 11th wedding anniversary in November.

Also surviving are a daughter, a son, two stepdaughters, a step-son, 10 grandchildren, and three sisters.

SARAH JAMES DYMOND '34 has retired after a 52-year teaching career. In recognition of her service, the Exeter Township Elementary School has been named in her honor.

The following article by Minnie MacLellan appeared in the Sunday Independent of Wilkes-Barre:

"I'm so proud to be a teacher. I've loved everyday of the 52 years I've been with the children," said Mrs. Sarah Dymond, sitting at her desk where she has taught first grade in the Exeter Township Elementary School for a large part of those years.

The motherly, soft-spoken woman whose appearance belies her age, reminisced about her half century of teaching. As she talked about her mandated retirement, her eyes filled and the tears spilled over. "They say I have to retire. It's the law. But I don't ever want to stop teaching," she exclaimed.

A native of Kingston, she earned a B.A. degree from College Misericordia and an M.A. degree from Marywood College. She said she had 16 credits toward her doctorate when her husband died, causing her to stop graduate work to assume family business.

Mrs. Dymond began her teaching career in Franklin Township (now part of Dallas) in 1934, where she taught all grades up to eighth. In 1941 she transferred to Exeter Township, where she taught sixth and seventh grades, then second and, finally, her greatest love, first grade.

When the township schools became part of Wyoming Area School District in 1966, she stayed on as first grade teacher and has been there ever since.

"I like all young people, but I especially love the little ones. I like to see them happy, and then you can teach them best," she explained.

Over a 52-year span, Mrs. Dymond has taught three generations, recalling she had grandmothers, mothers and children of many families. When asked about changes over these years, she commented: "Kids don't change. But their environment and additional problems may. If you build their self-esteem and give them lots of hugs and love, they'll respond."

The major changes, she believes, are in the curriculum. "It's much more complicated and involved today. For instance, there are special teachers for art and music. We used to do it all, and when these teachers don't come, I still do."

Over her half century of teaching, Mrs. Dymond estimates some 1600 boys and girls have gone through her classes. "I love them all, and I've watched them become doctors, veterinarians, lawyers, mothers, and I feel so badly when one gets off the beaten track."

That the children who are now adults have appreciated her special treatment is evident in the close contact she has maintained with many. Just last week, she received a letter from a former student residing in Arizona.

In 1972 she was voted the Outstanding Elementary Teacher in America, and in 1981 the Pittston Rotary Club recognized her for "Service Above Self." She is equally proud of her life membership in the PSEA and NEA. In addition, she is active in the WAEA (Wyoming Area Education Association) and the Mt. Zion United Methodist Church. She is also a member of Delta Kappa Gamma, honorary society for women in education.

"I love being a teacher. I love the kids and the people I work with. Everyone has been so good to me."

She added with great pride that the administrators have told her she will always be welcome as a volunteer teacher. She may come to the school when any other teacher needs her. Mrs. Dymond hopes that will be often!

In the meantime, she and her older sister, Harriet James, will live in the large family home, surrounded by a pond and acres and acres of land. She will also supervise Dymond's Store in Harding, a landmark which she and her husband, Donald, established after his return from World War II.

Ending the interview, Mrs. Dymond smiled, rapped her fingers on her desk and said, "That's what I am. That's what I did. That's enough."

BERNARD M. PUFNAK '43 has retired as professor of secretarial science at Greater Hartford Community College. He had served on the faculty since 1968, the second year of the college's existence. Pufnak, who was also chairman of the business department for his first six years at Greater Hartford, formerly taught business education courses at Bulkeley High School in Hartford for 15 years.

While at Bloomsburg, he played on both the basketball and soccer teams and later took these talents into the ranks of amateur basketball, playing with the Sunoco Motor Oils, who were once Pennsylvania Champions with a record of 56 wins against four losses.

He served as a first lieutenant in the U.S. Army's Transportation Corps and saw duty in the South Pacific. He was also recalled to active duty during the Korean Conflict.

Pufnak earned a master's degree in education from the University of Pittsburgh and a certificate of advanced graduate studies from the University of Hartford.

He and his wife, Jeanne, have lived in Newington, Conn., for 33 years. They have three daughters, four grandsons and a granddaughter. Their retirement plans include some traveling and spending winters in Florida and late summers and autumns at their home on Nantucket.

GEORGE E. MILLER '43 reports that he retired two years ago as superintendent of the North Little Rock School District after a tenure of 15 years, longer than any of his predecessors. The following article (excerpted) appeared in a district newsletter:

Previous to assuming the superintendency, Mr. Miller served four years as deputy superintendent after having established what was then a longevity record as principal at Ole Main High School of 12 years. He had served as principal of the Fourth Street Junior High School for four years previous to that, bringing his total service to the North Little Rock Schools to 36 years.

The 15 years of his superintendency mark the period of the district's history in which the greatest strides have been made in emphasis on improvement in the delivery of instruction to the boys and girls of North Little Rock.

Previous administrations were forced to place their emphasis on the struggles to provide minimum programs because of the severe financial restraints with which Arkansas schools have historically contended.

The administration of F. B. Wright, whom Mr. Miller followed as superintendent, marked the era in which the district was able to bring the physical facilities up to a high level of adequacy. Mr. Miller continued the district's physical improvements with the building of the Northeast High School auditorium, one of the outstanding facilities in the nation; the complete renovation of Ole Main High School, and major additions to seven elementary schools.

The coming of special government programs, the disestablishment of the dual school system, and the coming of programs for handicapped students have marked the era of Mr. Miller's term as superintendent.

These factors, coupled with the decline in the birth rate which caused a leveling off and decline of pupil enrollment, has made it possible for the emphasis of his administration to be on the improvement of instruction. This has enabled him to lead in the establishment of what is widely held to be the best instructional program in the State of Arkansas.

Mr. Miller's introduction to North Little Rock dates back to his having been stationed at Camp Robinson in the early spring of 1943. During his stay there, he met his future wife, Miss Genevieve Adams of Little Rock, whom he married in 1946 after his discharge from the Army following service in the South Pacific theater.

The Millers established their home in his home town of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where he was engaged as a high school teacher for a period of two years. They moved to North Little Rock in July of 1948 following his nomination as principal of the Fourth Street Junior High School.

Their daughter, Mrs. Diane Barnes, went through the public schools of North Little Rock and currently serves the district as a library clerk at Indian Hills Elementary School. They have two grandchildren, Jennier and Blair.

Following his retirement, Mr. and Mrs. Miller look forward to spending more time on their houseboat at Mt. Harbor on Lake Ouachita.

Mr. Miller can be justly proud of the outstanding contribution he has made to the improvement of the educational quality on the local, state and national levels. He has done extensive study in the area of improvement of curriculum at the secondary level; has authored a number of articles in the area of secondary curriculum revision, and student discipline. He was a member of the committee on curriculum for the National Association of Secondary School Principals and has appeared on many programs and served on a number of committees in various professional organizations. . . .

He also served on the Teacher Retirement Board from 1972 to 1977. He has been listed in Who's Who in American Education, Who's Who in the Southwest, and Who's Who in Arkansas.

Of all the achievements and accomplishments of Mr. Miller during his service to the North Little Rock School District, no doubt one of the most significant was his leadership in the implementation of a program to bring about a complete balancing of the races in the schools of the district. This was done after it became clear that the federal courts would not accept anything less than a total mathematical balance. Mr. Miller's firm and even-handed leadership in the implementation of an unpopular program that required people to accept the movement of their elementary children from their neighborhood school, resulted in the retention of a system in which there was no wholesale abandonment for private education, and where there was actual improvement in the quality of instruction.

During his superintendency the accreditation by the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools has been extended from the high schools to include all the schools of the district. At the time this was accomplished and for several years afterward, North Little Rock was the only district of its size or larger in the 19 state area to have its schools accredited by the association.

Mr. Miller has always been known and recognized by the people as a person of honesty and integrity who will not hesitate to speak clearly and exactly his stand on issues, inspiring a sense of trust and confidence.

These qualities have caused the district to strive for and reach a level of excellence that is recognized throughout the state and nation.

As a result of the long and slow evolution of the civil rights issue as it pertains to school desegregation, Mr. Miller has spent long and arduous hours as a witness in federal court — these hours having been preceded by countless hours of study, research and preparation, all in the interest of insuring that no loss and much gain would be accomplished out of whatever eventual outcomes the courts might determine.

Mr. Miller has earned the gratitude of the patrons of the North Little Rock School District for untiring service.

SARA MARIE "SALLIE" DOCKEY EDWARDS '44 was named Woman of the Year for 1986 by the Berwick Business and Professional Women's Club.

She was recognized for her outstanding leadership in community activities, achievements in the business field and dedication to Berwick and its citizens.

Serving as president of Berwick Bicentennial, Inc., she was instrumental in making the borough's year-long birthday party a success. Many times over the past two years she attended from eight to 15 meetings a day offering advice and leadership to the various planning committees.

For nearly 20 years, she and her husband, Fred, owned and operated the Studio Shop in Bloomsburg. While in business there, she served as president of the Chamber of Commerce, served two terms as trustee and chaired the tree-planting project in the downtown section.

Sallie was a board member of the local YMCA, a member of the Berwick Woman's Civic Club, and is actively involved with a career in interior decorating. She is also a member of the BU Alumni Board of Directors.

She and Fred are parents of a daughter, Claudia, who lives in Seattle, Washington.

EMORY R. STANLEY '49 has retired as superintendent of the Blue Ridge School District after 16 years of service. He came to Blue Ridge in 1955 and was principal of the elementary school system from 1956 to 1968. In that year he began a two-year assignment as assistant superintendent. He was with Blue Ridge for 31 years.

Before coming to Blue Ridge, Dr. Stanley taught in Dupont, Shamokin, Harford and Gibson. For a ten-year period he was a visiting professor for Penn State, teaching graduate courses in education to teachers in several parts of Pennsylvania.

After earning his degree at Bloomsburg, he took courses at the University of Scranton, NDEA courses at four other universities, and received a master's degree at Penn State in 1955. He was awarded a doctorate in educational administration in 1967.

Throughout his career he has given leadership and service to many community, church, charitable and professional organizations and activities.

Dr. Stanley and his wife, Sarah Louise, were married in 1948. They have two sons: Park and Brett, the latter currently a senior at the University of Pittsburgh.

Before that, he was a staff psychologist at Wernersville State Hospital, Berks County, and a guidance counselor at Twin Valley High School in Chester County.

He earned a master's degree and doctorate from Temple University.

VIRGINIA REIMENSNYDER '50 has retired after 36 years of teaching business education. She joined the faculty of Mifflinburg Area High School in 1954 after teaching four years at Fannett-Metal High School in Path Valley, Pa.

Miss Reimensnyder started Mifflinburg's business club in 1954 and has been its advisor for 32 years. She was an advisor to the Classes of 1962 and 1970, helped with the Tri-Hi-Y, and assisted other school organizations with typing.

JANICE CASTNER '50, a faculty member at Wyoming Valley West High School, has been named as one of six language teachers in Pennsylvania to a committee to draft test specifications for the classical foreign language pedagogy test.

The test, being developed by the Pennsylvania Department of Education, is part of the new teacher certification testing program. The committee will outline the test's contents and will determine which teaching abilities will be evaluated. Prior to printing in spring 1987, the final draft will be reviewed and revised by the committee.

Since 1967, she has been employed as a Latin and English teacher by Wyoming Valley West School District.

Nesters begin retirement; book due

LOIS DATESMAN NESTER and WILMER NESTER '49 retired in June 1986 after teaching a combined total of 67 years. Lois taught business subjects in the Bangor Area Schools for 30 years, while Wilmer was a business teacher in the Pen Argyl Area Schools for 37 years and also served as department chair

Lois and Wilmer were married in Wesley Methodist Church, Bloomsburg, in 1950. They enjoy coming back to Bloomsburg alumni activities and seeing the progress being made at the University.

Their son, J. LAWRENCE NESTER '77, and his wife, Sharon, live in Lewistown, where Larry is a Prudential insurance agent.

The following article (excerpted) was written by Lois Burger, staff writer for the Easton Express:

After a combined total of 67 years in education, Lois and Wilmer Nester of Pen Argyl have corrected their last homework papers and prepared their last classroom assignments. . . .

Their retirement years did not start off quite as they had intended. Their plans for an African safari this summer were cancelled because Mr. Nester suffered a heart attack just two days before the end of the school year.

"He takes care of himself to the nth degree," Mrs. Nester said. "He plays golf, exercises and doesn't smoke. This was the first time he was in the hospital in the 36 years we've been married. The fact that he was in good physical condition probably accounts for his progress in recovering."

After a month or two of rest, Mr. Nester — who his wife claims has been a perfectionist all his life — plans to get back to his favorite hobby of golfing and may pursue his artistic interest and take up painting.

Mrs. Nester hopes to spend more time playing the piano and learning to play the boom-ba, a percussion instrument, just for fun. She also thinks she might enjoy doing part-time office work or teaching a college course.

Both hope to be able to do some volunteer work, travel to new places, and spend time with their son and his wife. They are members of the Grace United Methodist Church of Pen Argyl, where Mr. Nester served on the administrative board for 25 years, 15 of them as chairman. Mrs. Nester served on numerous committees and as president of the Women's Society for years.

They have also been involved in community organizations. He was ways and means chairman for the 1976 Slate Belt Bicentennial observance and treasurer and a trustee for the 1982 Pen Argyl Centennial.

Teaching careers provided them with the opportunity for extensive travel. . . . They have crossed the United States twice and have visited about 30 foreign countries. They consider their visits to Rome, Athens and England as the high points of their foreign travel, primarily because of the historical background of each. Mr. Nester said they never encountered any serious problems. Probably the most tiring trip was the 32-hour return flight from Japan.

The Nesters are looking forward to the publication of Mrs. Nester's book about the life of her mother, the late Hattie Fern Datesman. . . . Mrs. Nester took a one-semester leave from teaching to begin writing the book, and it took her nearly a year to complete it. She said it was harder to do than any course she ever took.

"I felt that I gave enough of my life to education, and I wanted to do something more spiritual," she explained. "The book is titled 'Lady of Faith' and it includes a number of very special letters my mother wrote to our son when he was in college and some brief tributes from local friends."

Mrs. Nester says her mother was a devout Christian who lived a life of miracles and who served her Lord witnessing to others about her faith.

Suffering from a curvature of the spine due to a childhood prank played upon her, Mrs. Datesman was advised by her doctor to forego marriage and childbearing. She did not heed her doctor's advice, but married and later had a child. Her new-found happiness, however, was at the sacrifice of her physical health, and she suffered terribly as the back pain intensified.

One September day while listening to a gospel song on the radio, she was so moved by the beauty of the words that she gave her life to God. So strong was her faith that she could feel her spine straighten out and she was miraculously healed. From that day on she was a witness for Christ.

"My hope is that anyone who reads the book may get some kind of inspiration," said Mrs. Nester.

LOIS AND WILMER with souvenirs from their trips

At Bloomsburg, he played for the championship Huskies football teams of 1948 and 1949. He also played varsity basketball in 1947.

He was a longtime teacher and former head football coach at Henderson High School in West Chester. During his 28 years in the classroom, he taught social studies and driver education. He retired from teaching in 1982.

In recent years, he came out of coaching retirement to help the Henderson football coach with the scout team, sideline communications and game planning.

Prior to teaching in 1954, Glenn worked at Lukens Steel in Coatesville as an estimator in the Lukenwald Division.

He is survived by his wife, the former Freda Zeigler, two daughters, Cynthia Kohlmeyer of Hollidaysburg and Ann Schott of Kennett Square; a son, Steven, at home; four grandchildren; his father, Warren Von Stetten; a sister, Carolyn Edwards of Newark, Del.; and a brother, Wayne of Newark, Del.

The following article about RICHARD F. LAUX '52 was written by Larry Jalowiec, editor of the Northeast Pennsylvania Business Journal, a publication of the Press-Enterprise, Bloomsburg.

The greenest grass is that which you trod upon best sums up Richard Laux's feelings about the Wyoming Valley. And, he says community and local business efforts are deepening the hue.

As chairman and chief executive officer of United Penn Bank and vice chairman of the board of Continental Bancorp, Laux is using his position to communicate how green is his valley.

"It's brought a further level of knowledge about Northeastern Pennsylvania to more people who are in the larger business community," Laux says of his efforts and those of other Wilkes-Barre businessmen.

"There are some very prestigious and influential people who sit on that board (Continental Bancorp) whom I've gotten to know. Many probably had no reason to know anything about Northeastern Pennsylvania. Now they have become more aware of it."

Much the same has happened in connection with Continental's planned acquisition by Midlantic Corp. of New Jersey. He said officers of the latter have already shown great interest in what's happening in Northeast Pennsylvania.

Laux says Midlantic's pending acquisition of Continental and its holdings is "the first announced" marriage between a Pennsylvania bank and one from a neighboring state since the General Assembly approved interstate banking less than three months ago.

The result will be a financial institution worth $16 billion, the 32nd or 34th largest banking organization in the United States. In earnings, it will be about the 20th largest.

For Laux, the marriage means many things, among them the fact that UP will have a larger till for lending. "We have the resources now to lend to the largest businesses that have ever been domiciled in Northeastern Pennsylvania without having to worry that we're not big enough to handle it. . . .

"I have a very positive outlook, extremely positive. I see nothing but improvement."

Specifically, he cites the area's net increase in jobs in the face of fierce foreign competition in steel, textiles and shoes. "The fact that we have a net increase in jobs after all of that is remarkable. I don't think we've given ourselves as much credit as we should for the job we've done."

Laux is also pragmatic about the ups and downs of local employment. "In any kind of economy you're going to have people leaving all the time. People and businesses move to other areas. That should not be viewed as a sign that the area is no good. Any area, no matter how prosperous, has a turnover of people and a turnover of industry. The challenge is to make sure that you have got a net gain, and that's what we've been doing in the past couple years. There's more coming than leaving."

He credits the marketing efforts by the Committee for Economic Growth, but says more can be done by the private citizens by way of attitude.

Executives moving into Northeastern Pennsylvania "say the saddest thing is that so many of the people who live here have never lived anyplace else, and they don't realize they have one of the greatest places to work and live. They don't appreciate it.

"If more people get thinking better about themselves and take a more positive attitude to the people they are talking to — that in itself will perform a miracle in terms of our development here."

EUGENE HUMMEL '53 has retired as a guidance counselor in the McCaskey High School of the School District of Lancaster. He entered the Lancaster school system 33 years ago as a math and science teacher at Edward Hand Junior High School. He became a full-time guidance counselor at McCaskey after spending some time teaching and counseling at Lincoln Junior High.

He earned a master's degree at Temple University.

He will spend time trying to expand his family business, Hummel's Hand Crafts. He also will become even more involved in his church, possibly as a counselor to teenagers and young adults.

MARY GRACE ALMERS WILLIAMS '53 of Southern Pines, N.C., died earlier this year after a 12-year battle with cancer. During her four years at Bloomsburg, she served as organist.

Prior to moving to North Carolina, she taught second grade in several New Jersey schools, including Hamilton Township, West Windsor-Plainsboro, and the Dutch Neck School in Princeton Junction.

Surviving are her husband, Raymond, and a daughter, Susan Bronwyn Williams.

WILLIAM STOUTENBURGH '53, former superintendent of the Allentown School District, has been named professor of education and department chair at Cedar Crest College. He received master's and doctoral degrees at Temple University. He has also been a high school and elementary principal.

DAVID N. NEWBURY '53 of Warren, Michigan, died September 5 after a long illness.

In his will, Dr. Newbury made a bequest of $3,000 to Bloomsburg University "to be used specifically for science library books."

After graduating from Bloomsburg, he earned a master's degree at Bucknell University and his doctorate in education at Wayne State University, Detroit.

At the time of his death, he was deputy superintendent of Hazel Park School District in Michigan. He was also a part-time graduate staff instructor for Eastern Michigan University and Oakland University.

Dr. Newbury was instrumental in the development and implementation of numerous programs throughout Southeastern Michigan. He worked to improve the quality of life for young people.

He was the author of many published articles dealing with educational administration. He co-authored the textbook, "Teacher Negotiations — A Guide to Bargaining Teams."

He served in the Army in Korea and Japan from 1953 to 1955. He was a member of many civic and fraternal organizations.

He is survived by his wife, the former Joan Stephens; a son, Stephen; his mother, Priscilla Newbury; and eight brothers and sisters.

ROBERT R. GOWER '59 of Lexington, Mass., was recently appointed associate professor in the College of Education at the University of Lowell.

A former visiting professor to the University of Lowell and an educational consultant in Lexington, Gower received an M.A. degree in childhood and youth education and a doctor of education degree in curriculum and instruction theory design and practice from Columbia University.

LAMAR FREELAND '59 of Carlisle was featured in an article by Margaret Emery in the August 16 edition of The Sentinel, Carlisle. Excerpts follow:

Lamar Freeland has had the moniker "Peck" for so long even he doesn't know where it comes from.

"That has been a family nickname for as long as I can remember," Freeland says, adding it was hung on his father and grandfather as well.

While his nickname is obscure, his role in Carlisle sports is anything but. He helped to found Carlisle Sports Association 26 years ago and has coached football since then at all levels.

For 20 years, Freeland has run the association's Christmas wrestling tournament. Although never a wrestler himself, he says it's his second favorite sport.

Freeland has also directed Carlisle Teener Baseball League for a decade or more.

His dedication to young people has been recognized by the Kiwanis Club, which gave him its "Dedication to Youth" award in July.

By his own admission, Peck Freeland eats, breathes and sleeps sports. He played center for his football team at Newport High School, but a back injury prevented him from playing at the college level.

After graduating from Bloomsburg, he began a teaching career at the old Lamberton Junior High School. That's also when he embarked on his coaching career. . . .

During his more than quarter century as a coach at the junior varsity level, Freeland says he compiled a record of 124 wins, 73 losses and 13 ties. His most successful year came in 1981, when his team was 11-0. . . .

Last year, Freeland became equipment coordinator for Carlisle Area School District's four football teams. He oversees the inventory of 170 to 200 uniforms, recommends new purchases and sees that repairs are made. . . .

He and his wife, Jill, also a teacher, have three children. Sharon, the youngest, is entering ninth grade. Susan, 19, is a sophomore at James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Va. Scott, 24, is studying at Dickinson School of Law.

Freeland, who teaches person typing and consumer economics to ninth and tenth graders, agrees student athletes should be expected to maintain a certain academic standard — even when it keeps talented players on the bench. . . .

Freeland favors a proposal — endorsed recently by

Penn State football coach Joe Paterno — to eliminate freshmen from taking part in varsity football and other sports. "I think it's a good idea," Freeland says.

Carlisle Sports Association president Paul Malinich praises Freeland as someone quietly laboring behind the scenes and out of the spotlight.

"The man just works all the time. Beneath a sometimes gruff exterior beats a very big heart of gold." . . .

Other projects close to Freeland's heart are the programs the association sells at high school football games and the commemorative "Carlise Bison Matmen" program for wrestlers.

"This is not a big wrestling town," he says, but the matmen deserve some attention. Freeland coordinates the program and does much of the work himself on his home computer.

Since he began the publication in 1977, it's won every year in some category of the U.S. Wrestling News competition. The 1985-1986 edition of "Matmen" garnered the prize for photography.

Freeland says the publicaion, which had a press run of 125 copies last year, contains no advertising and is distributed without cost to the students involved in wrestling.

"It costs a dollar or two" to produce, he says jokingly.

Back for fourth time

The following article (excerpted) about Grace Hower '62 was written by Susan Brook, staff writer for the Press- Enterprise, Bloomsburg.

Grace Hower, 78, says she has to go back to college this fall to keep up with her young grandsons.

Her desire to understand the classrooms where six-year-old B.J. Derr and three-year-old Robby Derr are spending their time has prompted her to enroll in an early childhood education class at Bloomsburg University.

The retired school nurse also has an ulterior motive — to grow along with the school in its evolution from a state normal school into a university.

As 17-year-old Grace Edrie Walter, the Fernville native attended Bloomsburg Normal School for one year in 1926-1927, while waiting to enter Bloomsburg Hospital's nursing school. In 1942, as she prepared to pitch in and teach nursing during the war years, she briefly took a summer course at Bloomsburg State Teachers College.

Twenty years later, when the state teacher training school had become Bloomsburg State College, Hower was a widow who earned a bachelor's degree and became a school nurse.

But she'd missed attending Bloomsburg University, which changed its name when the State System of Higher Education was formed in 1983.

"So I just got to thinking, wouldn't it be nice if my grandsons could say, 'My Grandma made college history,'" she said of her college education that has spanned 60 years.

"There's not much else about me they could brag about!" she joked.

Hower is taking advantage of a program for senior citizens to audit classes without paying tuition. She pays only a $25 enrollment fee to attend William O'Bruba's Thursday evening class in early childhood education.

A sign of the times, her bill at the bookstore — $35 — was more than the cost of the course.

She says she enjoyed studying at Penn State University and College Misericordia as she worked towards her permanent certification as a school nurse.

She was a school nurse in Berwick until her retirement in 1974. "Oh, it was a delightful job. I loved it. . . ."

THOMAS P. KNORR Sr. '67 was one of six Pennsylvania teachers chosen as finalists in a presidential program to honor science and math teachers from across the nation. The following article appeared in The Easton Express.

Meterology is not usually a driving concern of 15-year-olds, but get them involved in predicting whether it will snow enough to get a day off from school and you'll see a sudden and dramatic rise in interest.

That is one example of Bloomsburg native Thomas P. Sr.'s practical approach to teaching earth sciences to ninth graders at Pen Argyl Area Junior High School. It's an approach that has earned him more than the attention of his students. It also has earned him a slot as one of six Pennsylvania teachers chosen as finalists in a presidential program to honor science and math teachers from the across the nation at the White House.

The program is administered by the National Science Foundation and began three years ago in response to a national demand for improvement in math and science teaching.

Teachers are nominated for the honor by students, parents, school administrators and colleagues. Knorr was the only nominee from the Express area.

Knorr's course is called "Earth Sciences for the Real World." In applying for the presidential honor, Knorr was asked to state his role and mission.

"My role as a science teacher is to provide for all students the best possible environment to facilitate the learning of scientific concepts and skills and to apply them to real world situations," he wrote. "My mission is to prepare all students to become responsible informed citizens to interact with the real world."

In one class project, students are required to predict the weather for four days — not an easy or exact science, as anyone who reads or listens to weather reports knows. But Knorr said he finds that students take a greater interest in the topic because he uses current weather maps and information than if he taught hypothetical examples from a book.

During a geology unit, students do a land-site evaluation of a one-acre lot near the school to determine if it is suitable for a house.

"We look at the variables," he said. "We do perc tests, soil content. Then we decide if we want to buy the land and if we would make some changes in the land. This is a valuable exercise because a piece of property may be the most important purchase they make in their lives."

For students who become particulary interested in geology, Knorr conducts extensive field trips. Last year, for example, he did an exchange program with a school district in Pleasantville, N.Y. The experience was valuable, not just because of the different geology of the area, he said. "It was a cultural exchange, too."

In 1981 he took a group out west to study the Grand Teton mountains.

Knorr said his course is very challenging for ninth graders. "I've had students come back and tell me it is practically on the college level," adding that he takes the degree of difficulty into account when grading.

This is not the first time Knorr's course has been honored. In 1983, it was one of 10 junior high school courses in the nation to be cited for excellence by the National Teachers Association.

WILLIAM X. ASH Jr. '67 has been recognized as a registered school business administrator by the Association of School Business Officials International and the Pennsylvania Association of School Business Officials. HENRY and JULIA HYNOSKI McKEE '69 announce

Sudan experience basis of book

The scene is in the Sudan, the largest country in Africa. In a huge, box-like mud hut, a man teaches English to a group of native boys. The desert is blowing through the classroom. Birds and insects are flying around the students, distracting them as they attempt to master the works on their syllabus, including Moby Dick.

"The students were learning under very adverse conditions," said Dr. Randall Fegley, the man who was teacher in that desert setting. Dr. Fegley, a 1977 graduate of Bloomsburg State College, spent four years in the Sudan, teaching English in one of two villages and studying the attempt of the nation, Sudan, to divide itself into nation states, like the United States.

"I went to Sudan because of the teaching jobs available and then became interested in the process the government was starting," said Dr. Fegley. "Since I was there to teach from 1980 to 1984, I was able to follow the process from beginning to end." It was the subject of his doctoral thesis.

After graduating from Bloomsburg in 1977, with a degree in political science and history, Dr. Fegley went to England and attended the University of Leicester. There he received an M.A. in European Political Studies in 1979.

His master's thesis was on the decentralization of government in Belgium, similar to the study he would later do in the Sudan. Dr. Fegley's study in Sudan involved the effect the governmental change was having on the province in which he lived.

"I was in the periphery, and my study followed the effects there," he said.

Dr. Fegley added he was 300 miles from the nearest train, and the province in which he lived, about three times the size of Pennsylvania, had only fourteen miles of paved road. He said that these things had a very detrimental effect on the process the government was attempting.

"There was very little communication between the newly established nation-states," commented Dr. Fegley. "Officials of the Sudan government stationed in the provinces could never expect their pay to arrive on the same day of the week, each week. Because of these travel and communication difficulties, the process of becoming a nation of states did not work the way it was intended."

He added that in addition to monitoring the effects locally, he interviewed members of the national and regional governments.

While in the Sudan, Dr. Fegley lived in one of two mud huts for the entire four years. The huts were box-shaped and each box was a room, bedroom, kitchen, etc. Then there was a mud-brick wall that surrounded the huts, forming a compound.

Living between the Nile River and the Sahara Desert, Dr. Fegley had to adjust to the present conditions.

"Certain things were difficult," said Dr. Fegley. "The physical conditions were easier than I thought. It was very hot, but there was no humidity. There was the danger of dehydration, but physically, the adjustment was easy.

"One of the most difficult adjustments was dealing with the devout Muslim Fundamentalism present. There was no real danger, but everyone, native and foreigner, had to be careful of what was said. For example, if a man had his wife serve you dinner, you could not compliment or thank her for the meal. It would insult the host. I had to ponder every word I said."

After completing his work in the Sudan, Dr. Fegley returned to England and completed his doctoral studies at the University of Reading. He earned a doctor of philosophy degree in politics. Dr. Fegley said political science in Great Britain takes more of a historical and theoretical basis than that studied in the United States.

Currently, Dr. Fegley is completing a book on the African nation of Equatorial Guinea. "As far as my work is concerned, the book is 95% finished," said Dr. Fegley. When asked if he plans to return to Africa, he said he should get back some time in the next three years, to stay on top of what he has studied.

A native of Pennsylvania, he is living for now in Deer Lake.

JOHN HARTZOG '71, a math teacher in the East Penn School District, was chosen by Wescoesville and Lower Macungie schoolparents as "Neighbor of the Week," in recognition of his sponsorship pf trivia contests for school children.

He began a junior high trivia club in 1971 when he joined the East Penn faculty. In 1975, a local group ran a trivia contest with 20 to 25 teams of four players each. The next year John started the Super Bowl of Trivia.

Preparation for Super Bowl X amounted to over 4,000 questions for 31 teams of people ranging in age from approximately 13 to 60.

Using the alias "Doctor Zog," John has done extensive work on both radio and TV, starting around 1978 with WKAP, then moving to WAEB where he had a regular four-hour show once or twice a week in the evenings.

He has also had trivia shows and contests on local television. The finals of Super Bowl IX were taped and shown on cable TV along with his versions of Scholastic Challenge on the junior high level.

He is active in helping the March of Dimes each year to raise money in his area. Although trivia keeps John quite busy when not teaching math, he also acts as a DJ in his spare time for all occasions.

He and his wife, the former Yvonne Blaocco, have two children: John and Heather. The family lives in Tamaqua.

FRANK MOISTER '72 and his wife, Sue, have an expandable family. Besides their own three children - Laura, nine; Lydia, seven; and Benjamin, ten months - they have cared for five others over the course of the last five years, all youngsters with severe physical or emotional handicaps.

Although the experience as a foster family has often "stretched us to the limits of our endurance," Frank says it has also made them grow.

Sue says she had wanted to do foster care even before her marriage. "I had worked in the pediatric unit of Montgomery Hospital for a while. But when I talked to Frank about it, he said absolutely not. He didn't want anything to do with it."

Through the years, Sue tried out the idea on her husband every once in a while, and got pretty much the same response. Each time he said no, she would put the thought back on the shelf to dust off and present once more when the time seemed right.

The years went by, and the Moister family grew. Sue worked as a nurse in the ICU unit of Hahnemann Hospital, and Frank's job as a teacher in the Norristown School District was going well. They had their own home, and in his spare time, Frank tinkered with cars out in the garage and restored antique automobiles. From all appearances, everything seemed right. But appearances can be deceiving.

"I was empty inside, and I kept trying to fill that empty space with cars, or dogs or drinking or hunting. Nothing seemed to work," Frank recalls. Then, although the couple had been attending church for some time, faith suddenly took hold of Frank.

"I became a Christian, and everything changed," he says. "My whole outlook was suddenly different. It's absolutely true. The Lord does change lives."

At that point, Frank began to sense some design to his life, a reason for being, and Sue remembers her husband's religious conversion as the thing that changed her own life.

Always a churchgoer, she had never taken her faith seriously until that happened. "It was kind of funny. I took him to church, and he took me to God," she says now.

Their newfound unity of purpose plunged them into an entirely new lifestyle. In 1981, Sue saw an ad from a foster care agency that handled medically and emotionally handicapped children. With Frank now totally supportive, they applied for a foster child through the now-defunct Philadelphia Society for Services to Children. They were assigned their first baby a week before they were formally accepted. Since then, they have "adopted" four other foster children. . . .

How do you make foster care work? According to the Moisters, father and mother and children must work as a team, all having the same goal. They must budget their time well, and above all, they must be able to give up their charges.

"Many people don't get into it because they can't face the prospect of giving up a child," Frank admits. "It's like losing one of your own. A death in the family."

Luckily, the Moisters' children have all gone to good homes, but that doesn't lessen the trauma of letting go. The family retains ties with many of the little ones they've taken care of.

In the end, says Sue, "It's a great blessing, taking care of other people's children. I don't think I'll ever be tired of it. I wish I could get my fill of them!"

And Frank sees now a reason for their unusually strong courtship that survived time and miles of separation.

"Looking back, I really feel that the Lord had something in mind for us. Let's face it, we don't share that many interests. She loves the indoors, and I love the outdoors. There was a reason, in the long run, for us to get together. Whether foster care was the reason, I don't know.

If it were, then Sue and Frank grew up in the right families themselves. Frank comes from a family of seven children, and Sue is one of four siblings. Their childhoods, thinks Sue, may hold the key to their love of parenting.

She says, "We both had exceptional parents who gave us a tremendous head start."

BEAUTY RESTORED — Exterior renovations of Buckalew Place, home to nine BU presidents since 1903, were completed this fall. Buckalew is the oldest structure on campus and predates even Carver Hall, which was constructed in 1867. The residence, built by Senator Charles R. Buckalew between 1850 and 1860, will be nominated for placement on the Pennsylvania Inventory and the National Register of Historic Places. The renovation included the replacement of the 130-year-old German-style wood siding. The new siding is a reproduction of the original to preserve the architectural integrity of the building. Insulation was also placed in the sidewalls, making the building more energy efficient. Energy costs are expected to drop by as much as 20 percent. The $24,000 project followed interior restoration in 1985, including decorating, painting and carpeting.

ONE OF MANY COLORFUL FLOATS

"America — From Sea to Shining Sea" was the theme of the 59th annual Homecoming at BU on October 17-19.

The weekend activities included a pep rally and fireworks, a colorful parade with Frank Golder '31 as grand marshal, crowning of the Homecoming and freshman sweethearts, a football victory over Mansfield, the annual alumni dinner-dance, and the traditional pops concert.

Other highlights were induction of Bob Rohm '60 into the BU Athletic Hall of Fame, a soccer victory over Cheyney, a pre-game roast beef buffet, class reunions, and awards for best floats, banners, residence halls and office decorations.

Diane O'Conner, a senior special education major from Hughesville, was chairperson of the Homecoming committee.

A highlight of half-time at the football game was the induction of Bob Rohm '60 as the 11th member of the Bloomsburg University Athletic Hall of Fame.

Rohm is one of the few Bloomsburg athletes to be awarded 12 varsity letters during his collegiate career. He excelled in football, wrestling and baseball from 1956 to 1960.

As a member of the football team, he played quarterback, halfback and fullback and served as the Huskies' co-captain in his senior season. That year he was selected as a member of the Pennsylvania Conference all-star unit.

During the winter seasons, Rohm was a major contributor under Coach Russ Houk in establishing Bloomsburg wrestling as a national power. He was a third place finisher in 1957 at the Pennsylvania Conference Championships and recorded a runner-up showing as a sophomore the following season.

In 1959 he won his first conference title, a feat he would duplicate in his final season with the Huskies. In addition, the 157-pounder captured the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics crown as a senior. That year Bloomsburg posted its first-ever undefeated mark (10-0) and won its second straight PC title. Throughout his wrestling career at Bloomsburg, he lost just two dual match bouts and never lost in the Huskies' home facility, Centennial Gymnasium.

The versatile performer also played different positions for the baseball team, including second base and centerfield. He was selected to the all-conference team in his senior year.

Rohm has coached and taught in the Montgomery, Bloomsburg and Central Columbia school districts. He served as head wrestling coach at Montgomery and Bloomsburg in addition to his football duties. In 1974 he moved to Central Columbia as an assistant football coach for two seasons before taking over the head coaching responsibilities. His teams at CCHS have posted a 64-45-6 record and have won one Eastern Conference championship. In 16 seasons, Rohm-coached football units at the three schools compiled combined records of 91-76-7.

NEW SWEETHEART BEGINS REIGN

BU-SMS ALUMNI — Bloomsburg alumni who work for Shared Medical Systems, Inc., in Malvern, met recently to kick off plans for projects which will help to promote the University. They hope to host a group of BU students on a visit to find out more about career opportunities at SMS. They may also help to sponsor a reception for prospective students in that geographical area. Attending the recent dinner were Marcy Williams '86, Karen Yeager '86, John Moffit '84, Meg Roney '84, Barbara Hepp '86, Susan McElwee '86, Mark West '86, Ann Pinamonti '86, Douglas Alan Coup '86, Todd Adams '86, Laurie Kraus '85, Rick Pettine '85, Jeffrey Stello '78, and Tim Cunningham '84. Representing BU were three Husky Ambassadors — Rob Anthony, Frank Shafter and Mike Alban — and Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs.

Army ROTC at BU has become an extension of Bucknell University, which means a full-time staff will be located on campus to serve BU students.

GRAND MARSHAL — Frank Golder '31 (right) was the grand marshal of the 1986 Homecoming Parade. It was appropriate that he preside over the joint parade with Bloomsburg High School because he served as principal there for many years prior to retirement.

National forensics competition held here

Bloomsburg University hosted the National Forensic Association's 16th Annual Championship in Individual Speaking Events. This was the first time this national competition was held in Pennsylvania. There were 1,000 competitors and coaches in attendance from 119 colleges and universities representing 33 states.

A large group of BU's forensic alumni returned to campus to serve as judges for this national event. They included Robert Reevs '77, Dawn Renn '85, Karen Howley, Lynne Miller '83, Delta Roman '82, Sue Stanton '82, Julie Fenstermacher '85, James Davis '77, Tim Talarico '83, Karen Halderman Fox '83, Brian Wildes '82, Keith Peterson '85, John Gasink '86, Eileen McAuliffe Baylor '81, Brenda Rizzo '72, Carole Stauffer '82, Maria DeMatteo '84, Karen Pingar '82, Bonita Hull Lochbaum '82, Marian Wilson '82, Harry A. Strausser III '83, Barbara Wiest '84, Kathleen Steighner '78, Kim Dilliplane '78, Neil Hilkert '76, Rob Novelli '81, Karen Welker DeFrancesco '74, Mike Hokkanen '72, David Gass '84 and Fred Deets (Master's '84.

BU is one of only two Pennsylvania schools to place in the top 100 of the 1985-1986 national collegiate forensics sweepstakes champions. BU placed 74th, and Penn State was listed at 93rd.

The results appeared in the recently published Intercollegiate Forensics Tournament Results Book for 1985-1986, edited by Edward J. Harris Jr. of Suffolk University, Boston.

"We're really pleased with this strong showing, our best ever," said Harry Strine, forensics director at BU. "It put BU in the top nine percent nationally. Our kids work hard with their presentations, and I'm happy for them."

During the 1985-1986 season, 820 institutions of higher education maintained an active forensics program.

Pursel named to BU trustees

Bloomsburg attorney Charles B. "Cardy" Pursel has been appointed to the Bloomsburg University Council of Trustees. He replaces trustee Elton Hunsinger, who died earlier this year.

Pursel

Pursel, a Bloomsburg native, graduated from Haverford College in 1959 and received his law degree from the University of Pennsylvania in 1962.

He has been in general law practice in Bloomsburg since 1963 and is a partner in the law firm of Derr, Pursel and Luschas. He is a member of the American, Pennsylvania and Columbia-Montour Bar Associations.

He served in the U.S. Coast Guard Reserve from 1962 to 1980, attaining the rank of lieutenant. He is a member and lay moderator of the First English Baptist Church, Bloomsburg, and is a director of the Bloomsburg Bank-Columbia Trust Co.

His other memberships include Bloomsburg Tennis Club, Elks Club, local Masonic bodies, BU Husky Club and Bloomsburg Area Chamber of Commerce.

Pursel is married to the former Elizabeth (Betty) Cotner of Danville. They have three children: Leslie Jane, 18; Tom, 16; and Brad, 14.

BU meets goal for Black freshmen

Bloomsburg University was one of only three state-owned universities who met 1985 goals for black freshman enrollment.

The universities are included in a five-year plan begun in 1983 to reverse what the U.S. Office of Civil Rights called a dual system of higher education in Pennsylvania.

Incoming enrollments for 1985 in the State System of Higher Education were below the 1982 level. SSHE enrolled 851 blacks in 1982, 1,025 in 1983, 731 in 1984 and 742 in 1985. The 1985 goal was 979.

"While we have not made as much progress as we intended in some areas, we have made substantial gains in other areas," said James Hunter, commissioner for higher education.

Bloomsburg, Mansfield and Millersville exceeded their goals, the state's annual report to the federal civil rights office said.

California, East Stroudsburg, Lock haven and Shippensburg universities had fewer black freshmen enroll in 1985 than in 1984, the report said.

Clarion, Edinboro, Indiana, Kutztown, Slippery Rock and West Chester also fell short of their goals, but enrolled more black freshmen than in 1984.

Bloomsburg's black enrollment rose from 3.7 percent in 1984 to 4.7 percent in 1985. The goal for 1985 was 4.5 percent.

Overall, black enrollment in the State System of Higher Education, which includes the 14 universities, fell from 5.7 percent in the fall of 1984 to 5.2 percent last fall, the report said.

As part of the plan, the predominantly black Cheyney University is undertaking an "enhancement" program to improve its campus, faculty and administration.

Sam B. Craig Jr., SSHE's director of special projects, said in a statement that the universities are making a strong effort to meet the goals.

"While it's harder for us since the schools are in rural areas, it's not something that has discouraged the state system or that will be used as an excuse. We'll just try harder," said spokesman Scott Shewell.

The schools have sent representatives into black communities seeking students and have run programs to bring prospective students to the campuses.

Black enrollment at the state-related universities, Penn State, Temple, Pittsburgh and Lincoln, has increased from 7.9 percent to 8.3 percent over the same period. Black enrollment at community colleges remained the same at 12.7 percent.

BU develops computer/video teaching system

(The following article was written by Hugh Lessig for the September 12 edition of the Press-Enterprise, Bloomsburg.)

An innovative computer/video system that illustrates its lessons to students could bring national attention to Bloomsburg University.

The system, developed by professors at BU, combines a standard microcomputer with a high-tech laser disc player. The two-screen, desktop system enables students to follow a computer lesson while calling on the disc player to illustrate and sometimes "act out" various parts of the lesson on the second screen.

Professor Hank Bailey, director of the Center for Instructional Systems Development, demonstrated the system to a group of impressed trustees recently.

The courseware is so unique that BU may market it nationally, Bailey said. BU officials were recently invited to present their work at a conference of Ivy League schools.

A group in California is putting together a similar presentation, but "we're going to beat them to the punch," Bailey said.

Here's how the system uses a program in sign language to help a student learn the hand signs for words:

— The student calls up a list of words on the computer. The words may be grouped into categories, such as "food and drink."

— Under the food and drink category, the student selects all words beginning with "B."

— A list of words appears on the computer screen. The student selects "bacon," and gains access to the laser disc player.

— The student's professor appears on an adjacent video screen. In a recorded sequence, he demonstrates the sign for "bacon." The student may replay the sequence as many times as it takes to learn the word.

BAILEY

"You can sit and watch this all day until you understand it," Bailey told the trustees as the program played. "Otherwise, you better catch it the first time in class or you're in trouble."

By using the program, the professor can advance to more complex words while his students spend off-hours learning the signs through repetition on the video system.

In addition to the sign-language course, Bailey has developed courseware for intensive-care nurses at Geisinger Medical Center. Separate course packages for art and chemistry are in the works.

Because BU is a state-owned university, it can't market the system. Edudisc, a company that supplies software for the new system, could maket it under its own company name and pay royalties to BU, Bailey said. In the case of the medical courseware, BU and the Geisinger Medical Management Group could decide to form a separate corporation to market it.

Most software courses are developed by private companies, which can sell their own products, Bailey noted.

Kalyan K. Ghosh, vice provost and associate vice president for academic affairs, said the new system puts BU on "the cutting edge" of the new field.

"We are one of a handful of schools in the country involved in this sort of technology," he said. BU has offered the instructional video program for about one year.

Each set of hardware costs less than $4,000.

Choir sings with symphony

BU's Concert Choir appeared with the famed Pittsburgh Symphony when it performed at Millersville University on October 25.

Directed by Dr. William Decker, the choir sang the choral finale of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Eighteen other Bloomsburg area residents also sang with the choir.

Football crowds up from last year

Bloomsburg University's five 1986 home football games were viewed by 19,603 spectators, according to figures released by the university's department of athletics. That figure exceeds the 16,857 fans who attended the Huskies' five regular-season home contests a year ago.

This season's largest single game home crowd occurred on September 20 during the university's Parents' Day, when 7,313 saw the Bloomsburg-Lock Haven game. That figure came just 170 short of the Robert B. Redman Stadium record of 7,483 set on Homecoming Day in 1985.

On the road, the Huskies, who were the defending Pennsylvania Conference champions, also drew good crowds, playing in front of approximately 21,500 fans on five playing dates.

Bloomsburg will host six home contests during the 1987 season as part of an 11-game slate.

Another first!

For the first time in the history of Bloomsburg University, a student graduated with a degree in interpreting for the deaf.

Elizabeth H. Antram of Lock Haven also became the first person to graduate from a Pennsylvania college or university with a four-year bachelor's degree in this discipline. Two other interpreter training programs in Pennsylvania offer two-year associate of applied science degrees.

BU's interpreter training program curriculum was written and proposed by Samuel B. Silke, the university's curriculum coordinator of education of the hearing impaired. The interpreter training program was approved by the Pennsylvania State Department of Education on June 23, 1983.

One of nine such bachelor's degree programs in the nation, it provides students with training in a variety of interpreting settings.

"The development of the interpreter training program was the result of requests for interpreters made in 1980 by two hearing impaired college students at the university," Silke said.

When efforts to find certified interpreters failed, the program was created to supply hearing impaired individuals in northeastern and central Pennsylvania with interpreters trained to meet their needs.

This fall, the number of hearing impaired college students attending BU will total more than 20. "This increase in our hearing impaired student population is directly due to the provisions of interpretersand other supportive services such as notetakers and tutors," Silke said.

Antram said the interpreter training program provided her with a marketable background in interpretingn. "Valuable information for all aspects of interpreting was providing, including a study of ethics used in a variety of interpreting situations and deaf awareness. I also was given access to an extensive number of workshops on campus in which I was able to meet many interpreters and deaf individuals from across the state and the nation. These were an excellent supplement to the information I was receiving in my course work."

An additional positive aspect of the program, she said, was the on-the-job training she received in the form of interpreting within college classrooms. She has accepted a position at the National Technical Institute for the Deaf in Rochester, N.Y.

Students are admitted into the university's interpreter training program as freshmen and receive two years of sign language training followed by two years of training in interpreting. Students learn manual and oral forms of interpreting, as well as studies in the area of deaf culture emphasizing psychological, social and personal aspects of members of the deaf community. The interpreter training program is in the Department of Communication Disorders and Special Education, Navy Hall

Italy location for art course

"I cannot think of a more pleasant and productive way to spend three weeks in Italy."

That's how Dr. Christine Sperling, BU art faculty member, describes the art history course which will be offered June 10-30, 1987, at a villa in Florence.

Entitled Later European Art, the course will focus on the art of the Renaissance in Florence and the surrounding area. Some orientation lectures will take place at the villa where the students will stay, but most of the class time will be spent viewing, examining and discussing the original works of art.

The students will visit the Uffizi Gallery, where room after room of Renaissance masterpieces by artists like Botticelli and Leonardo da Vinci are arranged in chronological order. They will also visit the Bargello Museum, housed in a 14th century palazzo, whose collection of sculpture includes many works by Michelangelo.

Other highlights will be visits to the Accademia (Michelangelo's David), the museum of San Marco with its works by Fra Angelico, and the churches of Santa Maria Novella and Santa Croce. Day trips will be taken to Pisa, Lucca and Siena.

Dr. Sperling is particularly well-suited to teach this course. Not only did she receive a Ph.D. in Italian Renaissance art from Brown University (1985), but she has also lived in Italy for over two years (one as a Fulbright scholar) and speaks Italian.

"Last summer, the first year of this program, I visited the villa where the students stay," she notes. "I am happy to say that it is beautiful and comfortable, cool and spacious. The villa is situated on a hill overlooking a valley of olive groves and has a garden on one side and an orchard on the other. The meals are tasty and generous. The fruits and vegetables served come from the villa's own garden and orchards."

Dr. Sperling points out that often travelers abroad have negative experiences due to language problems, the fatigue of constant travel, unpleasant accommodations in the center of a hot, crowded city, and the continual problem of where and what to eat. Many travelers dutifully visit artistic monuments knowing they are important but not fully appreciating or understanding these wonderful masterpieces.

"This course, on the other hand, will be an opportunity to learn about Renaissance Florence on site under the best conditions," she notes.

The comprehensive price of the program (from NYC) is $1,660. It includes round-trip air fare, transportation to Florence, shared room and three meals daily at the villa in Florence, matriculation and fee for three college credits and public bus pass in Florence. Participants who wish to remain in Europe after the course is over, may do so for up to a week at no additional cost in air fare.

For more information, contact Dr. Sperling at (717) 389-4187.

Enrollment up

Official enrollment figures for the fall semester show that BU enrollment increased by 318 student over last year's fall enrollment, to 6,757 for this academic year.

A report prepared by the Office of Institutional Planning, Research and Information Management also shows that enrollment climbed by 250 between the fall of 1984 and fall 1985.

Daniel Pantaleo, provost and vice president for academic affairs, said the increased numbers are the result of several factors.

Undergraduate numbers are up because BU planned to admit 50 more freshman than were in last fall's freshman class, retention was better this year due to increased efforts in that area, and an expected drop in retention due to federal regulations for financial aid did not occur.

Graduate student numbers continued to climb this year because of recruitment efforts begun three years ago.

Big crowd at Parents' Weekend

She and her husband, Paul, live in Montrose.

HOLLY LUTZ '76 was featured in a article written by Al Sword for the Lehighton Times-News.

"The Goddess of Calcutta" is beautiful. Her complexion is deep and rich. It is her eyes that draw you. They are big and black bottomless pools that pull like a magnet. You can sense, behing the eyes, the wealth of her heritage: the mystery and intrigue of the centuries that are the history of her exotic birthplace.

Or is it all a trick of the mind? Is it the foreknowledge of who and what she is that creates the illusion of mystery? After all, the Goddess of Calcutta is just six months old.

Her name is Kaly. She was born on January 15, 1986, in Calcutta, India. From that teaming metropolis, she was plucked by the hand of fate to live a life that, by the standards of those left behind, would indeed be the life of a goddess. She will have wealth beyond their imagination. She will have radiant health they can never achieve. She will acquire knowledge that can never be theirs.

Fate has indeed smiled upon Kaly. She will be an American.

Kaly is the adopted daughter of Holly Lutz, who is the adopted daughter of Kenneth and Ruth Lutz of Tamaqua.

Holly is 32, single, a teacher by education and inclination. Children are her love, her business and her avocation. She teaches at the Carbon County Head Start School in Coaldale. For a number of years she has been a host for the fresh air children, who each summer spend a few weeks away from the concrete canyons of New York.

Holly sort of always knew she was adopted. It was no secret in her parents' home. She can trace her first awareness of the fact of her adoption to the age of six or seven.

MEMORIAL PLAQUE — Following the tragic death of Rita Guerrieri '84 in a traffic accident in March, family and friends contributed generously to establish a scholarship fund in her name. Each year interest income from the perpetual fund will be used to present the Rita Guerrieri Scholarship to one of the sisters of Sigma Sigma Sigma. This fall Rita's brother-in-law, Dr. Romaine Johnson '77, and sister, Maryrose, presented a plaque to the sorority on which names of the recipients will be listed. Jeannine Dennison (right), president of the sorority and a close friend of Rita, accepts the plaque.

Being adopted didn't make her different from any other kid. She has never had any question or curiosity about who she is or where she came from. Ken and Ruth are, and always have been, Mom and Dad. Ken and Ruth are proud of their daughter, and Ken will beamingly produce pictures of his brand new granddaughter at the drop of a hint.

To adopt an American-born baby, you have to be married, fairly well-off and of high moral character. Holly has one out of three. She is a member of Saint John United Church of Christ, Tamaqua. She graduated from Tamaqua High School in 1971 and went on to obtain a B.S. degree in elementary education from Bloomsburg University in 1976.

She found work as a substitute teacher in Tamaqua and for the Schuylkill Intermediate Unit and worked at Rest Haven, the Schuylkill County Home for the elderly, until a full-time position opened with the Carbon County Head Start program.

Wanting a child of her own has been another of Holly's dreams. The child who loved younger children grew into the adult who cared for other people's children. Loving and teaching other people's children, however, could not fill Holly's life completely.

It was about three years ago that she decided to do something about the empty place in her own life. Her search led her to the Topton Lutheran Home in Topton, Pa. They, in turn, contacted Catholic Social Services of Philadelphia.

For someone in Holly's circumstances, there were two possible sources for children: South America and India. Most South American countries want people to travel there to be accepted as an adoptive parent. India did not make such requirements.

Catholic Social Services in Philadelphia had an Indian connection in Denver, Colorado. The Rocky Mountain city is the home of the International Mission of Hope, which operates maternity hospitals in India.

With the Topton Lutheran Home working as the agent on this end, the International Mission of Hope working in India, and the Catholic Social Services of Philadelphia serving as a conduit between the other agencies, the long process began.

The function of the Topton Lutheran Home was to "qualify" Holly as a prospective parent.

Holly began what she now laughingly describes as her endless pregnancy.

Like most prospective mothers, Holly had a physical examination. An adoptive parent must be healthy. For Holly the probing didn't stop there. She was given psychological tests, her finances were examined and her home was inspected.

What they found was a healthy, well-adjusted, mature, single woman who lives in a modest home on Railroad Street in Tamaqua. She has a steady, fairly secure job that she likes. She is not, and likely never will be, rich. She is not, and likely never will be, poor. They likely did not have to dig very deeply into Holly Lutz to find the love she has for all children.

They certified her to be a mother, which is a lot more than most mothers get.

Meanwhile, the government of India, in that unique way of all governments, was managing to make the simple complex. There was something about the licensing of the F.M.H. facility that caused a nine-month delay. Then, the government decided that newborns could not leave the country until they were at least three months old.

In due course, Kaly was born on January 15, 1986.

Kaly is Holly's Americanized spelling of Kali. Kali is a goddess of Calcutta, India. The adoption agency recommended that the child have something in her name that would reflect her heritage. So she is Kaly for the goddess of her birthplace, and Ruth for Holly's mother.

Holly received pictures and progress reports. Her endless "pregnancy" wore on, as she waited through the Indian government's mandated delay.

Kaly's "delivery," when it came, was very much like a natural birth. With everything well prepared and all the plans carefully set, at the very last minute everything was dissolved into a state of confusion.

There was a last-minute delay, and then on the morning of June 9, a call from the Topton Home: "Your daughter is at the airport right now."

But when Holly arrived, the baby wasn't there. It was about noon when Holly and Kaly were finally united at the home of Kaly's escort in Quakertown.

"She's so tiny," Holly said as she pressed the little bundle against her heart."

Attention band alumni

Band alumni who would like to be placed on a mailing list to receive information about band alumni functions should send their name, address, telephone number, year of graduation and instrument played to Terry Oxley, Haas Center, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.

This invitation is especially directed to pre-1967 band alumni because no band records exist for the years prior to that date.

New degree

A new degree program, bachelor of science in adult health, has been approved for BU by the board of governors of the State System of Higher Education.

The new degree emphasizes sound studies of the physical, psychological and intellectual potential of the human being at various adult phases. The program has been added to the university's Department of Health, Physical Education and Athletics with very little cost, according to Jerry Medlock, chairman of the department.

All but two of the required courses are already taught on campus, and no additional faculty will be needed for several years, Medlock said. "Students in the program have the opportunity to take a wide spectrum of courses in general education and liberal arts, which will be advantageous in assisting older people," he said.

The need for the new degree program grew from the gradual increase in the mean age of the general population and the great increase in the elderly population, along with the programs that deal with adulthood and aging, Medlock said.

William Sproule, assistant department chair, developed the program at BU. He said potential employers for graduates of the program exist wherever there are identifiable organized programs for the aged. "Career opportunities also exist in the private sector, in the corporate setting and in medical facilities," he said.

Sproule noted that directorships are available for graduates in the areas of community centers, health and spa clubs, nursing homes, YMCA and YWCA, resorts, corporations, hospitals and other facilities dealing with adult human services.

Graduates of the program also have the opportunities to pursue master's degrees in the fields of gerontology or cardiac rehabilitation or to become physician assistants.

Budget raised

The BU administration has increased the operating budget for academic affairs by $200,000 this year, President Harry Ausprich announced during the fall faculty meeting.

Daniel Pantaleo, interim provost and vice president for academic affairs, says $70,500 of the funds will go directly or indirectly to academic departments. Based on recommendations from a meeting of the deans' council, money will go to departments that are presently underfunded, those with special needs, and "areas where we could directly support faculty otherwise supported by the department."

Another $50,000 will go to the library for book purchases. Pantaleo pointed out that the library budget hasn't been increased in four years. These funds, he said, "allow us to make up for inflation over that period and add to holdings in some critical curriculum areas."

Academic microcomputer software will be purchased with another $43,000 to implement computer hardware purchased in recent years, Pantaleo said.

An equipment repair pool of funds amounting to $15,000 will allow departments to free up some funds previously committed to equipment maintenance contracts. This plan is being developed by the deans and will be discussed by department chairpersons, Pantaleo said.

Projects and services needing faculty and program support will receive a total of $10,000 during the year, and the University Scholars Program will get $6,500 from the funds.

Five thousand dollars will go toward a new initiative coming from Pantaleo's office to encourage pairs or groups of faculty to work together to initiate research projects.

Subs attract a crowd!

BU alumni caught the aroma of the Berrigan subs before they actually saw them. From the moment they walked through the front door of the Summit Clubhouse in northern Philadelphia, alumni knew they were in the right place.

The idea for a Berrigan sub party was born out of a joke, according to Doug Hippenstiel '68, director of alumni affairs. "On a number of occasions, alumni attending chapter meetings would ask if I had brought along any Berrigan subs. Finally, we took a couple subs along to chapter meetings as gag door prizes. But the joke was on us; the alumni were willing to trade off the more expensive gifts from the University Store for the subs."

In an effort to give alumni what they wanted, Hippenstiel approached Mike Berrigan with the idea of having a full-fledged Berrigan sub party in the Philly area. Berrigan enthusiastically agreed to pack up the store and head south.

By the time alumni started arriving on Friday evening, July 18, Berrigan and three helpers were ready. With a van load of ingredients, they made the fresh subs to order on the spot!

The tasty drawing card attracted a record number of alumni for a regional get-together. Among those attending (with apologies for misspellings and omissions):

Joe Aceto, Linda Aceto, Bill Angstadt, Betty Berger, Greg Berger, Dave Biotto, Linda Boyle, Barbara Bradley, Tim Brazil, Glenn Bromley, Ron Brown, David Crawford, Barbara Creveling, Mike Creveling,

JoAnne D'Agostino, Ed Dameran, Kevin Davis, Mike Dowling, Jay Dugan, Linda Ennis, Lois Fedele, Mark Fedele, Phil Fenton, Dan Fickes, Deb Finerna, John Finerna, Renee Fite, Bob Fogarty, Laurie Fuehrer, Susan Furniss, Jerry Geiger, B.J. Gledgowd, Joe Gledgowd, Nan Gross,

Joanie Lander, Dietrich Lichtner, Lori Leonard, Maureen McConnell, Kathy McGrath, Shelley McHale, Sherie Marnuda, Karen Manderson, Leslie Mitchell, Ann Molchan, Judy Momarello, Tracy Motyka, Cynthia Mueller, Lee Mueller, Pam Neifert, Andi Pnit, Bill Patt, Charlie Petry, Kim Phillips,

Bonnie Plymette, Dennis Plymette, Bill Prellola, Julio Metz Rank, Toby Rank, Shelly Ressler, Scott Righter, Leo Rodriguez, Bob Roth, Beth Rubincam, Cindy Sanford, Ron Sanford, Lynn Schankweiler, Ed Scheetz, Lori Scheetz, Ruby Schuon, Calvin Scott,

Jerome Sedelmeyer, Joanne Sedelmeyer, Laura Seifert, Roger Sipp, Kelley Smale, Scott Smale, Jeanette Smith, Paul Stratman, Lynne Stuehring, Debbie Sullivan, Joanne Sullivan, Mike Sullivan, Bill Sypawka, Don Taylor, P. K. Thompson, Mati Tiran, Cliff Tillman, Keith White, Karen Wilkins, Sherri Zechman and Carol Zembrzycki

Plans are underway for the Second Annual Berrigan Sub Party in the Philly area, as well as in other geographical areas.

Fall teams post 44 victories

The six fall varsity sports of Bloomsburg University enjoyed much success in the 1986 season, combining for an overall record of 44-21-3.

The men's cross country team completed the 1986 season with a 2-2 dual meet record. The Huskies also competed in several invitationals throughout the season, and finished 11th in the Pennsylvania Conference championships.

The women's cross country team finished 3-1 in dual meets, while also participating in several invitationals. The women finished sixth in the PC championships, led by Brenda Blasel's ninth place individual showing. BU went on to finish 11th in the NCAA Division II Eastern Regional meet.

The field hockey team finished the season with an overall mark of 19-3-2, finishing second in both the PC and the NCAA Division III tournaments. The team was led by senior goaltender Lori Guitson, who registered nine shut-outs and gave up just 23 goals in the Huskies' 24 contests. Carla Shearer and Donna Graupp were the leaders on offense with a combined 29 goals and 17 assists.

Under the direction of first-year head coach Pete Adrian, the football team finished the 1986 campaign with a 7-2-1 record. Led by quarterback Jay DeDea, the offense totalled 3,428 yards on offense, including 2,353 in the air. Tom Martin led the rushing attack, finishing the season with 918 yards. Tight end Kevin Grande became the school's all-time leading receiver with 133 receptions, surpassing Bob Tucker '68, who had 131. Jake Williams, Butch Kahlau and Wes Cook led the team on defense, combining for 272 tackles.

The soccer team registered a six-game winning streak midway through the season to boost them to an 11-8 overall slate. Most of the scoring was produced by a group of freshmen: Jack Milligan (8), Dave Tuscano (7) and Kurt Schmid (4). They combined for 19 of the team's 34 goals. Goaltender Dave Pinkerton recorded 112 saves in the team's 19 games.

The women's tennis team ended the season with a 5-5 dual meet record and finished second in the PC championship tournament. Karen Gubicza and Wendy Wenhold both won singles titles in the PSAC tourney, while Gubicza and Jennifer Sterling captured the number three doubles crown.

Study tour of Russia

BU will offer a study tour of the USSR over the spring break, March 14-23. This tour will include visits to Moscow and Leningrad and will be preceded by lectures on Russian/Soviet history since 1860.

The participants will also be instructed in the Russian language to permit them to do some independent travel in the cities being visited during the tour.

Participants who enroll for the interdisciplinary course (history and politics of the USSR) will receive three credits. The cost of the tour is approximately $1,050.

For further information, contact Tony Sylvester, history department, 717-389-4161.

Over $3,000 raised for David Murphy Memorial/Scholarship Fund

In the 12 months that have passed since the death of BU senior David Murphy, Bloomsburg University students, alumni, faculty and members of the surrounding community have raised over $3,000 for the David Murphy Memorial/Scholarship fund.

The fund was set up in early January to aid the family of Murphy, who died tragically in an automobile accident on Christmas day. After four years of academic success and outstanding service to the universtiy, Murphy died just one semester short of receiving a degree in chemistry.

Donations came in every quantity and from every type of individual and group. A Catholic church in Berwick donated $900 for a tombstone after the pastor read an account of Murphy's death in a local newspaper and used it as the subject for his Sunday sermon, two anonymous individuals contributed because they were touched by Murphy's compassion following a 1984 fire in which one student died; BU's sororities and fraternities responded with a donation of $2,500; and faculty, student groups, administrators and university employees contributed several hundred dollars.

Funeral expenses came to just over $2,000 and all will be covered by the fund. In addition, a scholarship fund set up in Murphy's name has a balance of close to $600.

A plaque commemorating Murphy's memory and service to Bloomsburg University will soon be installed in the Kehr Union.

Several people were instrumental in the success of the David Murphy fund.

Dr. John Trathen, director of Student Activities and the Kehr Union, Michael Sowash, associate director of the Kehr Union and David Hill, comptroller of community activities, helped establish, maintain and monitor the trust fund.

History professor James Sperry helped spread the word among faculty members that money was needed.

Father Dominic Mammarella, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Berwick, delivered a sermon about Murphy on the Sunday after his death, and his parishoners responded with nearly $1,000 to pay for a tombstone and to help defray expenses.

Several other students and faculty members helped raise money for the David Murphy fund.

In the ledger book used to keep track of the fund, there are three pages of thirty entries each filled with contributions of $5, $10, or $20 from individuals.

Their generosity made an emotionally-wrenching time a little easier for the Murphy family and showed that Bloomsburg University takes care of its own when tragedy strikes.

Provost search

Bloomsburg University invites applications and nominations for the position of Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs.

RESPONSIBILITIES: The Provost is the chief academic officer and second-ranking executive officer of the university, reporting directly to the President and assuming the President's duties in his absence. The Provost leads the Deans of the Colleges of Arts and Sciences, Business, Professional Studies, Graduate and Extended Programs and their faculties to attain the academic missions of the university. The Provost plans and coordinates academic programs, assembles and administers the academic budget, coordinates academic policies and planning, and plays an active role in faculty recruitment, retention and development.

QUALIFICATIONS: The candidate must have an earned doctorate, preferably in an academic discipline, from an accredited institution, documented evidence of outstanding teaching and scholarly and professional achievement commensurate with the rank of full professor, demonstrated effective interpersonal skills, creative academic leadership, a record of progressive academic administration, commitment to faculty and student participation in academic governance and to affirmative action, and ability to articulate the mission and needs of the university to its constituencies.

THE UNIVERSITY: Bloomsburg is one of fourteen institutions in the Pennsylvania State System of Higher Education and has an enrollment of approximately 6,700 undergraduate and graduate students. It is a comprehensive university with approximately 100 programs of study, a faculty of 335 covered by a collective bargaining agreement, and an annual budget of $41 million.

The Town of Bloomsburg has a population of approximately 11,000 and is located in the Susquehanna River Valley in Northeastern Pennsylvania, with easy access to major East Coast metropolitan areas.

STARTING DATE: July 1, 1987, or as mutually determined.

SALARY: Competitive and commensurate with the applicant's qualifications.

Nominations are encouraged; however, application including a letter of application, academic vita, all official transcripts, and three letters of reference, must be postmarked no later than January 31, 1987 to be considered by the committee.

Address to Mr. Irvin Wright, Chairperson, Search and Screen Committee, Carver Hall, Bloomsburg University, Bloomsburg, PA 17815.
